DESERET EVENING NEWS.

FRAGMENTS.

THE Central Seminary at Mt. Pleasant will close for the year on Friday, April 20th.

THE regular weekly meeting of the City Council occurs tonight. In the absence of Mr. [illegible], president pro tem; La Grand Young will preside.

A TYPOGRAPHICAL error yesterday made it appear that Mr. D. F. Brown, who is at present staying at the Knutsford, had been in the Territory only since 1892, whereas it should have been 1862.

Without His Signature.

It appears now that Mayor Baskin did not at the last moment veto the appropriation passed by the Council a week ago tonight on account of it containing $[illegible] to the credit of the plat E [illegible] committee, but that he allowed it to pass and become of effect without his signature, notwithstanding he believes that the claim was an exorbitant and unlawful one. His honor is said to entertain the opinion that had he voiced his opposition to the claim in a veto, it would have passed the Council all the same and that such action on his part, therefore, would have been worse than time wasted. In the meantime plat E is as badly muddled as ever and apparently no nearer being straightened out than two years ago, when the work of adjustment was commenced.

Land Office Items.

Peter Peterson, of Price, has filed an affidavit in the land office against the timber culture entry of John D. Leigh, made May 1, 1888, for 80 acres in section 22, township 14 south, range 10 east.

Alfred Popkins, of Cedar City, Iron county, filed an affidavit of contest in the homestead entry of Henry C. James, made March 5, 1894, for 160 acres in section 35, township 35 south, range 12 west.

Samuel Ware Jr, of Orangeville, Emery county, filed an application for a homestead entry of 160 acres in section 13, township 19 south, range 7 west.

George W. Snow, of Orangeville, filed an application for a homestead entry of 160 acres in section 14, township 19 south, range 7 east.

Charles Hasebrack, of Gunnison, Sanpete county, filed an application for a homestead entry of 120 acres in section 22, township 19 south, range 1 west.

Soren C. Jensen, of Gunnison, filed an application for a homestead entry of 80 acres section 4, township 20 south, range 1 east.

William D. Williams, of Milford, filed an application for a desert entry of 40 acres in section 7, township 28 south, range 10 west.

Nephi Williams, of Emery, filed an application for a desert entry of 280 acres in sections 29 and 32, township 21 south, range 7 east.

Christen N. Christiansen, of Huntington, Emery county, filed final proof for his homestead entry of 158 acres in sections 25 and 36, township 17 south, range 9 east.

SUNDAY SCHOOL UNION.

How to Make the School More Attractive and Effective.

Interesting Discussion of the Subject at the Salt Lake Stake Union Meeting Last Evening.

Owing to the very bad weather, there was but a small attendance at the Sunday School Union meeting last night. Superintendent Thomas C. Griggs presided.

The excellent musical exercises were rendered by the juvenile choir of the Fifth ward, directed by their instructor, Brother David Smith. Opening prayer was offered by Elder James M. Barlow.

Elder Wm. Bradford was the first speaker, and delivered a very interesting address on the subject of "Attention, how to [illegible] and retain it."

In order to teach at all successfully, he said, attention must be obtained. The first essential is to secure interest in the class of pupils; this may be obtained by illustrations on the blackboard of parts of the lesson, by the use of objects, etc., and the judicious use of apt and pointed stories that illustrate the principles the teacher wishes to impress upon the minds of the children.

The use of a chart, if handled carefully, is a great help in keeping up interest in Bible and Book of Mormon subjects. A chart should be shown only in one lesson at a time so that the interest may be kept up to the last lesson on the chart. The teacher should be well and elaborately prepared, that is, have much more prepared than he expects to present to the class, and he should always know what he is going to do next and never hesitate.

The work done in the class should be always adapted to the capacity of the pupils. No matter how good the lesson may be, nor how well presented, if the subject or matter, or the language of the teacher, is beyond the understanding of the pupils, the lesson will prove a failure, children [illegible] attend long to that which they do not understand, or that they are not interested in.

Variety should be studied by the instructor; the same old routine becomes very tiresome to children and should be avoided, and the lessons should be often presented in a new form, with new objects, and illustrated with new stories.

Lessons that cannot be presented in an indirect way, as in a parable or story, in which the children may be able to see the application themselves, are very effective in arousing interest, and in impressing truth upon the mind. Attention is a habit, and should be cultivated as such. If the teacher can attain the close attention of his pupils today, it will be much easier to get their attention the next time they meet, and the teacher cannot do better than continue to retain the attention of his pupils by every possible means, so that the habit may become fixed and permanent.

To be most effective in teaching a class, too much dependence upon and reference to the text book must be avoided. The teacher should be so familiar with the lesson that there is no necessity for having to refer to the book. This will inspire confidence, and the material will have much better command of himself and of the class and attention will be given more readily by the pupils.

Frequent questioning of the pupils, [illegible] of the lesson [illegible] [illegible] to the lesson, [illegible] [illegible].

A very important qualification to [illegible] teaching was [illegible] [illegible]. If he be not interested in his lesson he [illegible], his pupils [illegible], and [illegible] there would be no attention.

The correct lesson should not only be [illegible] in the class work, but always [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] for his work, as stories, anecdotes, incidents, objects, and the like, and weave them into the lesson as opportunity offered. In this manner the successful teacher always has something fresh for his class, and their interest [illegible].

To the objection that it was difficult for most teachers to relate a story or incident, or use objects successfully before children, the speaker suggested the old maxim that "practice makes perfect," and related the incident of the man who had what was to him a very difficult subject to lecture upon. After preparing himself on the subject, in order to learn how to present it in a pleasing and attractive style, he would stop a friend on the street and tell him all about it, or as long as he could get him to listen, and then tell another and talk to him in the same way, and kept at it until he mastered his subject.

"Have courage, my boy, to say No," solo and chorus, was well rendered by Master Manasse Smith and juvenile choir.

Elder J. H. Parry was the next speaker. His subject was "Sunday School Statistics." Referring to the annual report of the Sunday Schools of this stake for 1893, which showed a total enrollment of 11,[illegible] pupils, the average attendance was [illegible] per cent of the enrollment. The enrollment did not increase more than [illegible] per cent of the Latter-day Saint children in the stake. An average attendance of 60 per cent, on an enrollment of 37 per cent, showed that less than one-half (41 per cent) of the Latter-day Saint children were in regular attendance at Sabbath School. The speaker urged that efforts be made to increase both the enrollment and the average attendance. The most effectual method, he thought, was to increase the efficiency of the schools themselves, and make them more interesting and attractive, as suggested in the timely remarks of the previous speaker. Unless this was done all efforts in other directions would end in failure. If these schools were made more attractive in all the departments, very little other efforts need be made to increase the average attendance and enrollment. In support of this position, the speaker related a recent change made in a school where a new teacher was installed in the theological class. He was earnest, energetic, prepared interesting lessons and put life and spirit into his work. From an average attendance of eight or ten pupils the class numbered in less than six weeks nearly eighty regular attendants.

Superintendent Griggs followed and urged the importance of making the schools more effective for good and bringing within their fold all the children, that all might be benefited and instructed in the principles of the Gospel.

The Fifth ward juvenile choir will furnish music at the next meeting again, as the inclement weather prevented many of the members from attending tonight.

Benediction was pronounced by Superintendent Clark, of the Fifth ward, and the meeting adjourned for one month. JOS. H. PARRY, Secretary.

Ticket Agents Coming.

On the 20th inst., next Friday morning, the delegates to the International Association of Ticket Agents, held at Los Angeles last week, are expected to arrive in this city on a Rio Grande special passenger train from the west. There are upwards of three hundred delegates in the party and they will remain over here about twelve hours, departing for the east about 8 o'clock in the evening. The R. G. W. officials are preparing to give them a good reception. The excellent program which is being arranged contemplates a complete tour of the city, a visit to all of the points of interest, a trip out to Saltair, and a lunch at the Knutsford.

AN IMPORTANT INDUSTRY.

An Eastern Firm Asks Information about Asbestos and Ozokerite.

The secretary of the Chamber of Commerce received a letter this morning from the firm of John G. Tait & Co., Newark, N. J., large manufacturers of roofing and deadening felts, building paper and paving materials, etc., in which they state they had been led to believe that there was a deposit of ozokerite or mineral wax in this Territory. They ask for further information regarding it, such as the extent of it and the means of the people working it. They desire also to learn about asbestos deposits, the grade of the material and such like, stating that they are large consumers of these [illegible] and would be glad to do business with us in these lines.

The deposit of mineral wax, known as ozokerite, [illegible], is found most extensive in Uintah county, and the display of the Utah product at the World's Fair created considerable interest, the comparison between the [illegible] product being much in favor of the Utah article, considering the great extent of the deposits in this Territory. Asbestos is also found in [illegible] and Wayne counties, and in [illegible] county as well. [illegible], while Cache [illegible] are [illegible] [illegible] having [illegible] in this city.

The opening in [illegible] of the Uintah as [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] of mineral wax [illegible] Utah [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] [illegible].

Secretary [illegible] forwarded the firm the required information.

Police and Fire Matters.

But little business was transacted before the meeting of fire and police commissioners [illegible] afternoon after the NEWS went to press. The only matters of importance were the filing of applications for [illegible] the fire department from W. H. [illegible] and John [illegible], and on the police force as special policeman from Joseph A. Young.

He Slept in the Mud.

A NEWS reporter was notified last evening that there was a man lying in a pool of mud and water, a dead person, at the corner of Sixth South and Third East streets, supposed to be dead. An investigation showed that the man was only dead drunk and had rolled off the street crossing into the cesspool and lay there in the mud. It was with difficulty he was aroused from his drunken stupor, and after repeated attempts to [illegible], was made [illegible] to the mud. He left a serpentine trail in the slush and mire for five blocks. His name was said to be Evans and his residence in the Tenth ward. He is well known to the police.

COLLEGE SUMMER SCHOOL.

The Plan Adopted For the Coming Summer at Manti.

Prof. J. M. Tanner Outlines a Four Years' Course of Regular Studies in the Higher Branches.

Prof. J. M. Tanner, of this city, well and favorably known as an educator, will establish a College Summer School at Manti the coming summer, the purpose being to continue courses of study of seven weeks' duration, during a period of four years.

In the circular setting forth the aims and scope of the proposed school, Prof. Tanner states:

"It is proposed to introduce in Utah a system of summer schools on the New England plan of giving teachers and others a college equivalent in some one study of their choice. Thus in a college where there are thirty-five working weeks and five courses, the actual time allotted to each course would be seven weeks; and experience shows that the same results may be attained in any one study in a summer school of seven weeks, that would ordinarily be achieved during a college year. In four summers of consecutive work, the average college course might be had in mathematics, sciences, and languages. In some courses the time may be extending a few days beyond the seven weeks, since the purpose is to accomplish certain results rather than cover a specified time; but each study will be limited to one study. Certain psychological advantages will be derived from the method of fixing the attention for the entire time exclusively upon one study—the habit of study—intensively. By pursuing one course for four summers, one may [illegible] to some depth the study of one's choice. Hence a school has a threefold purpose; first, to provide teachers and others an opportunity of doing advanced work; second, to provide those who are studying or about to study law or medicine, with Latin or chemistry; and third, to aid those who may wish in the next future to enter college in passing their entrance requirements.

"During the session of the school the adjourned [illegible] might hold their institutes and a lecture each day from some [illegible] would not only [illegible] interest, but serve to divert the mind for an hour or so. Through the entire session a kindergarten will be conducted in one of the rooms, and teachers will have the opportunity of witnessing its methods and gaining some idea of its utility as their observation may give. Efforts will likewise be made to organize a class in physical culture."

As to the studies to be pursued, the plan of work includes four classes in mathematics, one in Latin, German, French, chemistry, physics, ladies' fancy needle work, painting, pictorial, grammar, English literature, pedagogy and bookkeeping. Other classes will be organized to meet the wants of those who may wish to attend.

Manti, the county seat of Sanpete county, has been chosen as the place to hold the summer school, the city having a commodious building in which to hold sessions. At the end of the session examinations will be held and certificates for studies taken will be given, and in the case of the fourth summer certificates for the course completed.

Expenses will be as follows: board, $2.50 per week; tuition, $15.00 per term.

Cavalry Company at Beaver.

An enthusiastic meeting was held in the court room, this city, on Tuesday evening last, says the Beaver Chronicle, in the interest of military matters. Assisted last week, the Governor has signified his approval and now the boys are ready. It was the unanimous voice of the meeting to organize a company of cavalry in Beaver, and in this way the [illegible] rolls are being started. They can be found with Mr. J. F. Tolton, and all desirous of enlisting can do so by applying to Mr. Tolton and signing the rolls. No doubt a large company will be ready to perform "rousing" [illegible] for the boys are all alive to the move.
