Charles Feveryear, the Well Known Baker Elopes from Salt Lake.

Runs Away With. Miss Offic Wolker, Leaving a Wife and Six Children -Their Whereabouts Unknown.

The bakers of Salt Lake are discussing a sensation in which Charles Feveryear, for many years of the firm of Webb & Feveryear, figures as a conspicuous, if not a bright light. It is well known by them that Charles had been leading a sort of double role for some time, though they were not prepared to believe that he would dezert his wife and children-six in numberas he has done, departing with Miss Ollie Walker with whom he had been enamored for several months past,

Mr. Feveryear and Miss Walker were both employed at the Des Moines Bak-ery just west of the Theater. The pro-prietor was Mrs. Browning, who claims prietor was Mrs. Browning, who claims to have discharged the girl on account of her familiarity with Faveryear. The latter left his home, No. 528 Second street, Saturday morning, May 5th, bidding his wife and children good-bye. He immediately presented himself at the bakery and during the afternoon drew his week's pay and after chatting pleasantly with Mrs. Browning for a few minutes left the slop and has never been heard from since. On the Monday following Miss Walker's mother came to the shop in Walker's mother came to the shop in a fit of weeping and requested to see Feveryear, although fearful that he was not there. She stated that she had been absent for two days and that during that time she had taken her trunk and clothes and departed without eaving any word as to where she had leaving any word as to where she had gone. Immediately there was a consultation between Miss Walker's mother. Mrs. Browning and Mrs. Feveryear. All agreed that there had been an elopement. At the urgent solicitation of Mrs. Feveryear the matter was kept quiet. This afternoon she admitted that the was serry that the after had that she was sorry that the affair had not been given into the hands of the officers of the law at that time. Not one word has been heard from the elopping couple since their departure.
