The Ardennes Dog.

The dog of the Ardennes accompanies the flock when it leaves the pen-fold in spring, only to return when the win-ter's snow drives the sheep home again for shelter. Each shepherd possesses one or two of these dogs, according to the size of his flock, to act as sentinels. and keep the sheep in order, but to pro-tect them from outside foes. When the herdsman has gathered his flock in some rich valley, these white, shaggy monsters crouch on the ground, ap-parently half asleep; but now and then the great ragacious eyes will open, and, passing over the whole of their charge, remain for a while fixed on the distant horizon, as though they followed a train of thought which led them away from earth-so sadly do they gaze into the

But let the mountain breeze bear to his ever-moving nostril the scent of the hated wolf, or his quick ear detect an unknown noise; then is the time to see one of these dogs in his glory. His eyes become black with flerceness; his hair stands erect; his upper lip becomes wrinkled, showing a range of white, formidable teeth, while a low growl alone escapes from his throat. When his keen faculties have detected the whereabouts of his foe, he rushes forward with a bound that overleaps all place in the night. His whereabouts is obstacles, and a bark that echoes from all the surrounding hills.

Every dog of the like breed that may be near, takes up the note, and rushes gleaming through the brush wood to join in the attack. Tender as the childhood he protects, woe to him who dare lift a hand on one of the little ones with whom he has been brought up. It is not he who buys him who is his master; it is he who fed him when a pup, who petted and shared his pittance with him -he it is who has his love, and who reciprocates his faithful affection .- Overland Monthly.
