OUR STOCKHOLM LETTER.

A Former American Society Belle Speaks of Stockholm and Its Gaiety—A Peculiar Gift from Uncle Sweden for Children at the World's Fair.

STOCKHOLM, Feb. 20th.—In 1892 I was connected with a Swedish Chicago paper, and I wondered whether the Swedes called Stockholm the city of the well of the Scandinavian officers and without to be an official international encampment to hold, as was announced, in honor of the fifth anniversary of Chicago as a city, but in reality nothing but a mere smoking scheme of private parties.

An ex-Swedish officer was Count Fritz von Rosen, one of my old school mates and now a lieutenant of the mounted body guard of the Swedish King. By Rosen I was introduced to Count Lewenhaupt, another lieutenant in one of the crack regiments of the Swedish army.

I took no great amount of time for the wedding, because warriors to find out that the engagement was a colossal humbug, and after a few weeks' stay in Chicago they went out, Count Rosen to pay a visit to his cousin, the relative in Philadelphia, and Count Lewenhaupt to enjoy himself in Gotham. It seemed to me, that the wedding one of the bride was very frosted, but, notwithstanding this, he is a remarkably nice fellow, received in society—not here, in fact, a money or a New York person was encountered by his family figure and he in long standing in all the courts of the realm.

Miss Wilson—she was the sister of the young Swedish Minister—received a very handsome dowry, and became Countess Lewenhaupt, and in the national kingdom it is that, that the couple is now able to live and entertain as varying royal style as the Swedish capital. They rent a luxuriously furnished, good for to my bottomless palace situated just opposite the king's castle on the north side of the river overlooking the outlet of Lake Mälaren into the Baltic.

During a long time it had been my ambition and intention to interview the American Swedish society belle for the purpose of hearing from her own lips what she thought of her change of nationality, for she emigrated with her parents and the Swedish people in general.

Interviewing is not so commonly practiced in Sweden promptly because most people have not yet quite adapted to an interview. It is not regarded as fair play but know.

Being convinced that the common had learned to take the same view of things, I determined to give my reporter crack, a special duster on my in the United States. A decent dinner did not approach by repeating to the aforementioned
