LEGAL BUSINESS.

Messrs. Warner and Houtz have prepared a complaint in a suit to compel an accounting, in which Josephine Christiansen, of Manti, Sanpete county, administratrix of the estate of Joseph Christiansen, deceased, is the plaintiff and Rasmus Clawson, H. P. Larsen, Ole Olsen and James Armstrong are the defendants. The complaint, which will be filed in the Seventh district court, sets out that Rasmus Clawson was appointed administrator of the estate of Joseph Christiansen, deceased, June 22nd, 1888, and removed May 8th, 1898, and that he has failed to account for $10,785.36, which he has received from personal property as administrator of the estate. This amount, in addition to real estate, he is asked to turn over to the plaintiff, who also asks for $[illegible] damages said to have been sustained by reason of Clawson's failure to properly manage the estate. The other defendants are Clawson's sureties and plaintiff prays they may be decreed to pay such sum as plaintiff may be entitled to.

Clawson formerly lived in Ephraim, Sanpete county, and was for many years a United States deputy marshal previous to statehood. In the fall of 1897 he left the State, considerable surprise was manifested at his departure, as his family and friends did not know where he went to.

The R. G. W. railway has arranged to run excursion trains in Utah county for the Tabernacle concert Tuesday evening.

At an informal meeting of the mayor and city council held last evening to talk over some plan for lighting the city, while nothing positive was agreed upon, the general trend of the opinions expressed was in favor of adopting the mayor's suggestion to light J and Seventh streets, through the business part of the city and arrangements to that end will most likely be made.

The old folks' entertainment given in the Second ward meeting house yesterday afternoon was a very pleasant event, enjoyed alike by the veterans and their entertainers. There were present ten persons over 80 years of age, 32 over 70, and 42 over 60. A delicious dinner was prepared for them and an interesting program of speeches, songs, recitations, etc., was rendered.

A marriage license has been issued to Peter F. Boyack, aged 24, and Hannah E. Larsen, aged 22, both of Spanish Fork.

Miss Maude May Babcock gave a very interesting elocutionary recital at the Brigham Young academy Saturday evening, under the auspices of the literary society. Musical selections were rendered by Miss Monahan, Mrs. Frank Ramsey and Miss Foster.

Elder Bert Whittaker of Kanosh, a student at the Brigham Young academy, has been called on a mission to the Southern States. He expects to leave in June.

Joseph Broadbent, who has been engaged in teaching school at Mesa, Ari., has returned to Provo, with his family and expects to make his home here. He was accompanied by George Passey and his family, who will also become residents of the Garden City. Mr. Broadbent reports that the thermometer showed 114 in the shade when he left Mesa.

Mrs. E. A. Wedgwood, wife of Capt. Wedgwood, says she has not heard anything from her husband indicating that he contemplates making his home in the Philippines, after his discharge from the army, as has been reported. And she does not think he has any such intentions, although, she says, he is very favorably impressed with the country and thinks it offers unusually fine opportunities for commercial and other business pursuits.

According to a statement of Chief Engineer Yard of the R. G. W. Railway company track-laying on the Provo canyon branch will commence about June 1st, when the fifteen miles of grading for which contracts have been let and is now being let will be completed. There will, without doubt, be other grading contracts let before that time in order to carry the road to some point in Wasatch county better adapted for a terminus than the end of the fifteen miles, which is at a point in Provo canyon near Deer creek.

MOAB.

A Place of Beauty and a Joy Forever.

Special Correspondence:

Moab, Grand Co., March 2.—Our little mountain valley is again visited with fine weather, and winter is fast disappearing.

AN OASIS IN THE DESERT.

Moab in the Little Grand Valley, is an "oasis" in the desert, a haven of rest to the weary traveler. To reach this place the traveler leaves the Rio Grande Western on the north of us, at Thompsons and wends his way among the red sand-stone cliffs, across the barren desert, finally to emerge from a rugged canyon, in full view of the sparkling Grand river. If he will elevate his eyes slightly at this point, he will behold a natural picture, not so pleasing to the eye at this season of the year as it is during the months of spring, summer and autumn. A picture is presented then, of green fields, mingled with pink and white, fruit blossoms, the whole bordered with shady trees. One must visit Moab to fully appreciate its many beauties and advantages, although isolated, as it were, from the outside world.

FINE SCHOOL FACILITIES.

Since the erection of our graded school building, which cost upwards of ten thousand dollars, our school facilities are not surpassed in the State.

MEADOW.

Plowing and Sp[illegible]—A Creamery Plant—A Fine School Building.

Special Correspondence.

Meadow, Millard County, March 2.—Farmers are plowing in the fields and all are preparing for active spring work. The winter has been a mild one, [illegible] the snow has been light, so that the prospects are not so flattering for the agriculturalists.

A CREAMERY PLANT.

The people of Meadow are erecting a creamery. It is built of stone and the roof is just being put on. They expect to have it in operation in about a month. This is a step in the right direction, and will add to the prosperity of the people.

Good schools are now maintained in a handsome two story rock building that has been erected during the last year. It is designed to have the upper part furnished for amusement purposes, for which it is well adapted. The school building is an ornament to the place and a credit to the people who erected it, and will meet all the educational wants for a long time to come, and will stand as a monument of the regard of the people for the cause of education.

LOCAL INDUSTRIES.

Stockraising, sheepgrowing and general agriculture are the industries of this place. The people are a frugal, industrious, law-abiding class, united in their efforts to do good. Though few in number they are making some growth, and each year sees more land under cultivation.

The Deseret News is taken by the people who appreciate its improved appearance, and look eagerly for its appearance.

Infrequent and Improper Shampooing are responsible for dry, scrawny and variable colored hair. Most people have a goodly supply of hair, and it would be beautiful were it not that dandruff had destroyed its life and made it lustreless. Everyone's head should be shampooed once a week with some non-injurious and health-giving wash.

7 Sutherland Sisters' Scalp Cleaner

does not rot and bleach the hair, like soda, ammonia, etc. Ask the scalp cleaner with the "Hair Grower." They contain nothing but what is good for the hair and scalp.

SOLD BY DRUGGISTS.

Smith Drug Co., Main and 2nd South Sts., Salt Lake City, Utah.

MOUNT PLEASANT.

The Oregon Fever—Also the Scarlet Fever.

Special Correspondence.

Mt. Pleasant, March 4, 1899.—Quite a number of our citizens are contemplating going to Oregon to settle, as they claim the climate is better there, but most of them are large property owners and it will be hard to sell out.

Four cases of scarlet fever have been reported, and one of Mr. Louis Oldham's children succumbed to the disease, otherwise the health of the people is very good.

Business is evidently improving; we have recently had a drug store and two mercantile houses added to our business facilities.

PRICE.

Mining Boom—Thieves Apprehended.

Special Correspondence.

Price, Carbon County, March 5.—For the last week high winds have been blowing all over Castle Valley. Thursday night a slight fall of snow covered the ground, but all melted away before noon the next day. Today is the only pleasant day we have had for some time.

The health of the people is fair considering the changeable weather we are having.

Copper prospecting is all the go now. Some very good prospects have been found along the Cedar mountains.

The Price Dramatic company played the original drama, "Tempest Tossed," to a well filled house Thursday night. The play was rendered in splendid style. Those who took part in rendering it deserve great credit. The company has been requested to repeat it here in Price on the 24th inst., and at Castle Gate on the 25th inst. All proceeds will go to the Sunday school.

Charles F. Traub, the rape fiend, has been safely lodged in the county jail at Price, to await a trial in the district court at its next session.

Several arrests have been made at Castle Gate for stealing.

OUR NEIGHBORS.

Special Correspondence:

Franklin, Oneida County, Idaho, March 4, 1899.—The children of the district schools of Franklin had a fine and enjoyable time on Washington's birthday, an entertainment was given in the forenoon consisting of recitations, dialogues, declamations and singing. In the afternoon the children had a dance, and at night the Young Ladies' Improvement association gave a grand ball for the benefit of the institution.

The Oneida Mercantile Union is closing up business. The whole concern is for sale. A good chance for some enterprising merchant. A good stand with a fine trade.

James Chadwick, one of the old pioneers of Franklin, now a resident of Preston, was stricken down with an apoplectic stroke, and today is very low.

Friday evening the Young Men's Mutual Improvement association gave a [illegible] ball, the proceeds to go to buy books, etc. They had a fine and enjoyable time.

SODA SPRINGS, IDAHO.

Special Correspondence.

Soda Springs, Idaho, March 3.—We have been treated to the wildest and stormiest and winter ever experienced in Soda. Snow drifts prevail everywhere, and the people of this county are blockaded and cannot get into town on account of the snow drifts, but the general health of the people is good.

CHESTERFIELD, IDAHO.

Much Snow, and Feed Getting Scarce.

Special Correspondence.

Chesterfield, Idaho, March 2.—We have about two feet of snow on the level with prospects of more; the hay is nearly all gone with lots of sheep and cattle in the valley. Joseph T. Mabey of Bountiful, Utah, is feeding 3,000 head of sheep here and has hay enough to last until the 15th of this month. Nichols Bros. of Riverton, Utah, are feeding about the same number and can only feed until the 15th or 20th of March, and from the looks of the weather at present the snow will not go until the first of April.

William T. Higginson starts on his mission to the Northern States on the 11th of April. The Y. L. M. I. A. of this ward gave him a surprise last week and presented him with a good send off.

Mrs. C. W. Card presented her husband with a baby girl February 14. The father is overjoyed.

Mrs. Christie Williams also presented her husband with a girl February 15th. Mrs. John Balfour presented her husband with a boy February 22. This is surely a land of babies.

EMILE LOUBET.

A Sketch of the New President of the French Republic.

(Boston Herald.)

Emile Loubet has been successively deputy, cabinet minister, premier and president of the French senate. He was born on Dec. 31, 1838, at Marsanne, department of the Drome, which is in the southeastern part of France. Having completed the study of law, and obtained the degree of doctor in law, he settled in Montelimar, a town on the river Rhone, near his native village. Of this town in time he became mayor. M. Loubet's real political career began in 1871, when he was elected to the national Chamber of Deputies. The republic, at this time only six years old, was by no means secure. Dangers were especially threatening. M. Loubet took his seat in the chamber as a moderate republican. He was re-elected to the chamber in 1877 and again in 1881. In 1885 he was chosen to represent his department in the senate. In the Tirard cabinet, which was in existence less than four months, from December 12, 1887, to April 2, 1888, M. Loubet held the portfolio of minister of public works.

On the fall of the Freycinet ministry in 1892, President Carnot commissioned M. Loubet to form a cabinet. He succeeded in his task, taking for himself the post of minister of the interior. M. Loubet's cabinet took office on Feb. 28, 1892, and it stood only a little more than nine months, being overthrown on Nov. 28 of the same year.

Emile Loubet was elected president of the French senate in the year 1896, and re-elected on Jan. 12th last. He belongs to the moderate republican party. M. Loubet was the leading candidate for the office to which he has been elected. He is a good, unaffected, level-headed man, of honest, open life, and far more intellectual culture than was Faure. He is an advocate and practiced at the Montelimar bar. He is a man above suspicion. He has had a long and dignified and useful public life, and as the last and weightiest consideration, he was the candidate of M. Clemenceau as the Elysee seat for the presidency. With M. Loubet installed in the Elysee, Gen. Boulanger is less to be feared in the shape of a military pretender than he was under M. Faure, and as for Prince Victor and the Due d'Orleans, their opportunity such as it was, is gone.

M. Loubet, for having, when premier, sent the foreign secretary, M. Ribot, and Admiral Gervais to Cronstadt, is persona grata in Russia.

M. Loubet has been made the subject of innumerable stories, most of them of a character to demonstrate his great good nature. When he arrived from the south of France to assume the presidency of the senate he was met at the railroad terminus by an exceedingly well dressed and important-looking personage, whom he at once assumed to be one of the principal officials of the senate. The man in question, having greeted Loubet, informed him that his carriage was in waiting, and conducted him to it. As soon as Loubert had taken his place in the vehicle he pulled the skirts of his coat aside in order to make room beside him for his companion. Nothing, however, that the latter was about to shut the door without getting in, he inquired why he did not enter.

"I am going to ride on the box, monsieur le president," said the stranger.

"Nonsense, not a bit of it," exclaimed M. Loubet, "you'll get wet. Come inside."

"But, your excellency—"

"Come along! I insist upon it."

The stranger thereupon took his seat beside the new president of the senate, who subsequently, during the course of the ride, discovered that his companion was nothing but one of the footmen or menial servants of the presidency. It is scarcely necessary to add that the man was loud in his praise of the condescension and geniality of Chellemel Lacour's successor.

PRINCE ALFRED A TRAITOR.

German Army Secrets Told a Fascinating Woman.

Prince Alfred of Coburg, grandson of Queen Victoria, who recently died, insane, or committed suicide in an Austrian sanitarium, is now said to be the German Count Esterhazy—an army traitor. The true facts of the case are by degrees becoming known, and it has now been ascertained that the message brought by an imperial courier from the kaiser to the duke of Coburg at Gotha on the morning of his silver wedding day was that during the course of the investigation into the gambling and forgery scandal at Berlin, in which Prince Alfred, with Count Clam Egglofstein and several other young noblemen, had become involved, it has been ascertained that Prince Alfred had communicated a number of military secrets to agents of the French government.

It is this that led to Prince Alfred's being hurried away from Gotha to the sanitarium of Martinsbrunn, near Meran, in Austria, within a few hours after his father had received the message from Berlin. Insanity being the only pretext that could be given for the perpetration of such treachery.

That is what is hinted at in the German press when it is stated that his "malady" was of such a character as to bar him, under any circumstances, forever to succession to his father's throne.

There is no truth in the stories which have been circulated that he was ailing on the day of the celebration of his parents' silver wedding. On the contrary, he was very much to the fore and will be found in all the photographic groups of the reigning family of Coburg that were taken on that day; in fact, he showed no traces of either mental or physical malady, and it was not illness, but crime that caused him to be placed under restraint a few hours later.

From the investigations which are pursued at Berlin under the personal supervision of the emperor it was learned that the gambling club, run by Count Egglofstein, employed a number of French and Belgian women, of great beauty and fascination, to attract members of the aristocracy. Prince Alfred became infatuated with one of these women to such an extent as to render himself absolutely subject to her sway.

Owing to the excessive parsimony of his father, who, financially, is one of the meanest princes in Europe, he was perpetually in monetary difficulties and compelled to resort to all sorts of unsavory expedients in order to obtain funds. It was this which led him in the first place to associate himself with Count Egglofstein and to go into doubtful enterprises.

In spite of the money derived from these sources the prince became deeper and deeper involved, and finally yielded to the temptation, placed in his way by the French woman by whom he was infatuated, to sell for large sums certain valuable military secrets to the French government.

While at Berlin the prince was almost a daily guest at the table of his cousin, the emperor, where he heard everything that was going on and as an officer of the first regiment of guards, the crack corps of the Prussian army, he was in the way of getting military information.

The emperor has now discovered that a large number of most valuable military secrets and confidential matters concerning the imperial family and the imperial government have become known to the authorities at Paris, through the treachery of Prince Alfred, who is a grandson of the queen of England and of Czar Alexander II of Russia.

The only excuse to be put forward in behalf of the lad, who is now admitted even in court circles to have taken his life, is that he was driven first to the card table, then to forgery and card sharping and finally to treachery by pecuniary difficulties resulting from the failure of his father to provide for his needs in an adequate manner. He had been attached to what is generally admitted to be the most expensive regiment in the German army, without the necessary allowance to keep the pace with his comrades or to maintain his dignity as a royal prince.

The charges against Count Egglofstein, it is said, have been changed from forgery to treason. The nature of the charges against her son is supposed to have kept his mother from accompanying him to the sanitarium. It is the fate of Prince Alfred, who was a member of the family circle of the Kaiser, that is now leading Emperor William to embark upon such a determined crusade against gambling and extravagance in the army.—Kansas City Star.
