NEWS OF THE WEST.

Divorce Decreed Her Husband Gave Her a Hot Water Bath.

A LITTLE BOY SAVES TWO LIVES.

Physician Sent to Jail for Contempt—His Wife Caught an Eloper—Killed by a Train.

Dr. Hoffmann, of San Francisco, has been committed to jail for contempt because he refused to tell the name of a disease from which one of his patients died.

A San Francisco woman, Ada H. Little has commenced suit against her husband, J. W. Little, because the latter attempted to give her a bath in boiling water.

Eugene Gregory, manager of Hawkins, Cal., was discharged on Saturday from the charge of obtaining money by false pretenses from a widow. The ground of the discharge was that it was evident that the jury were six drinks was involved when he took the money.

At San Luis Obispo, Cal., on Saturday, Charles Webster stole a horse from F. Hodgens in the building where he was held by strong chain. He escaped for another horse and made an effort to leave the country. He was caught by Constable W. F. Cook, pleaded guilty before Judge Greig and was given two years in San Quentin, all the same day.

Michael Attaubien was killed by the train at Waverly, Cal., Saturday. The team which Attaubien was driving became frightened and started to cross the track ahead of the train. The horses got across but the engine struck the wagon. The team of the dispatch driver Attaubien's head against a post in his wagon, which crushed his skull back of the right ear, and he was picked up dead when the train stopped.

Harry M. Covert, an evangelist, and Mrs. Emma Springer eloped from Brooklyn to Monk Park and traveled in the West as brother and sister. Mrs. Covert followed her husband and moved to Los Angeles, Cal., on March 1, in company with his sister. The result was that the sleeping car conductor saw the women in the car occupied by Mr. Covert and Mr. Springer husband and Mrs. Covert and her husband, who keeps him under close surveillance at a hotel.

C. A. Stockdale, a well-to-do young farmer of San Miguel, Cal., is in search of his wife, Hazel Belle Stockdale. The husband claims that Mrs. Stockdale eloped six weeks ago with F. L. Merrill. The eloping woman left her husband says, with Their three children and housed with her. Stockdale says his wife first met Merrill a year ago at San Luis Obispo, to which place she had gone for her health. The couple eloped, case before, Stockdale says, and he found them living as man and wife in San Francisco. The woman went home with him. She did not take her little boy with her when she eloped first.

An inquest held in Calipatria, which is the home of C. C. L. Hazel in Oakland has come to light and Harry Ingler, a lad of tender years, is confined with having saved two little children from a burning house. Mrs. Ingler, aged 8 years, and a little friend named Anna Kobel, were asleep upon a cot, when they suddenly awakened the mother, who, upon exploring, found the house ablaze. The children had left the room and fire had reached the bed clothes. Then he went back into the room and fought the flames until the last spark was out and the house saved. The boy was terribly burned.

The supreme court of California has again sustained the legal doctrine that work an employer directs an employee to perform with which the employee was unacquainted the employer was responsible for any damages which might result. The decision was rendered recently in the suit of John T. Gibson, an aged peanut boy, against the Sterling Furniture company. Gibson, while in the employ of the company, was directed to clean a machine he knew nothing about. In some way the machinery was set in motion, catching the boy's hand and mashing him at his life. He brought suit for $25 for damages and a jury in the lower court awarded him $4,000. This judgment the supreme court sustained.

John Theiss died in San Francisco Friday from the effects of a blow received by the fall of a water tank covering in the rear of his residence. The accident was a peculiar one. A younger man might have escaped injury, but Mr. Theiss, who was 62 years of age, could not dodge the falling tin. His great age and lack of vitality hastened his death. Theiss was sitting on the balcony in the rear of his home running himself and reading. The wind was blowing quite hard and carried the cover from the water tank on Mr. Wilsch's residence, the rear of which extends almost back to the rear of Theiss's house. Over the roof and down between the houses. The old man heard the noise, but was too old and feeble to escape. The wooden missile struck him fairly upon the head, inflicting wounds which proved fatal.

W. A. Burl Campbell is a hunter with impure of many years' experience in Western locality, Or., over the Oregon Sportsman-Review. While nearing the course of his trace he came upon one about 3 o'clock in the afternoon which had been a regular. The animal watched Campbell's approach without fear, and, bound, lagged at his chain to the 40 to reach him. He can scarcely about 5 ft. but the cougar succeeded in extricating his foot, and, between Bering, made for the house, determined upon giving battle. Campbell was so thoroughly surprised to meet motionless, waiting its approach. No one ever before heard of a cougar that would attack a man unless and disturbance, and Campbell supposed it would scamper off and the bear returning home. He was soon about 30 yd. from the cougar,
