CLUB CHAT.

The Daughters of Utah Pioneers held an interesting meeting this week at the home of Mrs. M. L. Dougall. The program consisted of two papers, one by Mrs. E. W. Moyle and one by Mrs. Agutha Ridges, both dealing with the lives of their mothers, who were among the pioneers. Events connected with their joining the church, were detailed, the narration being most interesting. Besides these papers was a piano selection rendered by Miss Claire Dougall, and the affair was altogether a most entertaining one. A feature of the afternoon's business, was the election of Mrs. Susa Young Gates as president in place of Mrs. M. Y. Dougall who will be unable to perform the duties. The next meeting will be held at Calder's Park in celebration of the entrance of the pioneers.

There was a special meeting yesterday of the new directors of the Ladies' Literary club at the club house. The new standing committees also met for the purpose of electing chairmen for the ensuing year.

Representatives of many nationalities are working amicably together as members of the Henry Booth House Woman's club. This organization has the distinction of being perhaps the only one in existence in which women of such widely divergent racial origin meet for the advancement of themselves and for the consideration of matters pertaining to the general good. Such a body would no doubt be impossible anywhere but in cosmopolitan Chicago. Miss Emma Pischel is the leader.

* * *

The Henry Booth social settlement was opened in 1898, a product and protege of the Chicago Ethical society, at 135 West Fourteenth place, right in the heart of the ghetto district, yet in a region where many Irish families have also gathered, with Germans and numbers of other nationalities. The woman's club was begun some time later, about four years ago. William Noyes was the first head resident, succeeded by Miss Gertrude Barnum. Miss Mary Tenney temporarily took charge of the work after Miss Barnum left it for other duties; then came Miss Pischel, who has been head resident two years.

All these women have had an effective share in the upbuilding and regenerating influences of the Henry Booth House Woman's club, and Mrs. Hattie Morse, the first vice president and second president of the club, is credited by her fellow workers with having accomplished much in behalf of the organization and its members.

* * *

In Illinois the clubwomen have learned that, while petitions sometimes have effects, it is unusually necessary to follow up the petitions. The Illinois State Federation has appointed a new committee which it calls the wearying committee. The object of the committee is to bring about better conditions in State charitable institutions. As described in a local newspaper it will be "a reserve force of experts in the gentle art of wearying, whose services will be called into requisition only when local club workers find that they can do nothing. Then the committee will descend upon that institution by day and by night, in season and out of season, in good weather and in bad weather. It will haunt that institution until its officials succumb from sheer exhaustion and promise to be good." Wearying committees are needed in every federation.

Educational, industrial and "linen chest" committees now are successfully maintained in the club, good work being done in all departments. The educational committee pledges itself to see that three of the club members visit each week one or more of the public schools of the vicinity. Prior to the commencement of the club work a spirit of antagonism to the school work and teachers prevailed in the neighborhood. This has been almost entirely removed by the visits, talk and influence of the educational committee members. This committee also provides music, neighborhood talent usually being employed, at one of the neighborhood night schools every Friday night. It is hoped also to establish and keep open a public bath at the Washburne school shortly, the school pupils to have the use of this bath every day and the adults of the vicinity every night.

The industrial committee has not yet completed some of its most interesting plans, but is working well toward their progress. The members of the linen chest committee make tiny, neat garments for the use of the very youthful members and the less financially fortunate women of the neighborhood. Fine work is expended upon these efforts, but the club spirit is decidedly against the use of the donated articles by club members, and a most desirable spirit of independence, thrift and friendly household rivalry is engendered and encouraged.

"Household talks" and the talks of the settlement physicians on the care and rearing of children are listened to with all due respect and attention, but have not yet been followed as heartily as might be desired by those who have the good of the families at heart.

"You ladies talk all right, but we've got the children," is the blank wall of smiling obstinate determination with which Miss Pischel and the other settlement workers, despite the love and friendship in which they are held by the club members, are continually confronted. "The way my mother brought up her children is good enough for me."

Do Not Be Imposed Upon.

Foley & Co., Chicago, originated Honey and Tar as a throat and lung remedy, and on account of the great merit and popularity of Foley's Honey and Tar many imitations are offered for the genuine. Ask for FOLEY'S Honey and Tar and refuse any substitute offered as no other preparation will give the same satisfaction. It is mildly laxative. It contains no opiates and is safest for children and delicate persons. Sold by F. J. Hill Drug Co., Salt Lake City.

WOMAN'S WORLD.

The secret of making the town house attractive during the warm weather, says a writer in the Home Beautiful, is to make it look cool. The eye must be flattered with the glimpse of a gay awning, suggesting the shut-out glare, while across the window-sill may glow a box filled with plants. Dotted curtains should flutter in the breeze instead of the stately lace and satin hangings for the winter. Rattan furniture and cool linen cushions produce a pleasant effect, while the substitution of blue-and-white china for the usual things in the way of bric-a-brac makes a restful picture.

Denim and washable muslins, blue and white Canton crepe, gay French chintz, and a few plaster casts make an admirable combination for summer. The dainty Japanese rugs in blue and white, pink and white, and green are an excellent substitute for carpets during the summer. Mattings are always clean and cool, and they have become artistic in design and color.

Window boxes are very easily cared for, and give a gay air to a room that is most alluring. The plants must not be allowed to wither for lack of water. The fragrance of the freshly watered earth is delightful.

Both dining room and halls offer their chance of transfiguration. Blue and white china umbrella bowls, jardinieres with growing palms all add to the refreshing effect of coolness. The overworked fern dish should be banished and a bowl of flowers should take its place as a table centerpiece.

* * *

Very good indeed is the light gray maple furniture made along mission lines. The grain of the wood shows beautifully under the satin-like stain, and the soft gray makes a perfect background for draperies in Oriental tones. So much good furniture in these shapes and tones are to be had at moderate prices these days that there is really no excuse for the highly varnished atrocities affected by house furnishers of old.

* * *

Spiced Tomatoes—Remove the inside from a half dozen firm, ripe tomatoes and mix with half a cupful of brown sugar, pepper and salt, and a little vinegar and mustard. Stir well and fill the tomato shells with the paste.

* * *

Light Fruit Cake—Beat the whites of eight eggs with two cupfuls of granulated sugar, then add one cup of butter, one of sweet milk, and two and a half cups of flour in which are sifted two even teaspoonfuls of baking powder. Stir for five minutes, then add one cupful each of seedless raisins, blanched almonds and figs and one-quarter of a pound of chopped citron. (Before putting in the fruit, sprinkle it with a little flour.) Turn into pans and bake very slowly for two hours. Cover with a white icing.

* * *

Fried Celery—Wash and scrape the desired number of celery stalks; then cut into pieces four inches long. Cook until tender in salted water. When done remove from the water, drain, and spread to dry in a cool place. When the stalks have become firm, dip them into a batter made of one cupful of flour sifted three times, a half-teaspoonful of baking powder in it, and wet up with a beaten egg and whatever milk may be required. Fry a golden brown in hot lard.

Home Made Boxes For Odd Corners.

One of the redeeming features of the cleaning season is the distinctly housewifely pleasure of installing upholstered boxes in bedrooms, livingrooms and reception halls. The window seat which makes a useful receptacle is now firmly established in the domestic affections, and detached boxes for myriad uses are offered by manufacturers of upholstery novelties.

The mother of a growing family has at last solved the problem of disposing of such household paraphernalia as school books, tennis racquets, mittens, rubber, etc. The bedroom in this home is small, while the single closet in the entry is under the staircase, and has been dubbed affectionately by the entire family, the Dark Hole of Calcutta. Nothing can ever be found within its recesses unless a candle is brought into play. So this year a house cleaning luxury planned by the busy mother is a triple seat which is to be fitted into the bay window of the livingroom. Each section, fitted to one of the low, broad window ledges, is a substantial shelf, with two under shelves of uniform depth fitted into grooves. The lower shelves are hidden by a box pleated valance of sage green denim tacked to the top shelf, which is covered smoothly and tightly with the denim by brass upholstery tacks. The cushions for this window seat are detached and in three sections, being of home manufacture, built from the hair of a discarded mattress and the green denim. In the shelves of one section will be stowed schoolbooks, and in a third tennis balls and racquets, baseball gloves and other small implements for outdoor games.

A handy young husband has spent winter evenings building an admirably planned box to hold the belongings for his prospective heir. It is a trifle shorter and more narrow than the usual box couch, and is set on casters. The inside is not upholstered, but is enameled in white and divided into three parts. The sections at each end are partitioned off and then fitted with two little ledges or grooves, each for holding trays just like trunks. These wooden trays are quite deep and will hold layer after layer of baby's garments. In the center, at the bottom of the box, are folded the baby's blankets and a dainty silkoline quilt, while above this from brass hooks is suspended by the ribbons the wicker basket with its manifold fittings. The outside of the box is upholstered in rose patterned cretonne to match the fittings of the young mother's bedroom. While everything needful for baby's comfort is concentrated in this roomy receptacle, it also serves as a comfortably upholstered seat which fits into an awkward corner of the room. The interior of the box could be upholstered, but this particular little woman thought that the sweet, clean paint, with orris scented pads in the bottom of each tray, was infinitely more sanitary and easy to keep clean.

The new shoe boxes for bedrooms and dressing rooms are admirably arranged and upholstered in all the pretty cretonnes and tapestries to match hangings and curtains. The newest boxes are almost square, and the sides are lined with bags or compartments fastened in with stout braid and brass-headed tacks. Each compartment is just large enough to hold one shoe or slipper. This leaves a square hollow in the center of the box, where stockings may be laid. The well groomed girl likes this box because it prevents the rubbing of shoes. Each shoe is on its tree, safe from scratches. For the Louis rooms these boxes are upholstered in damask or tapestry, many colored, but for the empire room a single toned fabric in empire green or yellow, with the familiar wreath, is preferred. These designs come in both silk and cotton weaves, a very pretty and inexpensive denim being stamped with the Napoleonic design in excellent colorings.

A MARRIED MAN'S SONG OF EASTER

When Betty went to church with me
At Eastertide, she used to wear
Some fetching headdress for the day,
A rich and elegant affair.

It was a thing of loveliness
That brought admiring eyes upon it.
I cannot say, try as I may,
How dear to me was Betty's bonnet.

And now when Betty goes to church
At Eastertide she still is seen
In some creation much the same
As gave her charm at sweet sixteen.

The charm has somewhat passed away,
'Tis true, I like to see her don it.
But I can tell—alas, too well—
How dear to me is Betty's bonnet!
