CARP FOR THE POOR.

Commissioner Mason Makes a Novel But Excellent Suggestion.

To the Editor:

For some time I have had in view the formation of parties to catch a few tons of carp, etc., to be distributed among the poor of our larger communities, and on the 21st ult I addressed the following circular letter to Fish and Game Commissioners M. C. Newell of Provo and J. A. Lambert of Ogden, and to Fishermen P. Madsen and J. W. Clark of Provo, Tanner H. Bullock of Salt Lake City and David Crafts of Deseret:

Dear Sir:—I learn that carp are now very plentiful in your public waters. Will you please let me know at your convenience are now numerous and easiest to catch? I will be glad to get your views as to the best methods of catching them in large numbers, as I suggest it would be a good thing when the weather is cooler, to get up some carp parties to catch a few tons of these fish for the poor of our communities. What do you think of such a movement? No doubt the generous railway officials will give us all the encouragement we may want by free transportation.

Please do not delay in giving me your answer, and greatly oblige, yours respectfully,

A. MILTON MASON.

With one exception the answers are enthusiastically in favor of the scheme. Tuesday, the 12th inst., is the day for the generous Statesmen of Utah county to put in a day fishing for the subject initiated. The railroads have promised me free transportation, and Bishop William B. Preston, who, with all I have conversed with on that subject, heartily indorses the movement, will receive the fish at the depot and see that they are equitably distributed among the poor of this city (irrespective of sect, party or color), through the ward Bishops and the ministers of the various churches. The fish caught in Weber and Ogden rivers will be distributed to the needy in Ogden. It is my earnest desire that no poor person be overlooked in the distribution.

In a few years when the better fishes (now unknown to such) become more numerous, I hope that large numbers of the different kinds of fishes will be caught and given to the needy, at least once a year, as I further hope that this custom will become an annual one throughout Utah in all time to come.

In his answer to me Mr. Newell writes: "I think we can get plenty of carp. The largest single haul with a seine 600 feet long was lately made just north of Provo river, and weighed 2,000 pounds." He says that over 30,000 pounds of lines bass have been caught with hook and line since June 15th last, and that the largest per cent of these were shipped to Colorado, which many persons feel as an outrage.

Mr. Lambert writes: "I heartily indorse your proposition. Our citizens think this is the best and wisest move yet made. Weber river west of Ogden is overrun with carp and suckers. I am ready at any time to do all I can."

Mr. Clark writes: "I think it is a very good idea, and I am always ready to help those that cannot help themselves."

Mr. Madsen writes: "Carp travel in large bodies all over Utah lake. We caught plenty a few days ago, but now they are scarce again. We will be glad to fill your orders to catch carp and other fish for the poor."

Mr. Bullock writes: "I think it would be a good thing for the poor, and I will help all I can to catch the carp."

Mr. Crafts writes: "Fish are very plentiful at present in the lower Sevier river, but they will soon go into winter quarters. I will furnish seine and boat and will go with the party. I will say that ducks and geese are now quite plentiful in all the waters and grain fields."

The United States fish car reached here on the 4th inst. It brought me 200 lock bass. I sent most of them to Fish and Game Commissioner N. W. Cronkhite, of Logan, planting the remainder in Utah lake. The car also brought a fine lot of eastern brook trout—1,800 for Mr. Walley to put into a lake at P. V. Junction; 1,100 for Mr. James, Big Cottonwood creek, and 1,100 for Mr. Wilson, Ogden River Power company, near Ogden.

Respectfully,

A. MILTON MASON.

LABORS IN ILLINOIS.

Elder Spencer Gives a Sketch of His Experiences.

MARION, Ill., Nov. 4, 1895.

To the Editor:

I take pleasure in enclosing the following which is a clipping from the the leading paper of this neat little town of Marion, edited by Mr. Copeland, as it is so manifestly courteous and fair in its spirit towards us:

We learn from Elder Samuel G. Spencer, president of the Indiana conference, of the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day saints, who has now, in connection with Elder Wm. C. Humphreys, made headquarters in Marion, that they will in the near future give a friendly call to each of our residents leaving a tract containing a brief explanation of their belief in God, Jesus and the Bible, which no doubt will be eagerly perused, as every one is anxious to know what other people believe. The Elder emphatically affirms that he is not in our presence for the purpose of holding debates, and discussions to cause confusion. We are satisfied that the Elders will be treated kindly here. Strangers are always so received in this community.

Since the above has been published I have had the pleasure of presenting Editor Copeland with a copy of the Book of Mormon, also a Voice of Warning, which he was very much pleased to receive, and extended his acknowledgments and thanks through the columns of his spicy paper. This gentleman, as well as several others, who are prominent in the town, I met for the first time when I first came, Oct. 1st, which they gladly accepted, and in a recent conversation with Mr. Copeland he frankly acknowledged that he had been prejudiced, "but," he remarked, "since reading these tracts, and the prophecy of Joseph Smith, on war, I now feel interested, and glad say that if you do not get any converts in this town, you will slay much prejudice." He further stated that if he could do us any good by printing notices, etc., etc., he would do so gratis.

I refer to these instances for the reason that I believe many of our Elders fail to call on the editors and leading men of the towns where they labor, and being ignorant of our true belief, and prejudiced, (as Editor Copeland says), they talk and print many things intentionally good, but are most erroneously bad before they really have an opportunity to know what we do teach. With my little experience, I would humbly suggest that Elders will find it to their advantage to introduce themselves and their reading matter to those prominent in society when they first have the opportunity, instead of avoiding them.

I have been in the field for ten months, and in justice to the people of Illinois, I feel to acknowledge that I have received kindness upon kindness, instead of unkindness. I have been invited to preach in their churches, many invitations have come verbally and by letter, that it has been impossible for me to fill all the calls, although I have held as many as thirty meetings in one month, (treated about nearly as I feel to do it). This is another evidence that knowledge and freedom will cover the earth. I have visited over 500 families, who were all strangers, with slight or no exceptions, and have never labored for one meal, (as I wished it), or a place to stay, although I have never asked for a meal nor a bed. Is not that a pretty good recommend for the people of Illinois?

I often think of the prediction of the Prophet Wilford, where I had the pleasure of hearing him predict at the conclusion of one of the Salt Lake Temple, that from that very hour the devil would cease to prevail over us as he has in the past. How literally this has been fulfilled in the present. Most any man could predict it, but God alone can move the hearts of men. Not only are the people laying aside their prejudices and false notions about us, but they are laying aside their traditions and are saying, thirty years ago there have inherited lies, vanity and things wherein there is no profit, and they are beginning to worship the God that made the heavens and the earth.

I have had the pleasure of assisting and baptizing 23 of these honest, prudent souls already, and many more are about to enter the straight path.

The summer has been surprising but a healthy one, and, as the Prophets have said, when these sicknesses should come the Saints should not escape; even so the Elders have not escaped. I have had my share among the rest, having been afflicted for five weeks with typhoid malaria, but I acknowledge the hand of the Lord in my recovery. I also desire to keep the useful memory the family who ministered to me during my sickness, James G. Grimie. They could not have been more kind and I been their own son.

A sad accident occurred at Brother James Fogarty's on Saturday afternoon. A bottle of carbolic acid had been left where their only boy, four and a half years of age, could reach it, and he drank from it, thinking it was cough medicine. We immediately administered unsweetened oil freely, also bacon grease. We united our faith with our prayers and claimed the promise of Jesus to the believers, with a result that we now give Him the praise for the recovery of the child—as the doctor said that it was a rare thing for a person to recover who had swallowed this acid.

The same evening there was in progress a Free-Will Baptist revival. While the preacher was using all his persuasive powers to send his hearers to heaven, part of his audience on the outside of the building were listening to the report of a pistol—another way of sending souls to heaven. The victim is not yet dead.

Ever praying for the welfare of Zion and the spread of light and knowledge, that the gross darkness that has so long blinded the eyes of mankind may be forced to flee from the earth, that Jesus may come and reign a thousand years, I remain, your co-laborer in the Gospel, SAMUEL G. SPENCER.

OGDEN.

OGDEN, UTAH, Nov. 7, 1895.

The Election.

The city election resulted in the election of H. H. Spencer, Democrat, for mayor, breaking the present incumbent, C. Brough, Republican. To the council five Democrats and five Republicans were elected. The Republicans elected the recorder, treasurer and police justice.

The entire Republican legislative ticket was elected. Robson, Democrat, was elected district judge and Hall for superintendent of schools was chosen. The rest of the state ticket got Republican majorities.

Yesterday and last night the streets were crowded with people anxious for the latest election returns.

Republicans here are very much elated over their party success throughout the country.

The sealed which has heretofore been a Republican paper, gave a notice that in the future it will be "independent."

Killed by a Train.

Mr. Hubble, a clerk in the U. P. freight office, missing since last Monday night, was found this morning at 7:30 o'clock, his dead remains lying on the track at the south end of the freight house, his body being cut in two.

Mary Anderson as Hamlet.

At the age of twelve I first heard the name of him who was to awaken the serious side of my nature, and eventually shape my interpretation. O, night Dr. Griffin, who sat in his youth pride mounted on his saddle as an amateur, took down from the bookshelf, a large, well worn, red and gold volume.

"This," he said, "contains all the plays of William Shakespeare, and I mean to read to you the great master's masterpiece, 'Hamlet.'" Though I knew nothing of the subtle thought and beauty of the tragedy, the mere story, characters, and scene all that mostly appeal to a boy, I became absorbed in the tragedy, the more there that pervades all of Shakespeare's dramatic works, delighted and thrilled me. For days I could think of nothing but the pale face and inky cloak of the melancholy prince. The old red volume had suddenly become like a casket filled with jewels, whose flames and flashes I thought might glorify a life. I often stopped to look at it with longing eyes, and one day could not resist climbing up to take it from its shelf. From that time most of my play hours were spent poring over it.

One night, not long after, the family were surprised to see me enter the parlor, enveloped in one of Dr. Griffin's army cloaks. I was speaking tragically, and at once began the speech:

"Angels and ministers of grace defend us!
Be thou a spirit of health or goblin damned"

"Angels and ministers of grace defend us!
Be thou a spirit of health or goblin damned."

The latter innovation was made to evade having on my consciousness so sinful a swear as damned. These present, seeing the drift of my sentiments, burst into laughter at the droll little figure with its much too wide and sweeping train to be disrespectful. I indignantly quitted the room, falling over the numerous cloak in what was meant to be a majestic exit. Certainly a very unpromising first appearance in the bard's great masterpiece!—North American Review for November.

Some Effects of Municipal Administration in England.

The new school of municipal administration in England enters into the life of the people. It not only takes upon itself the unprofitable side of the local business, but shows very plainly that a well governed municipality can offset to give the privileges by which corporations may enrich themselves at the expense of the community; that such profits belong to the community at large or should be used to promote the general welfare.

Beginning with the municipalization of gas and water, the idea has extended to tramways, markets, baths, libraries, picture galleries, technical schools, artisans' dwellings, cricket fields, football grounds, music centre, gymnasia for girls as well as boys, registration of refreshment tariffs, free chairs in the parks, free music, and last though not least, it is proposed to invade the sacred rights of John Bung himself and municipalize the gin shops and public houses.—North American Review for November.

OBITUARY.

GEORGE S. BAILEY.

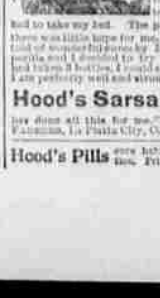
George S. Bailey, one of the old and well known residents of Mill Creek, quietly passed from this life at his home Monday, November 4th, at about 9:30 a.m. He had been ailing for about a year past though not entirely confined to his bed till a few weeks since. He was suddenly attacked with the chills while at meeting about thirteen months ago, which complicated brought on the jaundice, of which he died.

Brother Bailey was baptized a member of the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints in Paris, England, in 1850, emigrated to America in 1861 was a captain of ten in Appleton Harmon's company, was ordained a Teacher in the fall of 1861 in Salt Lake City, where he lived for two years. Him and family then moved to Mill Creek in the spring of 1866. He was shortly after ordained a member of the 52d quorum of Seventies and was promoted from that to the ninety-first quorum of which he was a member when he died. He was the father of twenty-two children, eleven of whom are still living; he was a leader of the choir for many years and clerk of the ward since 1878. He prided himself in keeping his accounts straight and has settled the tithing accounts of the ward since the death of Bishop Reuben Miller. He was a lover of history, literature, and flowers; took an active part in the Sunday School for years, and nearly a bouquet of flowers was cut from his garden to deck the graves of his friends. He acted in the capacity of treasurer, watchman, secretary and general servant of the public; was noted for his honesty and faithfulness to duty, and like many others of his brethren served eleven months' term in the penitentiary. He was full of faith in the Gospel, and died with a righteous hope in the resurrection.

The funeral services were held in the Mill Creek Ward house, conducted by Bishop J. C. Hamilton. The house was filled with his friends and family, and among the speakers were Bishop Hamilton, J. H. Hill, John Murphy, John Morgan, John Cook, James Miller, Jens Hansen, and Joseph E. Taylor. A large procession followed his remains to the city grave yard where his body was interred. (Com.)

Makes the Blood Pure

This is the secret of the cures by Hood's Sarsaparilla. Read this:



"I am so glad to write that I am now perfect health and it all is because Hood's Sarsaparilla made my blood pure. My health broke down with trouble peculiar to women, my nervous system was shattered and I had to take my bed. The physicians said there was little hope for me. A neighbor persuaded me to try Hood's Sarsaparilla and I decided to try it. When I had taken 3 bottles I could sit up and now I am perfectly well and strong."

Horses Kick

is self-defence. It is their most vigorous form of protest against the abuse of Salt Nails that are driven into their feet to rivet on their shoes. Horseshoes often use weak nails in ignorance of the danger that is liable to follow.

This is what happens: One part sinks out, where it should for clinching the nail, and the other is under the shoe. Sure nails are the result of the Cold-Rolled and by which the fibres of metal are separated and can often be pried apart with the finger-nail. The nail is a wedge, and can be easily distinguished by the rough edge along the sides near the point.

Putnam Nails

are exclusively Hot-Forged and Pointed or Polished, precisely like the old-fashioned hand-made nail. This process welds all particles of iron closely together, makes a compact, firm nail that cannot Split, Sliver or Break and is Absolutely Safe.

Examine the nails in your smith's shoe box. If they edges are smooth, the nails will wear smooth and go to the Horse. If they are rough, they will cut the hoof, which may be the cause of your horse going lame. Insist that your smith uses Putnam nails and you will avoid trouble.
