LONDON, 17.—The full text of President Grant's message is published in the London journals.

The Times, reviewing, says the President appears reticent, formal, courteous, bowing to the diplomatic circle with all the urbanity of the old world statesmen. The message is a striking picture of the prosperity and rapid progress of the country. The Times approves the proposal for the Alaska boundary commission, praises the President's moderation towards Cuba, applauds the recommendation for a reduction of the army, and adds: "The President, about to enter upon his second term, finds the Union restored to its normal state at all salient points, but still bearing traces of the great war in the public debt and the disorganization of the South."

HAMILTON, Ontario.—Another fire burned the stores of Davis & Co., and Jam & Turner & Co.; loss, $100,000.

Noah's Flood.

We have received from the accomplished discoverer, Mr. George Smith, of the British Museum, the subjoined most interesting account of the record of the Deluge, which, as we announced a day or two ago, he has lately deciphered from the Assyrian monuments:

"The cuneiform inscription which I have recently found and translated gives a long and full account of the Deluge. It contains the version of tradition of this event, which existed in the early Chaldean period at the city of Erech (one of the cities of Nimrod, now represented by the ruins of Warka. In this newly discovered inscription the account of the Deluge is put as a narrative into the mouth of Xisuthrus or Noah. He relates the wickedness of the world, the command to build the ark, its building, the filling of it, the resting of the ark on a mountain, the sending of the birds, and other matters. The narrative has a closer resemblance to the account transmitted by the Greeks from Berosus, the Chaldean historian, than to the Biblical history, but it does not differ materially from either. The principal differences are as to the duration of the Deluge, the name of the mountain on which the ark rested, the sending out of the birds, etc. The cuneiform account is much longer and fuller than that of Berosus, and has several details omitted both by the Bible and the Chaldean historian. This inscription opens up many questions of which we knew nothing previously, and it is connected with a number of other details of Chaldean history which will be both interesting and important. This is the first time that any inscription has been found with an account of an event mentioned in Genesis."—London Telegraph.

The Fashionable London Tailor.

Poole is a great character in his way. He is supposed to be very shy of anybody below a duke, but in reality he treats his dukes with democratic freedom, and is ready to make a suit for anybody who will pay his price. Any number of stories are told of him. One day a young captain in the guards is said to have stopped him when driving on the parade at Brighton, and asked him, as a bit of fun, to look at his coat and see how badly it was made. Poole flung his reins to the groom, gravely scanned the coat, took a piece of chalk from his waistcoat pocket, and chalked any number of cabalistic diagrams of problems from Euclid on his customer's back. "Ah," he said, contemplating his work with much satisfaction, "that will do now, captain; just go to my place and let the cutter see these marks, and he will know what to do," and returning to his phaeton, he left the poor fellow chalked all over like an April fool. Poole takes care to hold his own ground among his aristocratic clients, who are rather amused than offended by his blunt ways. They sometimes invite him to their country houses, and on one occasion his complaint that the company he had met was very mixed, was met by the remark that "he could not expect them to be all tailors."—Ex.

Mr. Wilson, Vice-President, is an exceedingly plain man—without wife or daughter to do the honors of his home, and being also a poor man, he has steadily maintained a style of living in consonance with his pecuniary condition.
