INAPPROPRIATE APPLAUSE.

There was an incident in connection with one of the meetings in the large Tabernacle which suggests the necessity of a more rigid enforcement of rules of extreme close restriction, unless the trend of which the incident is an indication should be turned in another direction. At the Sunday evening meeting referred to, a very beautiful quartet was rendered, to the delight of the vast audience. At the close of the singing somebody began to applaud by the clapping of hands, and others, perhaps thoughtlessly for the moment, joined in, an officer of the meeting who had arisen to make an announcement raised his hand in deprecation of the outburst, when the singing of hymns was resumed and the presiding officer had to stop forward and check it. Of those who engaged in the demonstration, it cannot be said that they were Church members who understood its order, for those would have realized at once, if they had made a mistake in trying to the applause in the first place, that the sign to cease was one to be obeyed instantly.

It is getting to be quite a habit in some parts of the country, even in meetings for regular religious worship, for the congregation to join in applause of something that pleases them. The incident we refer to was not in a regular religious service in the Tabernacle, but it was on a Sunday evening, and whatever may be allowed elsewhere, in a Latter-day Saints' house of worship the applause thus given was wholly out of place. Those who attend Sunday meetings in the Tabernacle are expected to abide by the rules of the house, which absolutely forbid demonstrations of that kind on the Holiness day. The building is dedicated to the worship of the Almighty, and its character as a sacred edifice must be preserved. Those having the Tabernacle in charge have yielded to solicitations to give high class concerts in the building, and in those no restriction has been made on appropriate applause; but if the kindness which has permitted the use of the edifice for such purposes is to be abused by extending into Sunday evenings a disturbing element, then the alternative would be to enforce rigidly a rule excluding everything that would incline to such a disagreeable effect as the one complained of.

THE CZAR IN FRANCE.

The czar of Russia as his journey through Europe has finally come to what is considered the most important part of it, the entrance into France. It is pointed out that there probably is no analogous case in history. Autocrats never sometimes have sought the friendship of republics for political reasons, in times of need, but never the Czar Nicholas enters a republic whose representatives he acknowledges as his equal, notwithstanding the opposite principles on which the governments rest. It is a departure from the rules, notable in the annals of history.

The spectacle of monarchists and autocrats embracing hands in the banks of the river Seine for fear lest the democracies of France with begin to use of Minister Henry. The Matin says that would be very simple if they would enjoy the embracement. The czar, in his parting remarks, must have wondered whether the French police will be able to protect the president from a Pauli, could guarantee the safety of a foreign ruler, and then leave him to Let the czar take heed. This is a repeated to him only. The Russian Minister to Washington, Mr. Cassini, has been in Salt Lake City, and he knows the Mormon people, and would advise the czar to be careful if they did not have sufficient reason to fear the application of summary justice, and he could know what the consequences of such a proceeding would be. Perhaps, additional advice is needless.

The czar's journey through Europe is generally regarded as an event of the greatest political importance. It is not supposed that it will result immediately in a new grouping of the European powers, since diplomatic combinations are a slow act and require a season changes, but it is expected that the assurances held will lead to a better understanding between the subjects of the policy to be followed with regard to the Turkish question which may divorce the peace of Europe. Assuredly the Turkish problem is now another a matter than ever before. What that solution will be cannot be even a guess even conjecture.

BRANCHES AND ROOTS.

For an representation of any kind to be most effective work, it is agreed that the efforts should be unified in their labors for the desired end. The rule is especially applicable to those associated in a religious organization where the moral and spiritual forces are relied upon for life and vitality. If some of the rank and file of a religious body be unmindful of its objections, the whole organization suffers temporarily thereby, because of a weakening in the ties which should be relied in a compact association. When the region is on the part of officers the effect is all the more pronounced, because it is a matter of self-defense against an influence that evokes the principle of removing inefficient or willfully inactive officers, to organize in other capacities.

In speaking to His Apostles recently, Christ taught them: "He that abideth in me, and I in him, the same bringeth forth much fruit; for without me ye can do nothing. If a man abide not in me, he is cast forth as a branch, and is withered. . . . Herein is my Father glorified, that ye bear much fruit; so shall ye be my disciples." Here, then, is a rule for the guidance of those who are called to represent the Lord. If they greatly the Father in bearing the fruit of their calling, they will be His disciples. But if they do not bear much fruit, thereby giving evidence that they are not abide in Him, they are counted as withered branches and are cast out by command of the Lord. Somewhere resides the authority to act in the name of Christ, and therefore withdrawal of fellowship cannot have occasion to be blamed with by their brethren. The latter, implied by the law which is the Gospel, place upon their fellowship to renew the life that seems to be wanting, and wherever they are successful. But occasionally the one whom they seek to call back is an active, vigorous performer in another region of duty in which he is the appointed instrument to bear the fruit that is demanded in his calling. Then there comes a point when it is necessary, for the good of the tree, to prune it of the branch that has become withered.

Many good trees bring forth good fruit," said the Lord. Under this rule, then, the tree that seems to bear good fruit thereby cannot be deprived the title of a good tree, nor move to another class. If its fruit-bearing capacity seem to be reduced, its value is gone; instead of a help not a benefit it becomes a hindrance and a injury, and must be guarded against. So it is in the Church: when those who have received the Priesthood cease to bear the fruits of the calling they have obtained, no matter how absolutely those fruits have been borne in times past, a performance in that another example there which has the jurisdiction to relieve them of the position they would otherwise be doing good instead of the sacred dignity. The time for removal is their own if they, by ceasing to magnify their office, come to a point where the really performs of that office are not made effective through their inactivity. On the other hand, those who glorify God by diligence in observing His will in the duties and obligations placed upon them continue to increase in the fruit of their good intentions and deeds. In the Church they are preserved by divine power in the exercise of the functions, while those who pervert the office assigns, by the divine authority and commands, treated in the withered branches they become by their own inactivity. Christ is ever the tree with true and healthy branches, and there is no alternative to be simply fruitful.

TEUTONIC ANTAGONISM.

The news comes from Berlin that Prince Lobenstein is at Kiel, where he is interested sovereign and family are to be in attendance in certain ceremonies. The suggestion as to the cause of the visit to the Gilbertian capital is said to be a warning to the people that a very, not so, ceremonial in Germany as with the world-important. There is little city quite a number of foreign cases, and in several instances social officers have expressed the opinion that the cause was to commemorate anniversary in the middle ages. There is, perhaps no present occasion for some of important message, but nearly perhaps attention is a meeting of some of the Teutonic families. The responsibility for this may not be said to rest on those engaged in taking up the garbage; it is rather on people who neglect to promptly with official instructions to place the waste matter in reach of the collectors. Piles of rubbish, decaying vegetation, old rags, etc., are to be seen in many back yards, and the invitation of these and have to haul the discard of the garbage into these rubbish heaps to put at the disposal of the men employed in carry them off, is unheeded in too many instances. In a time when this neglect is liable to cause an epidemic of sickness, good public policy will justify the sanitary inspector in doing a little closer prying into some matters. His past work in this respect has been commendable; there is not a word of complaint at it. But an extra effort is about out the rubbish heaps before the winter rains come on will be duly appreciated on behalf of the public health.

PROVING DIVINE AUTHORITY.

In a letter written from Mex's, Boone county, Indiana, Elders John H. Stoni and U. G. Miller make the following queries:

Will you please answer the following through the News: Who ordained President Brigham Young to the office of President of the Church, and also the Twelve to the dispensation? The Reorganized members are making the statement that he never was ordained, and that the priesthood never made claim that he was. We think it will be of use to elders of the Elders as well as ourselves.

For the information of those who make the inquiry, we will state that the events referred to is carefully recorded in Church history, and has been published frequently. President Brigham Young was ordained as the President of the Church, in the quorum of the First Presidency, by the Council of the Apostles, on December 5, 1847. Not a ceremony necessary to the performance of that solemn duty was omitted—everything was done in perfect order, and by the united voice of the Twelve. President Young had been President of the Church in his position as President of the presiding quorum, the Twelve Apostles, for more than three years previous to the date given, or ever since the martyrdom of the Prophet Joseph. When, on the date mentioned, President Young had been duly instituted as the chief in the First Presidency, he selected Heber C. Kimball and Willard Richards as first and second counselors respectively, and they were also duly set apart, being sustained by the unanimous vote of the Twelve. In their case, as with President Young, no ceremony was omitted.

As to the statements of the parties referred to, and others of a similarly misrepresentative nature, all the Elders should have learned by this time that they are characteristic of most individuals. Not all the representatives of the Reorganized church indulge in such inconsistencies, many of them being highminded, honorable men, but there are some in that denomination, as in others, who do not possess a reputable course. We have this authentic offer to the Elders representing such: Tell them positively as called concerning in other sections demonstrations are treated, as that is their true position.

With regard to the authority of President Young or any others of the Twelve called by the Lord through the Prophet Joseph Smith to the holy apostleship, or any of their successors, as of the Church, we would remind the Elders of the counsel of the First Presidency in this matter. Such authority is not a subject on which there is any room for doubt, hence no occasion exists for discussion thereon by the Elders of the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints. The test of such claims authority is open to all individuals at all seasons—by doing the will of the Father and thereby receiving a testimony of the truth. The Elders cannot, the way steadily for applying that test to the doctrine they preach and the ordinances they perform, and the way is open to every individual who will obey the word of God as taught to participate in exercising for truth or the Elders' message, that the Gospel of Christ has been restored to earth preparatory for the hour of God's judgment, for as the revelation given to St. John on the Isle of Patmos foretold,

"For all sects and denominations outside of the Church which the Lord Jesus has established in this age, I say representatives thereof have spoken of war and authority as directly are which to obtain the same in a proper, right-feel manner, with a view to mentioning the truth, that is their business; and in the matter of any necessary information they may be assistant, as in these communications, the Reorganization include, stand on precisely the same position. The question of authority as those sects may be, must a mere communication between individuals, a matter of friendly discussion, without speaking in behalf of the Church. But as the Church was made in a divine command and authority April 6, 1830, and which has continued and will continue in an organized state, and for the present the chief abiding place of its members is in the Rocky Mountain valleys, there is no room for disputation with any sect by its Elders over its authority. The Elders know they possess it, and the means of proof of that authority has been indicated by the Lord, viz: that those who do the will of the Father shall receive a testimony from Him. This is for all people and man cannot offer a superior test to that which the Lord has provided. The missionaries have no time, because there is a conclusion, to waste in discussing the authority of the Church. They present the message and which is by of divinely commissioned servants of the Lord, and if any individuals feel to question that calling in a friendly way or otherwise, let them be referred to the test we have pointed out as the way to learn the truth. Time is so short for that that the Lord will not wait for Heaven. He will do His part, not regarding differences in regard to authority and assuring our that they cannot be made up for the time delivered in the Elders by preaching the doctrine of Christ and giving the people full opportunity to exercise, in an hour just moment, their agency in receiving the truth.

THE BIG GATUN DAM COMPANY.

The New York Engineering News for October 1st contains an article written by W. P. Hardesty, on the water power and electric transmission at the Big Gatun Dam Company's plant in Salt Lake county. The article occupies three pages of the paper, besides a two-page sheet of illustrations, and is a well written description of the great enterprise which now furnishes the current for lighting this city. The dams, power houses, reservoir, tunnel, piping, machinery, transmission line, etc., etc., all receive merited attention, and make a very interesting paper, which in fact will be a revelation to many readers of the Engineering News who have not imagined that Utah was so very advanced or had such resources capable of utilization.

WHAT PROMINENT DRUGGISTS HAVE SAID.

H. M. Rossom, senior member of H. M. Rossom & Co., 217 N. 3d St., St. Louis, writes: I had been left with a very stubborn cough, the result of influenza, which neither resisted nor relieved, until I took Ballard's Horehound Syrup. One bottle completely cured me. I put one bottle in my store, who had a severe cough, and she experienced immediate relief. I always recommend this syrup to my friends.

John Cranston, 803 Hampshire street, Quincy, Ills., writes: I have found Ballard's Horehound Syrup superior to any other cough medicine I have ever known. It never disappoints. Price 25c.
