An old lady of Odine, Vermland, used a shocking remedy for dyspepsia. Just after her husband had died she filled his mouth with brandy, poured it out again, and gave it to her son, who is a hard drinker.

Six hundred miners are now on a strike at the Norberg mines. A meeting of a thousand laborers at Eskilstuna has declared itself in sympathy with the Norberg strikers.

A farmer's wife in the parish of Southern Moere, Smaland, has just given birth to her twenty-third child. She never had more than one at a time, and she is not very old yet.

At a Malmo roller mill a man fell through a trap door in the floor, and slid down into an immense chest of flour. When he was taken out he was already dead, and the lungs and windpipe were filled with hard packed flour. It is supposed that he must have died much more quickly than if he had been drowned in water.

A somewhat economical lady of Blekinge, says The North, was to walk about a mile from her estate's depot to her home one evening. The weather being bad, however, she asked a farmer who happened to be present to take her home in his wagon. He consented to do this, and off they started. Arriving at her home the woman ceremoniously took her purse out of her pocket and let a number of copper coins pass through her fingers. Her choice fell on a five-ore piece (1½ cents), which she handed to the farmer. Before she realized what he meant he lifted her up in the wagon again and drove post haste back to the depot, and left her there so she could walk home and save her five ores.

A young gentlemen got tired of batching it, went to a girl, proposed, was accepted, and went to the minister to have the marriage announced. So far, so good. But here a surprise party appeared on the scene. A tenant here with an heir on her arm. She objected to his marriage with the heirless lady; the minister took her side; the young man pleaded; the heirless lady stood the cloud from her foot, and departed; and the next Sunday the marriage of the young man and the lady with the heir was announced from the pulpit.

Six children out of seven in one family died within a week of diphtheria in Folldevold, north of Trondhjem, and were all buried on the same day.

"Weary Men," Arne Garborg's new book, is spoken of as a remarkable work, "one of the greatest in the literature of the North; the history of a soul told so lucidly and with such enhancing power as to make the reader confess to himself, This book will cut deep marks in the the spiritual life of the Northlands."

A poor editor, who was fool-hardy enough to criticise in his paper some military officers, though he still was carried on the rolls as a soldier, had his doom sealed the other day, when the supreme court approved the sentence of the court-martial, fixing the penalty at 20 days solitary imprisonment and a fine of 25 kroner.

P. G. Halvorsen, one of the most prominent business men of Bergen, made an assignment the other day. The assets, however, are said to be greatly in excess of the liabilities, and it is to be hoped that the difficulty will only be temporary.

The Norwegian Bible Society has in the 48 years it has been in existence organization circulated 530,274 copies of the holy scriptures and other religious books. Two new Bible editions embodying the new version of the Old Testament, have been published by it the current year. The revised edition of the New Testament is being pushed vigorously, but several years will pass before its completion.

Cod liver oil, the production of which almost entirely is in Norwegian hands, was introduced as a medicine in England in 1782, in Germany not until 8 years later, and in France as late as 1837. Long before it became an article of commerce the fishermen on the west coast employed the oil as a popular remedy. On the average about 420 cod fish livers are required to produce one hektoliter of refined oil. The nutritive value of two table spoonsful of the oil is equivalent to that of one half pound of meat.

University Club.

At the Third annual meeting of the University Club last night the following election of officers took place: President, Ellsworth Daggett; vice-president, H. M. McCartney; secretary, W. B. Wood; treasurer, S. H. Fields, Jr. Those chairmen of committees were chosen: Social committee, Walter Murphy; house committee, W. K. Wilson; finance committee, Dr. G. W. Foster; committee on admission to membership, C. P. Brooks. The following was adopted: "Resolved, That the committee on literature, art and education be requested to have a report, by some member of the club conversant with the subject, upon the condition and needs of the University of Deseret, with suggestions of means and methods by which the club may assist in promoting the University and its interests." There was a good attendance, and at the close of the business portion of the proceedings an enjoyable "social" took place.

Dr. Bascom Hart.

Last night, between 7 and 8 o'clock, as Dr. Bascom and wife were sleighriding in the eastern part of the city the sleigh was partially overturned and the occupants thrown out. Mrs. Bascom escaped unhurt, but the doctor was badly injured about the left hip. He was immediately conveyed to the residence of his brother-in-law, Mr. E. R. Eldridge, where he was called upon by Dr. McLean. Later in the evening he was removed to his own residence, where, at last accounts, he was resting easily.

Sunday School Conference.

The conference of the Sunday schools of Kanab Stake convened at Orderville, December 6, at 7 p. m. Stake Superintendent Joseph Mousley presiding. After the opening exercises the superintendent spoke briefly, reporting the condition of the various schools. Those that are in running order are prospering.

The Orderville ward Sunday school then rendered a very interesting programme.

Elder Edward Stevenson, of Salt Lake City, addressed the meeting on the divinity of the Book of Mormon, referring to ancient prophecies having been uttered concerning its coming forth, and the evidence now on this continent of its being inspired proof positive of its Coming Divinity.

Apostle John Henry Smith commended and encouraged the children who had worked, paid, and all engaged in the Sabbath school cause.

A good spirit prevailed and all felt well repaid for attending.

Narrow Wagon Tires and Bad Roads.

While the subject of new roads is being agitated for our legislators and the agricultural journals, the farmers are busy working up the subject in a practical—though possibly not in the most proper—way by industriously, and at much expense of time and team, cutting up and destroying the roads by driving heavily loaded, narrow tired wagons over them. When we see a man on a heavily loaded, narrow tired wagon urging along his jaded team, engaged in the mental power to make, mend, and then grumbling because of the "horrid muddy roads, he seems to be an object for pity.

The only thing he seems disposed to do to make matters different is to throw some hard words into the meadow places, and then continue his course of turning out to the highway with his two deeper every time the ground is too hard for plowing. Now, if the farmers are to do anything for the roads, let them begin by legislating the narrow tires off the heavy lumber and truck wagons. I have seen a single heavy, narrow tired wagon in the distance of a half mile cut more ruts than could be repaired in six days of ordinary road work.

The question seems to be about this: Which is the better economy, wide tires and good roads or narrow tires and bad roads? The narrow tires are as much out of place on the farm as on the highway. How absurd that fact and philosophy are in favor of wide tires, and say that when all the others use wide tires they will do so. They seem to be afraid that they will do more than their proportionate share of good in this world. It seems that the legislature may have to help them out of their ruts.—Colorado Rural World.

Tommy Picked the Police Chief's Pocket.

In Madison, Wis., there is a chief of police, J. E. Adamson, who is clubbing himself. Saturday he visited Chicago to get Thomas Kingston, said fourteen, who was wanted at Madison for larceny. He had been arrested by Chicago officers. Late in the evening he handcuffed himself to young Kingston and started for the train. Before he reached Desplaines the chief was snoring loud and long.

Kingston is a cunning little rascal. He saw his opportunity. He quietly went through the pockets of his sleeping chief and found the key which unlocked his handcuff. Stealthily he crept over the snoring officer, and when the train stopped at Desplaines the chief and his prisoner had become perfect strangers.

The train had gone a good many miles when Chief Adamson awoke. Of course he was mad, but when he looked for the key with which to remove the handcuff from his own wrist his wrath knew no bounds, for Tommy had taken it with him. All efforts to remove the bracelet were fruitless, and until he reached Madison his left hand and wrist were buried deep in his overcoat pocket. They were tired of sight.

Kingston was picked up by Chicago officers. He is at the Desplaines street station waiting for another hunt with Chief Adamson.—Chicago Tribune.

A Short Lived Lake.

"A month hence," says a California engineer of reputation, "the Salton lake will have dried up." Salton lake, it will be remembered, is the shallow inland sea which was formed by a breach in the Colorado river, whose waters in modern times, at least, flowed into the Gulf of California, as we know it. The basin of the dried Reed lake, however, was once a part of the gulf, and if the flow of water had continued some modern improvements might indeed have been effected. The river will not come again till spring, when the lake may refill, but the reader should remember it permanent would have a mitigating effect upon the dreaded Arizona climate, of which dire stories are told. Weird things could happen then the tapping of the Colorado river higher up, so that all its waters might flow into the old channels and make the wilderness blossom with the rose.—New York Commercial Advertiser.

Made Things Lively.

Although the school was called in Holiday, Conn., was tightly closed during the vacation, there was one caller that kicked up a ruppus. It was a tramp-bell, and where it entered can only be conjectured. During the short stay it passed through a wide range of studies, including spelling, reading, grammar, arithmetic and geography. Besides throwing new light upon the books treating of these subjects, it tore up the floor, splinter of the doors and in its exiting can carried off part of the window sash.—Yankee Blade.

WOOD'S PLASTER.

I have been troubled with catarrh for about twenty years; I had lost sense of smell entirely, and I had almost lost my hearing. My eyes were getting so dim I had to get some one to thread my needle. Now I have my hearing as well as I ever had, and I can see to thread my needle as well as ever I did, my sense of smell is partly restored, and it seems to be improving all the time. I think it due to using Ely's Cream Balm for catarrh. Mrs. E. E. Grimes, Bennett, Perry Co., O.

Prevention is Better

Than cure, and those who are subject to rheumatism can prevent attacks by keeping the blood pure and free from the acid which causes the disease. For this purpose Hood's Sarsaparilla is used by thousands with great success. It is the best blood purifier.

Constipation is caused by loss of the peristaltic action of the bowels. Hood's Pills restore this action and invigorate the liver.

A Preventive for Croup.

We want every mother to know that croup can be prevented. True croup never appears without a warning. The first symptom is hoarseness; then the child appears to have taken a cold or cough may have accompanied the hoarseness from the start. After that a peculiar rough cough is developed, which is followed by the croup. The time to act is when the child first becomes hoarse; a few doses of Chamberlain's Cough Remedy will prevent the croup. Even after a rough cough has appeared the disease may be prevented by using this remedy as directed. It has never been known to fail. 50 cent and $1 bottles for sale by E. C. M. L. A Little Girl's Experience in a Lighthouse.

Mr. and Mrs. Loren Truscott are keepers of the Gov. Lighthouse at Sand Beach, Mich., and are blessed with a daughter, four years old. Last April she was taken down with Measles, followed with a stubborn Cough and turning into a Fever. Doctors at home and at Detroit tried her hard in vain, she grew worse rapidly, until one was a mere "handful of bones." Then she tried Dr. Kings New Discovery and after the use of two and a half bottles, was completely cured. They say Dr. King's New Discovery is worth its weight in gold, yet you may get a trial bottle free at A. C. Smith & Co's Drug Store. 6*
