Escape of Convicts in Colorado.—Big Field Fire Between Manti and Ephraim.—Mining and Other Items.

It is reported that a great quantity of mountain silver is being found in Colorado.

Eight horse thieves were killed in the northern part of Idaho the other day and hung up to a tree till they were dead.

The ladies who compose the World's Fair committee for Uinta county have called a meeting to be held at Logan on next Friday afternoon to discuss important business.

The Ladies' Glee club of Logan has effected a permanent organization, with the following officers: Mrs. Ray Ottery, president; Miss Hattie Thatcher, vice president; Maggie Worthington, secretary; Louise Torgerson, treasurer.

There was a big field fire between Manti and Ephraim last week. A strip of country two miles wide and four miles long was burned over. Fortunately the fire encountered no other buildings than a few stacks. The ground was, however, burned bare of grass and stubble.

About four weeks ago Mrs. Marinda Hadley, of Hinsdale, Dorset county, had $20 in greenbacks which she was carrying in an envelope in her pocket. She had an idea to wear part of them on her ear, but lost it, but found $10 of it near the Academy hall and a watch by Mr. Hadley resulted in finding of the remaining $10.

A special to the Deseret News from Seattle, Washington, says: Henry J. Snively, the Democratic candidate for governor, has begun suit against the Press Times for $10,000 damages. The Press Times published several editorial last Saturday charging fraudulent ballot stuffing and fraud while a resident of Grafton, W. Va.

A few nights ago Oliver Rowley, a young man found in Phoenix, Arizona, was run over and almost instantly killed by a train at the stockyards there. The train was engaged in taking a company of politicians to a meeting in Tempe, and Rowley was a member of the Phoenix band accompanying them. As he attempted to step from one coach to another he fell beneath the wheels.

The flour market at Portland, Oregon, is in a very depressed condition owing to the stagnation of trade. Prices on the 24th inst. received the lowest point known for fifteen years. Standard and Walla Walla brands are selling in carload lots for $3.60 a barrel, and a large lot for shipment was sold for $3.40 a barrel. The lowest figure reached heretofore was seven years ago, when the price went down to $3.55. The present figure is lower than the price of wheat warrants.

Two townsmen of Lyons, Colorado, were sent as delegates to the stone quarries, south of town, to get the names of those men who are not registered, but are entitled to vote in this precinct. They went there and unceremoniously, without warning, they were attacked by the overseer in the quarry. He struck one man in the face and kicked the other brutally, and then commenced throwing stones at them, but they finally made their escape.

Judge T. T. Lee, a prominent criminal lawyer of El Paso, states that several months ago he was offered $500 by Doc Sing, a wealthy Chinaman of Tucson, Mexico, if he would clear five Chinamen, who had been arrested for crossing the border. The case was not brought before the United States; Doc Sing stating that he had paid the treasury agent, L. S. Irve, $500 for not prosecuting, and was thus $500 ahead and had a sure thing. The grand jury is investigating more charges against the same parties and others.

The Humboldt mine at Ouray, Colorado, has just started up with a force of eighty men. The mine has been lying idle for the last two months, while the new machinery was being put in position. Foreman McMahon hired every idle man to the city yesterday and a cavalcade of saddle horses went out to the mine yesterday. The Humboldt is one of the big mines of this famous district, and when Weaver is elected and silver is worth what it should be, it will be one of the great producers of Colorado. It is the extension of the Smuggler vein of Marshal basin, which is located the Union, Smuggler, Mendota, Sheridan and other great wealth producers, and the ore body is as large and of as rich ores as the best of them.

The first break of any importance which has occurred on the Colorado state cliff took place on the afternoon of the 15th inst., the exact time not being known. A large piece of rock, which were at work at the east end of the cliff, and were in charge of three different overseers, each one having a gang under his direct charge. When the order to fall in was given at the time of quitting work, Overseer Dixon found he was three men short, and, after a careful search, no trace of the missing men could be found. The rest of the convicts were hurried to the prison and the escape reported, when a thorough search was made, guards being sent to all points, but at the present time no trace has been found of them. This is the first escape of any importance which has been made from the state cliff, and but little chance, it is said, exists for these men to get away.

A terrible tale of exposure and narrow escape from death on Pike's peak, Colorado, comes from the signal station at the summit. A. J. Sayer, who had been engaged by the signal service to store away some coal and wood for the winter, left Manitou early last Friday afternoon for the summit, and at 5:30 in the afternoon reached the saddle house in safety. The building has a telephone, and communicating with Observer Myers on the peak, told him that he had reached there, and having rather tired night, set on way rather that night. In about ten minutes he called up again and said he thought he would complete the journey at once. As he did not arrive during the night the people on the summit became alarmed and early Saturday morning Observer Myers and the rest at the station, decided to start out to find him. Late in the afternoon they were rewarded by the discovery of the lost one, but when they rescued him he was found to be in a terrible condition. In attempting over the snow in the darkness, he had wandered into the rocks and effectually over a precipice, falling 300 or 400 feet. Besides innumerable cuts and bruises, necessitated by exposure in his wounded condition, both hands were found to be frozen. In the fact the unfortunate man had lost his hat and gloves. With great difficulty he was carried to the summit and a message from there this morning states that he is getting along as well as could be expected and despite the dright prospect of saving his life, it is thought not his frozen hands will be saved also.—Denver News.

An Impudent Letter.

The emperor of Russia during last year a letter to the Czar, asking to be allowed to put into the hands of a convicted thief, whom he had caught. The convicted, notwithstanding the order, deposited the letter in his pocketbook and the message was not discovered until five or six hours had elapsed. In the meantime the regular mail for Russia and indeed all western Europe, was made up and departed.

As soon as the emperor was told what had been done the post master was summoned, the whole mail, bag and baggage, back to St. Petersburg. About fifteen hours was lost. Everything was reopened, the impudent missive recovered and placed in the country's care, and the post master thus the mail was allowed to resume its journey.—Exchange.

The Rip in Kites.

The small Peruvian, mentioned in some of our editorial columns as having been stolen by Colombian emissaries of Chamberlain, has arrived safely but indistinct. While in the army he was forced to wade three miles, but he is now strong enough to bear the million.

It is always moist; the smoke is cool, sweet and full of that rich comforting flavor only obtainable by blending the highest grades of Virginia natural leaf tobacco.
