TALKED EXEMPTION.

to the end its adoption in preference to the scheme proposed.

Cruse said that the present law was a good one. The provision proposed was too liberal. He objected to the idea of its adoption because it did the married people exactly what it did the married men.

Hickenlooper said it did not necessarily follow that because Judge Conley was a great constitutional lawyer and that he had met with success in Michigan with a similar provision that his wife be understood conditions that would do for Utah where he didn't understand them. The existing exemption law in Utah was much better than the one proposed.

A FIXED LIMIT.

Evans, of Uinta, offered an amendment as follows: "Every person, the head of a family, shall have exempt from execution real estate to the value of $1,500, including a home thereon."

ANY CURRENT RESOLUTION.

Cover, of Utah, offered the following amendment: "A homestead, as provided by law, shall be exempt from sale under any process of law and shall not be alienated without the joint consent of husband and wife, when that relation exists; but no property shall be exempt from sale for taxes or for the payment of obligations contracted for the purchase of said premises or for the erection of the improvements thereon."

Varian said he was unalterably and certainly opposed to fixing in the Code any dollar amount for the maximum of exemptions. It should be left to the Legislature. Exemption laws were a very good thing to protect home owners, especially in time of great financial stress.

FOUR SCORE PAIN.

The Evans and Cover amendments were both voted down and Thomson moved to amend by fixing exemption in any kind of real estate at $1,500.

SHADE OF PANDLER.

Varian offered the following substitute for section 2: "The Legislature shall provide by law for the selection of home of families, and exemption of homestead from sale on execution."

NO WIDOWS IN SAN JUAN.

There was a superabundance of discussion on the substitute and Hammond said—Usually when a compromise is offered by a Republican it is sufficient to arouse my suspicion (laughter) but the substitute from Mr. Varian, the gentlemanly gentleman from San Juan, has my hearty endorsement. It provides for heads of families and so San Juan knew, got a member whose today it is worth (laughter.) Of course we can't tell what will happen down that way as we are away off in the wilds, among the Indians, and an outbreak might occur at any time, that would leave us with some widows than there are in Salt Lake. (Laughter.) But the legislature will take care of them.

TO PROTECT THE HOMESTEAD.

Evans, of Weber, announced that in interest of this Varian substitute he would vote to Would offer the following:

"Every homestead of not exceeding 160 acres of land, the dwelling house thereon, and the appurtenances, to be selected by the owner thereof, at the option of the owner, any lot in any city, village or recorded town plat, or such parts of lots thereon, and their appurtenances, owned by any resident of the State, of at least the value of $1,500, shall be exempt from forced sale in execution or any other final process from a court for any debt contracted after the adoption of this Constitution. Sections may be made from time to time parcels of such lands to the amount of the same herein designated. Such exemption shall not extend to any mortgage thereon, lawfully created, but such mortgage or other alienation of such lands, by the owner thereof, if a married man, shall not be valid without the signature of his wife to the same."

Thomson said he favored the Evans proposed amendment, and James spoke in behalf of the Varian substitute, while Mulvey and Cannon looked with modified satisfaction upon the Evans amendment.

SHORT AT BETTER THAN COMMA.

On the suggestion of Richards, Varian amended his substitute to read as follows, after which it displaced all amendments and the original section as taken up: "Judge Conley: "The Legislature shall provide by law for the selection by each head of a family of exemption of a homestead or the value of at least $1,500 from sale on execution."

AFTER THE OWNER'S DEATH.

Section 3 providing for the exemption of the homestead of a family, after the death of the owner thereof, for the payment of his debts contracted after the adoption of the Constitution, in certain cases, during the minority of his children, was stricken out as was also section 15, which read as follows: "If the owner of the homestead die, leaving a widow but no children, the same shall be exempt, and the trade and profession (real) relative to her benefit during the time of her widowhood, unless she be the owner of a homestead in her own right."

SIGHTED SERPENT HANDLING.

The final section, also drawn by Judge Conley, was not slightly amended. It reads as follows:

"Husband and personal estate of every female, acquired before marriage, and all property to which she may after wards become entitled by purchase, gift, grant, inheritance or devise, shall be and remain the estate and property of such female, and shall not be liable for the debts, obligations or contracts of her husband, and may be entered or encumbered by her as if she were unmarried."

SUNDOWN'S BAD LUCK.

Marioch, of Beaver, offered the following section to the section on mineralogy which were voted out on the point being raised that they were the equivalent of propositions voted long ago in the committee of the whole and in the Convention.

Section 1. The waters of all natural streams, springs, lakes and reservoirs of all kinds within the boundaries of the state are hereby declared to be the property of the state, but such ownership shall in no way impair any existing vested or acquired right to the use of such waters.

Sec. 2. Priority of appropriation for beneficial uses shall give the owner right to appropriation shall be defined, exceptions when such denial is demanded by public interest. The right of eminent domain shall extend to land and water rights.

Sec. 3. There shall be established a department of agriculture under the direction of an officer to whom fees, duties, salary, term of office and mode of selection shall be prescribed by law.

Sec. 4. The necessary rights of way for canals, pipe lines, flumes, ditches and reservoirs are a means of the development of the resources of agriculture of the State, is hereby declared a public use and subject to condemnation and appropriation of the State.

RESOLUTIONS OF THE COMMITTEE.

The committee here came out from behind the curtain, after which Varian, acting chairman of the committee on rules, presented the following, which was adopted:

Mr. President—The committee on rules to consider the rules for the government of the Convention, by A. Hewlett, respectfully report the following resolution and recommend its adoption:

Resolved, That the Constitution of the State of Utah be carefully engrossed, without title, preamble or enacting clause, on parchment, about 14x17, and that the same, when properly attested by the President and secretary of the Convention, and signed by the delegates, or a majority thereof, be bound between boards in convenient form, and then deposited in the office of the Secretary of the Territory for delivery to the Secretary of State for the State of Utah; and that a sufficient number of copies be similarly bound and deposited by the President and secretary of the Convention, and bound in like manner, be delivered to the Utah Commissioner for Utah to be transmitted to the President of the United States.

A recess was then taken until 2 p.m.

TO DRAFT AN ADDRESS.

The Convention Then Fix Phraseology and Reference Matters Etc.

On reconvening this afternoon, President Smith announced that it would be necessary to appoint a committee to draft an address to the people, to be presented to them at the same time that the Constitution is submitted to the people for their votes.

Underwood moved that a committee of eight be appointed for that purpose, the President to be one of the number. Carried, with authority to the President to name such committee.

FINAL REVISION REFERRED.

The Convention then resumed the work of final revision of the articles as referred by the committee on compilation and arrangement. The legislative article was first read and eight amendments were made in the way of punctuation.

Rice—I move that the surveying and meandering clerk be given authority to make all necessary changes in punctuation.

Cross—The committee will make all such changes as are necessary.

Hart—Why, then will it need—I may spare all my work. We cannot and must not leave this very important work to the engrossing clerk or any committee.

Cross—Well, if the Convention stops to make the corrections, it will lose much valuable time.

The President—I submit to the Mr. Hart is right and that we should do that work ourselves, right here and now.

Cross—Well, it will be attended to all right.

Holmes—We don't know that. All necessary corrections should be made by the Convention.

At 4 o'clock the convention was still wrestling with and perspiring over the work in hand. Commas were converted into semicolons, colons into periods, "herein" was made "therein," "thereto" "thereon," lower case letters were reversed into capitals, capitals were changed to small letters, "ly" were proved "ly" dollar, plural made singular and singular plural, rough places were made smooth—sometimes—sometimes the ruggedness was not removed, sentences were shortened, lengthened, rounded, supplied with parenthetical and other expressions according to the Convention's temper. At rare times the delegates were threatened with an attack of punctuation and syntax nightmare.

The Reception to the Delegates.

Tonight the Constitution (remote will be the guests of prominent Salt Lake ladies "who appreciate their efforts in the interest of the coming State." That they will be royally entertained is a foregone conclusion. The committee in charge is composed of members of the fair sex, each of whom is known as a pleasing and successful hostess.

Today, as for days past, arrangements have been going on for the reception until now all is in readiness. The great majority of delegates will attend and the reception will present one of the liveliest scenes in its history. The reception will be held from 8 till 11 p.m.

Mrs. Andrews' Funeral.

The funeral of the late Mrs. A. L. Andrews took place at 10 o'clock this morning. The services were well-attended, and the floral tributes were numerous. Deputies were stationed from her parents to the house that day were Benjamin Rich, Sr., and the witnesses of the funeral. The message to her husband received no reply. It appeared that she was to be given a quiet burial, without any ceremonies, which some were delighted out, desired to pay the expenses of the mortal.

Judge McNally Puzzled.

A large and impressive box was delivered at the residence of Judge Judge McNally on the Fourth Ward street, last evening, by an expressman, who declined to say from whom it came or anything about it. When he opened the box he was found to be filled with oranges of the choicest growth. There was nothing to indicate the source of the bounty of the judge, where greatly appreciating the present, is curious to know why he should have been thus specially singled out as a mark of surpassing favor.

Papers in the Bigelow Suit Filed Today.

TRENTON, N. J., May 2.—The papers in the case of Rosalie Bulkley, better known as Zella Nickelson, against George J. Gould for $50,000 were filed this morning in the office of the supreme court. The papers aver that plaintiff was in possession of a check or deposit certificate of $40,000 which she afterwards lost to Jason Gould. It was stated by George J. Gould, who has joined in other proceedings (repeatedly) sued to recover the charges that Gould fraudulently contract the certificate in his name. The plaintiff was sued for $10,000 of which sixteen cents (?) was sent the court to explain to Jay Alexander that was so far and not to be one cent of the suit. The case goes the rounds.

Dr. Budwerdine has accepted an office to accept the chair of anatomy from an eastern medical college, and in consequence will be in Salt Lake but a short time longer. Those who wish to avail themselves of his skill should do so at once as he will not remain after the first of June.

He has fitted some extremely difficult cases and gives excellent satisfaction, some of which he had despaired of ever improving upon right, some, through the medium of glasses, have been relieved from headaches, smarting and inflamed lids; nothing of value to the eyes accompanied by burning sensations, and various other nervous sensations.

His ability to honestly question of the time when the proper medical officers would not induce his work. If you have any trouble with your eyes, suffer from headaches, or can't see as you may and can agree upon the charge of consulting with good authority, "an ounce of Prevention is worth a pound of cure."
