seen as now seems absolutely out of the Republican party?"

"I don't care to be interviewed on that point," said Mr. Brown. "The gentlemen must speak for themselves on that point."

MR. MCCORMICK'S VIEWS.

W. H. McCormick, the well known trader, was found at his office this morning in front of a desk almost pyramid high with accumulated letter newspapers. But he politely yielded an interview and this is what he said: "While I don't feel much with the editorial the delegate was killed the state—because I believe they did so with the best of motives—still I cannot approve of their course. We were all there to represent the Republican party of Utah, and in the absence of definite instructions it was our duty to remain. At least that is the way I look at it. Those who remained contested they had as right to have the Republican party when could show to perform a duty we and with it—of having the party in power what it needs. With Colorado it was quite different. The delegates in that state were instructed to follow Senator Teller. They therefore were compelled to do as we did. I understand that the same was practically the case with the delegates from Idaho. Those of us who remained to work out resolutions that we were there to represent Utah and all necessary provisions and everything else that was submitted. We succeeded in doing what we could in the cause of silver which we stand for and which we believe is the only way against the gold plank of the platform. We succeeded in adopting more or less than intended to get up and have before adjournment. Although I believe and know that each one of the delegates was represented and now is just as committed to helping the cause of silver as ever were the delegates who voted.

"We believed that there were a great many Republicans in Utah who did not want to be associated with the national or parent organization. We therefore thought it best to leave matters in such shape that all who wanted to remain with the party may do so; that those of opposite inclination may act as they see fit. So far as I am personally concerned I feel as perfect liberty to work and vote for any man or men who may be nominated on any other ticket, should they so elect Democrats or the state nominee.

"In case event that that the Democratic party should nominate a free silver candidate for the presidency, will you support him?"

"I think what I said just previous is answering your last question fully, even that." was the reply.

"Do you think, Mr. McCormick, that Teller will be nominated by the Democrats at Chicago?"

"Emphatically not. Teller represents a Democratic platform. He is a professional and the Democrats certainly don't want that kind of a candidate to lead their ticket."

"You believe then that he will not be nominated?"

"There is not the ghost of a shadow of any such a proceeding," was the confidently expressed response.

"Will a silver man be nominated—is it possible under the circumstances to name one?"

"Well, I think it doubtful. A great pressure will be brought to bear by the administration, which will be strongly backed by eastern gold men, and the chances are that the latter combination will win."

"Mr. McCormick, it has frequently been asserted within the last few days that you are not a genuine out-and-out free silver advocate—that you look with considerable favor on gold."

"I am aware of such a sentiment but I want to say that no man has a right to question my loyalty to silver. I know of no man in Utah who has contributed more to the free coinage cause than myself since the demonetization of silver. I am quite willing to stand on my record in that respect."

"Will Utah go for McKinley at the coming election?"

"No—that is to say, it will not unless the Republican party concentrates its forces and gets well together. Otherwise it certainly will not. It seems to me that if the Republican party in Utah expects to win this year that the best course to pursue is to avoid schisms and internal dissensions. It will require the combined strength to win a victory in November. I have always been a staunch Republican and am so still and stand everything the Republican convention did at St. Louis, excepting, of course, its action in adopting the gold standard as against silver."

The plaintiff, Guy C. Royce, complains that about January 15, 1896, he was convicted in the police court on a charge of vagrancy, and was sentenced to serve sixty days in jail, that on or about February 21, 1896, he was compelled against his will to break stones for the city, and while so doing a chip from the hammer of another person similarly employed flew and struck the plaintiff in the eye, destroying the sight of one eye and partially injuring the other and from the injuries thus received he has suffered severe pain and inconvenience ever since. Suits for Divorce.

Anna J. Nixon today filed suit in the Third district court for a decree dissolving the bonds of matrimony existing between herself and her husband, Lawrence Nixon.

The complaint says that the parties intermarried in 1876, in Denmark, and that there are living three children as the issue of said marriage. The oldest, Jessie Nixon, is 19 years of age, and Alice and Louise are 15 and 12 years old respectively. Mrs. Nixon says that her husband has ceased to supply her with the necessities of life and continues to persist in such conduct that I claim, the youngest child and the only one living at home, has been dependent upon her mother for support, that the defendant is an unsuitable person to control and educate the girl. The plaintiff therefore prays that in addition to the decree of divorce she be granted the custody and guardianship of the girl, Louise.
