A Singular Case Comes to the Surface in Nebraska.

MINING INTELLIGENCE.

The Striking Trainmen in Colorado.—The Test Oath Matter in Idaho.—A Newspaper Seized for Debt.

Operations on the Josephine mine at Bingham, have been discontinued for the winter.

The trainmen's strike on the D. & R. G. railroad, in Colorado, is still going on, with no prospect of a settlement at present.

Samples of ore from the Palantic's property, near Lexington were received in Salt Lake yesterday. The ore is free gold. The shaft is down eighteen feet only.

The Live Stock Journal, published at Cheyenne, Wyoming, was seized yesterday on execution of a judgment for $1100 obtained by the St. Louis type foundry.

At Boise, Idaho, yesterday the judges of the state supreme court had a private meeting and consulted together in reference to the test oath case argued last week at Lewiston. Their decision is expected almost immediately.

Yesterday news was received in Salt Lake to the effect that Arthur Stayner and other gentlemen of the city had purchased, for the sum of $10,000, the Star group of mines in Wood River district, Idaho. The property is said to be extremely rich, and that a vast quantity of gold ore has already been extracted thereon.

J. A. Van Pelt, who went out to inspect the strike in the Mexican mines, has returned. He says they are in the new four feet, and have not yet encountered the hanging wall. The ore has not yet been assayed but he thinks it will pay to ship. The appearance of the property is really encouraged, and are confident that they will be richly repaid for their pluck and enterprise.

Within the last week two train loads of sheep and cattle have been shipped to eastern points and Salt Lake from the Bingham district. Every week from two to five carloads of fine cattle are shipped in the Salt Lake Commercial company. They have agents in these parts who are buying up hundreds of head of good cattle for the Salt Lake market.—Tribune.

The Idaho state board of pardons has extended clemency to Henry Rees and he was released from this county in 1891, for ten years, for murder in the second degree. Rees is over 60 years of age. Many people have believed that he was not guilty of the crime for which he was convicted. He was a fisherman living on an island in the Snake river near Payette. One night in October, 1882, he went into Sloan & Miller's saloon, near the ferry in Payette, Idaho, where a large and disorderly crowd was assembled, and there he met a man named Henry Lorenzen, who demanded a sum of money which he claimed Rees owed him. Rees refused to settle the claim in the saloon, whereupon Lorenzen threw a fire upon the floor and gave him a severe beating. As soon as he could Rees arose and started to leave for home; but Lorenzen pulled him into the saloon and again hammered him. Bystanders dragged Lorenzen away from the old man, and Sloan & Sloan Stores stepped between them. A second later Lorenzen was fatally shot, and it was claimed that Rees committed the bloody act. He was arrested and convicted, though many persons believed that the crime was saddled upon him in order to secure him out of a valuable fishery which he held by squatter's right. Several of the men who served in jurors at the trial petitioned for Rees's pardon.

Prof. J. M. Navoni, the talented musician who came to Boise, Idaho, from Battle Mountain, a few months ago, is wanted by many creditors. He cannot be found, however, and the people to whom he is indebted are grieving. Navoni, who is a remarkably accomplished violinist, was a bright and shining light in local musical circles, and he made considerable money during his stay in Boise. He organized a good orchestra and played regularly at the Natorium and in other first class resorts. About a month ago he organized a concert company, with D. J. Williams as manager, and commenced a tour of the smaller towns of Ada and adjoining counties. The troupe was composed of Prof. Navoni, Nellie Weiser, W. J. Fitzpatrick and W. S. Dager, and as their entertainments were unusually good, the best people were happy. The company went over to Owyhee county during the week just ended, and met with a flattering reception. At Silver City the professor flushed with success, commenced to gamble, the results being empty pockets. He left for greener fields as speedily as he could. The Navoni troupe traveled about in a rig hired from the City stables, and for the hire of the outfit the professor owes about $150 in cold cash. Besides this, the stableman had to pay for the feed the horses consumed in Silver City, and had to send a man to Nampa to drive the rig to Boise. The professor's debts will aggregate about $500.—Idaho Daily Statesman, Oct. 10th.

A new action has been begun by Eva E. Lewis against the estate of Elder Jason G. Miller, a well-known character of Lincoln, Nebraska, and the owner of a large amount of property. The real name of Eva E. Lewis, until she was three years of age, was Eliza Jane Covenger, and, as nearly as can be found out, she was born about December 14, 1864, in Illinois. At a very early age she was surrendered by her father to the Home for Friendless Children at Chicago. In April, 1870, Elder Miller visited the home and saw a fancy in the little dark-eyed girl. He was childless and said he wished to adopt her, and proper representations was allowed to take her. The Elder's desire was that when the girl grew up she should become a missionary. However, she met E. O. Lewis, loved him after the fashion of young girls, and when requested by Elder Miller to give him up and go to convert the heathen of the orient she did not feel that filial obedience required such a sacrifice and instead she married the man of her choice. Elder Miller died a year ago, leaving an estate valued at $250,000. He had made no provision for Mrs. Lewis. A suit was begun last spring but was withdrawn on representations that Miller had never adopted the foundling, though giving her his name and treating her in every way as his daughter. Detectives were put to work in Chicago, and the positive proof they are alleged to have secured from the home bears, showing that Miller contracted to adopt Eliza Jane Covenger and give her the name of Eva E. Miller, is the cause for the suit now action.—Ex.

Protection to Art.

They were over here, a classic couple as a honeymoon trip to the metropolis as they stood in the shade of a tree in city hall park.

Having seen its value and consulting a book of photographic views, he said: "This here's the city hall, Clara, and this splendid building opposite is the general postoffice. Gosh! but that old city hall looks kinder more inside that grand pile of granite. That's what I call fine and imposing."

"Oyster stew, young man," said a rubbly faced, white whiskered gentleman who stood beside him fanning himself with an straw hat, "you must take me for beauty. The city hall is an almost perfect sample of its type of architecture, while the postoffice is a composite monstrosity, and not the only one in the neighborhood. Why, sir, look merely at those wonky pillars that run all the way round from the sidewalk to the first story—they alone would spoil any building. They remind me of one of those red dogs with turtle sticking out here and there on legs and tail. Pshaw! You haven't a barn at home that isn't prettier."

Then the old gentleman put on his hat, hunted a cab unfortunate and stalked off, while the young man and woman from the country gazed after him and drew long breaths.—New York Herald.

Dancing Fairy in the Sun.

Old Orchard has witnessed the introduction of many a novelty to surf bathing, but the very latest thing was sprung on the unsuspecting public Thursday by a party of the Imperial's guests. About fifty ladies and gentlemen from that hotel, among them several theatrical people, marched down to the beach about 11 o'clock and proceeded to the Mammoth bathing house where they amused themselves in surf diving and fun. Then they went out into cloud water, long and let a rapid dance and wood through all the changes of a gavotte.

Next a waltz was introduced, and over a gaily and a schottische all taking part and going through the evolutions just as if they were on a ballroom. The sport was kept up in the water and on the smooth beach for half an hour, during which time a large number of spectators were gathered on shore to watch proceedings.—Portland Herald.

Changed His Dwelling Place.

"I've given my landlady warning that I'm going to move," remarked Scraggs to his friend Biggs.

"For what reason?" inquired Biggs.

"Oh, I'm tired of hearing of other people's troubles. I'm going to find a place where they don't have any trouble."

"Why, you can't get there immediately with me if you do."

"Why, where do you expect that I'm going?"

"To heaven, I suppose. I never heard of any other place where they don't have any trouble."—Detroit Free Press.

A Novel Escape.

A Mr. O——, who had been ill some time, fell into what was thought to be a coma. The medical attendant, however, had suspicions in his own mind, which he did not care to communicate to the man's family for fear of arousing false hopes. He therefore put off his sanction to the usual form day to day, much to the indignation of the supposed dead man's mother. On the fifth day, however, the doctor had the gratification of seeing his patient revive. Mr. O——, some time afterward, had a recurrence of the malady, this time lasting seven days.—Yankee Blade.

Importations of Shellac.

The amount of shellac that was imported into Boston for the year ending June 30, 1890, was 17,354 pounds, about thirty-five tons, and was worth $14,201. The total amount imported into the United States for the year ending June 30, 1890, was 4,736,753 pounds, of the value of $801,145. For the year of 1891 the number of pounds imported into the United States was 5,500,874.—Boston Globe.

An Englishman at the Hotel Athenaeus asked a bell boy to bring him some good gum. A stock of the boy's favorite article was procured, the boy assuring our English friend that it was unsurpassed. To the bell boy's astonishment, the purchaser began to rub a piece of manuscript with the gum. After a few minutes of rain rubbing he asked how we use gum in America. It took some time to convince him that in America an eraser is not "a gum."—Chautauqua Herald.
