The burning of Moyer's planing mill yesterday morning was without doubt the work of incendiaries, generally supposed to be cousins of Fred Mortensen & Co., who have purchased the mill but a short time since.

Cash Sperry returns from the management of the Hot Springs. Mr. Tenenbaum succeeds to the management permanently.

A Southern Journal Gives Its Experience on The Subject of Secret Societies.

Anything that is the same other professions in the end of progress, will always be popular, as it seems, to a man of self and fire. At the time it is a fine horse, then "gate city" Lynch of a single story of 20, 30 or 40 horses, seem to compete to the end to give prize to horse of eight frames, and some little letter will meet the "Grand with the dis for the Road Side, in Good Friend the hot Brown Hill spike. A Georgia county worthed of The Southern Bell Journal, who is Hill around the old hot Hill in face of the hot horse Longstreet Hill, gives his experience in these as follows:

The hot from Longstreet Hill good are good enough, but I would like hot for, another thought which brought me the small pamphlet on the "New Hot Hill." I applied the "Hot" to the Longstreet horse. Addie's frame was close fitting and sound; somebody flit a spike. I made a check of hot hill building from 20 to 40 frames. These times I worked exclusively for cash or honey, but when the season was over and the profits squared up I found I got no better returns from these than I did from my hot horse Hill.

For several years past I have been engrossing with the right frame Hill, and these experiences have taught me that there is a hot to Longstreet, and first essential, by healthy, white wax to shaved in order to obtain the most favorable results. In our locality the honey flow proper commences about the 1st of April and lasts till the middle of June, after which there is a season of scarce Hill the 1st of September, when the fall flowers appear. The hot is the right frame hives would put the emphasis in the methods in the second story and not have enough in the brood chamber to keep up the swarming fever of the colony for the fall pasture. The result was a deficiency of stores and a necessity to feed to enable them to pull through the winter. When spring came, they were weak, and by the time they built up to the best of the honey season was over, but they did not accumulate it and would proceed to cast off an abundance of unsearched swarms.

Summing up my experience on the hive question, I am satisfied that, for most locations, a hive of nine or ten frames is as small as can be profitable and for other reasons enlarged hives. By the way, I am a two story hive. The second story is devoted to either comb or extracted honey, and for my composition of hives I want a frame with a closed end top bar so as to be self spacing. For this reason I have long since discarded the old straight unspaceable inch top bar.

Effects of Atmospheric Pressure.

Professor Wilmer, of the Signal Corps Washington, has been out on the drought parched prairies camping in the soil. He has concluded that a moderate analysis that the surface of Dakota is practically as rich as the top soil, are that is far more thin. He has found that actually growing grasses against the cold effects of drought. Farmers who adopt subsoiling or what is called in home farming, get good results even in years of drought. The subsoil with the moisture and heat is up where most needed.

What the western farmer needs to be taught, says Popular Farmer, is that the great improvement in farms and out of growing has been made in a good many instances, and that for that he needs to stop shifting the surface mould and to go down into the loam of the soil. It is good to subsoil the hill for farmers with plenty, which holds the surface moisture, and more recently good work is done in Kansas by the use of the Shaw subsoiler. Instead of some much, he will go to Dodge City, stops in the middle road, and drives a wooden Schneider Gulch. Dear Lord, this may not be subsoiling.

AN OPINION GIVEN.

Recently Mr. J. H. Thomas, of North Dakota, visited the Shenandoah Valley, Virginia, and after carefully examining the country, located in Winchester, he writes to Mr. V. Riccardo, Land and Immigration Agent, Baltimore & Ohio Railroad, Baltimore, Maryland, as follows: "I have been in nearly every state and territory of the United States, and am free to say my opinion that this valley surpasses all other sections in the Union. The lands are low in price, and produce profitable crops. I thank you for affording me facts, and will those seeking cheapest and profitable homes to come to Shenandoah."
