A TOUGH TRIO.

Three Jail Birds Arraigned on Two Charges of Burglary.—They "Waive Examination."

James Shea, William Miller and R. Marbury, the trio of tough customers arrested by Captain Donovan a few days ago on suspicion of being the individuals who burglarized the Spry and Empire tailoring establishments a short time ago, were arraigned before Justice Goss on both counts this morning.

Assistant County Attorney Eichner represented the people. The defendants were without counsel, and when the first complaint was read to them they exchanged in concert and in a decidedly braggadocio and we-don't-care kind of a manner: "We waive examination."

"Well, we don't waive examination in ladies' courts in this Territory," promptly interposed Mr. Eichner.

"Well, we do," emphatically responded Shea.

"What are your pleas—guilty or not guilty?" asked the court.

"We waive examination as we told before, sir," replied Shea.

Mr. Eichner (turning to Clerk Glenn)—"Let the records show that the defendants enter pleas of not guilty."

The case then went over until this afternoon.

The following resolutions of respect passed by the Forty-sixth quorum of Seventies, at Payson, in memory of Elder Adolf Haag, have just been received:

Resolved, That we deeply regret the sudden removal of such a worthy man from our midst, as it leaves a vacancy not easily to be filled, yet in the hearts of his friends and acquaintances.

TOTALLY DESTROYED.

A Store and Dancing Hall Burned to the Ground Near Liberty Park, This Morning.

A fire alarm was sent in to the main station at 2:15 this morning. The brigade rolled out on good time and made a quick run to the scene of the blaze, which was at the corner of Sixth East and Ninth South streets near Liberty Park, in a one-story frame structure about 30x40 feet in size. The building was the property of a man named McElhan, and was used as a dancing hall and confectionery store. The fire had progressed so far before the department was able to reach it that the building with its contents was doomed. It was a total loss and will reach from $200 to $300. There was no insurance.

"It is absolutely impossible for the department to save any building from being destroyed by fire," said a well-known citizen today, "that is so remote from the fire station." The total destruction of this store and dancing hall should be a most convincing argument in favor of the branch fire houses," said the same gentleman, who is strongly in favor of the proposition.

Amusement Notes.

The performance at the Theater on Saturday by Patti Ross and her company was thoroughly enjoyed by a large audience. The singing and dancing of the little favorite were in her usual original style and the various numbers of the company did some excellent work. Particularly is this true of Joe Cawthorne and Edgar Halstead.

SCHILLING'S MINSTRELS.

Charles L. Schilling's minstrels appear at the Theater on Tuesday and Wednesday, this week. Their performances are highly spoken of by the press.

STILL ALARM.

The Theater will probably be packed Thursday night, to welcome the return of Joseph Arthur's "Still Alarm," when it will begin a season of three nights and a Saturday matinee. The play is known to Salt Lake theater goers. The cast is as strong as when seen here on its first visit. The quartette is fine, and the same pretty span of horses, and the real fire engine are still part of the entertainment. With "Still Alarm" comes little Tuesday, whose specialty has already made her famous.

PROVO LETTER.

Non-Partizanship in School Elections.—Educational and Other Notes.

Special Correspondence of the News.

PROVO, Nov. 21.—The Democratic and Republican city central committees respectively held sessions on Saturday night, and subsequently met in joint session for the consideration of the school election on December 7th. It was decided to make the election non-partisan. Each of the five wards of the city will hold a primary meeting on the evening of December 2nd for the purpose of nominating a citizen's candidate for the board of education. The action of the two committees meets with general approval.

S. S. Jones has returned from a very pleasant Sunday school mission to Cache valley. He reports having visited several of the Sunday schools of Logan and the southern part of the valley, finding them fully abreast of the times. He will leave again in a few days to further prosecute the work, when he expects to be joined by Brother Lee of Bear Lake valley.

The wife of Rev. Mr. Crowther, the Methodist parson, is lying dangerously ill. It is feared that it will be but a few days at farthest before her life will have ebbed away. She has been a great sufferer.

The B. Y. A. musicale on Saturday evening was a very pleasing affair. It was well patronized and the audience showed its appreciation of the manner in which the programme was carried out by unstinted applause.

The cadets of the B. Y. Academy came out in full dress uniform on Saturday last. It consists of a navy blue coat and vest and cap to match and light blue pants. They attracted considerable attention while marching, counter-marching and maneuvering on the streets under the command of their side young officer, Lieutenant Musser. They have already achieved a signal victory in capturing the hearts of many of our young ladies.

Returned Missionary.

Elder John Pearson of Huntington, Emery county, called at the NEWS office this morning having just returned from a mission to the Southern states, for which part of the world he left his home on November 1, 1890. Elder Pearson labored in Alabama and in western Florida during his absence from this Territory. He made many friends, enjoyed the best of health and returns in good spirits. He will leave for his home on an evening train.

A Condemned Building.

Fire Chief Stanton this morning condemned a newly erected frame building at the rear of the Salisbury house near Grant Brothers' stables on West Temple street. The structure was to have been used for a tank house and was about ten feet wide and twenty feet in length. It will be torn down immediately and replaced by a brick building.

DEATH OF SUSAN S. YOUNG.

She Passes Quietly to Rest Yesterday Afternoon.

Sister Susan Snively Young, relict of the late President Brigham Young died at her residence—The Lion House, Salt Lake City—at 1:30 p. m., November 20th, 1892.

Deceased was the daughter of Henry and Mary Snively, and was born in Shenandoah county, Virginia, October 30th, 1815. She was consequently in her 78th year at the time of her death. The family moved from Virginia to Bedford county, Penn., where they resided when the Elders of the Church first visited that state. The Snivelys received the Gospel under the ministration of Erastus Snow, who was then in his youth. Soon after embracing the Gospel they left Pennsylvania for Missouri, where they expected to join the main body of the Saints. The latter were, however, driven out of Missouri about that time and soon after established the city of Nauvoo. The Snively family located for some time at Springfield, Illinois, and subsequently removed to Nauvoo, at which place, in the year 1844, the deceased was married to President Young. She, in common with her co-religionists, suffered the hardships incident to the expulsion from Nauvoo, and remained at Winter Quarters until 1848, when she crossed the plains and entered Salt Lake valley.

Sister Young, or as familiarly called by her acquaintances, Aunt Susan, was one of the most amiable of her sex, and was an ideal Latter-day Saint. We do not believe that she ever wilfully neglected the performance of a duty pertaining to her religion, which was always dearer to her than life. One of her leading characteristics was gratitude for all benefits bestowed on her, while the gentleness of her disposition was phenomenal. The physician who attended her in her last illness remarked recently that she was one of the "sweetest creatures" he ever waited upon in the course of his professional career. Winning amiability was one of her conspicuous traits, she was also remarkable for firm and independence of character, which were exhibited throughout her life to the latest moment. She contemplated the approach of death with the utmost composure, and stated not long since that she would soon depart. "I am going to see the folks and I have lots to tell them." Last Friday she suddenly held out her hands, while her face was illuminated with a heavenly smile as if she were in an ecstasy of joy; then she changed and wept, conveying the impression that the veil of eternity had been lifted to give her a momentary glimpse of her future glorious home and then closed down again.

The end of this good woman was peace. She has gone to join her husband and other loved ones in the Paradise of God, there to await the sounding of the trump of the first resurrection, when the noble spirit will be re-united with the immortalized body and the redemption be made complete.

The funeral service will be held tomorrow (Tuesday) at 11 a. m., at the Lion House. Friends of the family are invited.

Within Our Gates.

Sheriff Belnap, "one of the brave, the immortal few who were not born to die" in the recent election in Weber county, came down from the Junction burg today.

Hon. Aquilla Nebeker, the cattle king and Democratic czar of Box Elder county, after a few days sojourn here goes south on a lengthy trip tomorrow.

Thomas Slight, the rising young artist who contributed to our art circles his beautiful picture of Lake Blanche, has another fully as good entitled "The Mouth of Echo Canyon." It is now on exhibition at Margetts Brothers and will well repay the trouble of going to see it.

When the fame of Artemus Ward had waned and that of Petroleum V. Nasby, Josh Billings and Mark Twain was achieving recognition, Utah contributed a humorist to the field who would have rivaled any of them had he made a business of it instead of adopting a pastoral, pietistical life on the banks of the Bear Lake. His name was, and is yet so far as known, Joe C. Rich, and he dropped down on us today. "Joe" has lost none of his unctious proclivities by reason of the years that have come and gone, and he always brings a memory freighted with the sacred recollection of days long passed to meet with a welcome by lang syne friends.

E. R. Simmons, aged 25, a native of England and car inspector by occupation, who came from Texas six years ago to California, was sent to the Napa asylum this morning by Judge Shaw. The man's insanity is hereditary. His father, mother and aunt have all gone insane, and two of them committed suicide. Simmons has one child in an insane asylum. He thinks he is in hell and tried to commit suicide by drinking varnish. He is afflicted with melancholia and has indigestion. He has been taking treatment from the Christian scientists.—Los Angeles Express.

WINTER RATIONS FOR EGGS.

Director Gilbert, of the Canadian Station at Ottawa, Makes a Report.

Notwithstanding all that has been written on the subject of winter laying, the query "How to obtain eggs in winter" is of frequent occurrence. With a view to satisfactorily answering the problem, Director A. G. Gilbert, of the Ottawa station, makes a report as follows: Answer can best be given by describing the rations fed last winter and the reasons for so doing. A hot morning ration fed during the winter was composed of:

	Female Chickens.
Bran	2
Middlings	2
Ground oats	1
Clover hay, steamed and mixed in these quantities
Milk, very small quantity.
Clover meal and fine ground winter wheat, about three handfuls.

The whole was mixed with boiling water. Boiled potatoes and turnips were occasionally substituted for the clover hay, for variety in diet is beneficial. The hens did not eat the scalded clover hay when exposed to them by itself, but readily did so when mixed in the soft food.

The results aimed at in running the hens were: 1. Vigorous health, as evidenced by the production of eggs. 2. By supplying hens regularly to self peas to prevent the laying of eggs with soft shells. 3. By providing too generous a diet to prevent the hens from becoming so fat as to lay eggs with soft shells. 4. To assist by the omission of cayenne pepper or other condiments a slightly stimulating ration, often the cause of eggs being laid with soft shells or with not any shells. 5. To prevent egg eating, which follows the laying of eggs with soft shells. 6. By the regular feeding of meat and keeping the fowls in active exercise to prevent feather eating, generally caused by the retention of both. 7. To prevent the acquiring of the bad practices named, the cure being very difficult. 8. To furnish the hens as nearly as possible with what they can pick up for themselves when running at large outside, such as insects in the shape of animal meat, grit in all directions in the shape of gravel and broken oyster shells, lime in the shape of ground oyster shells, green stuff in the shape of clover hay (steamed) and shaved mixed in soft food, carrots, cabbage, turnips, etc.

At noon, when grain was given, oats were fed in small quantity. For the afternoon ration wheat was given, with barley occasionally mixed in equal quantity. Vegetables, such as carrots, mangels and turnips, were kept always on the floor of the pens. Very little cabbage was fed during the winter. The rations, as aforementioned, were fed to the following stock in the main building:

	Pullets.	Hens.
Plymouth Rocks	41	21
Brahmas	[illegible]	16
Leghorns	[illegible]	4
Buff Cochins	[illegible]	[illegible]
White Leghorns	10	4
Wyandottes	7	4
Andalusians	8	5

Among this stock will be noticed numerous hens, some of them old hens, so called because they were over two years and kept for breeders and sitters during the coming season. As there was no alternative, they were placed with the pullets, a practice to be avoided when possible, for the reason that the ration which would go to eggs in the pullets would likely make the hens too fat to lay. The effect in eggs of the rations on the pullets and hens is given as follows:

	Eggs. Dec.	Jan.	Feb.
1 Plymouth Rock pullets	[illegible]	[illegible]	[illegible]
1 Plymouth Rock hens	[illegible]	[illegible]	[illegible]
2 White Leghorn pullets	[illegible]	[illegible]	[illegible]
2 White Leghorn hens	[illegible]	[illegible]	[illegible]
2 Wyandotte pullets	[illegible]	[illegible]	[illegible]
2 Wyandotte hens	[illegible]	[illegible]	[illegible]
1 Buff Cochin hens	[illegible]	[illegible]	[illegible]
1 Langshan hens	[illegible]	[illegible]	[illegible]
1 Brahma hens	[illegible]	[illegible]	[illegible]
1 Houdan hens	[illegible]	[illegible]	[illegible]

It may be said that the chewing is not a good one for the summer of stock, but it must be borne in mind that the feed for was only experimental. The result, however, is striking proof of the great value of pullets over old hens in winter when kept under the same conditions as to housing, care and feeding. The conclusions to be arrived at from the experiments are: 1. That no hen should be kept over two years. 2. No soft shelled eggs were laid by the pullets, showing that they are not so likely to lay such eggs as the old stock; that the daily mixing of coarse sand, fine gravel and sifted oyster shells in small quantities has a preventive tendency. 3. That no eggs or feathers have been eaten to date, with a regular supply of gravel and meat mixed in soft food is to be recommended. 4. A small quantity of salt was taken daily in the hot morning ration, but as it revealed tenderness no salt was given up. 5. The feeding of vegetables in generous quantity and the effect of keeping the hens in excellent condition. 6. Scattering the grain food among the chaff and straw always on the floors of pens keeps the fowls active. This grain food should not be fed in large quantity.

When Buying Fertilizers.

In a bulletin from the Rhode Island station the following are continued to bear in mind that the commercial valuation is not the only thing to be taken into consideration in buying a fertilizer. To illustrate: Suppose that the crop and soil demand largely phosphoric acid and potash and little nitrogen; then a fertilizer with a high percentage of nitrogen, but low in the other elements, would be of little value to the farmer, however high its commercial value might be. The question is not how many pounds of fertilizer for the money, but how much potash, phosphoric acid and nitrogen and just form. This question involves in a great measure the profits and losses in New England farming.
