Gray's Lakeside Pellets cure Constipation.

The three-year-old son of J. A. Johnson, of Lyon Center, Ill., is subject to attacks of croup. Mr. Johnson says he is satisfied that the timely use of Chamberlain's Cough Remedy during a severe attack, saved his little boy's life. He is in the drug business, a member of the firm of Johnson Bros., of that place, and they handle a great many patent medicines for throat and lung diseases. He had all these to choose from, and stilled physicians ready to respond to his call, but selected this remedy for use in his own family at a time when his child's life was in danger, because he knew it to be superior to any other, and famous the country over for its cures of croup. Mr. Johnson says this is the best selling cough medicine they handle, and that it gives splendid satisfaction in all cases. Sold by Druggists.

WORK IN CITY HIGH SCHOOLS

Principal and Teaching Corps Ask Hearty Support of Patrons.

Suggestions as to How All Concerned Can Work Together to Strengthening the Bonds of Mutual Helpfulness.

Principal Clark of the city High school has issued the following circular letter to the institution's patrons:

Dear Friends—The work of the High school for the year 1897-98 is now fairly in progress, and we feel very happy that the boys and girls in majority following those lines of study which experience has shown are best adapted to develop growing minds.

We believe that no school is doing its best work unless it has the hearty cooperation of every patron. Your interest in your children is greater far than the interest which any other person can have in them; your faith in them is consequently your desire that their training be of the sound and eternal quality which will enable them to push forward the advanced, leading line of human progress, is as natural as is their desire to be happy and happy.

With the end in view of strengthening the bonds of mutual helpfulness between the home and the school thereby to bear even better fruits in the future than it has in the past, we take the liberty to suggest a few lines of thought which may, we believe, be helpful to all in working towards our common purpose with greater effectiveness.

First—Regularity and punctuality in attendance are requisites of successful school work. He who comes tardy to school is likely to be serious in his dealings with men of affairs in later life. We trust that pupils are never excused from even a single period of the school session but for good and sufficient grounds. The school is training future citizens, and good citizens do not seek to be excused from doing their duty.

Second—In order to the best results in school work the current of the student's thought must not be diverted from its proper channels. May a point has lost his footing and fallen by the wayside by reason of too assiduous attention to the demands of society.

Third—It is assumed that pupils enjoy, on the average, two hours daily in study at home. In some cases this time should be given to the study of the particular books from which lessons are assigned; in others, it may be devoted to an exploration of the enchanting fields of history and literature. The spirit to investigation should take possession of the pupil. If the young people do not devote their evening hours of study; if the cyclopedia and dictionary are not in evidence; if the volumes of current history and literature are not in demand, consultation with teachers should follow without delay.

Fourth—Every lesson, every task, means of which the individual is to be, we recognize as an instrument to come into more complete possession of himself; to become more self-governed, self-reliant. This we believe is the chief end of all school effort and therefore, we appeal to you to give your children encouragement in this battle which is now on between them and the baser things of the world. If the school encouragement in this battle which is now on between them and the baser things of the world. If the school encouragement in this battle which is now on between them and the baser things of the world. If the school
