CHILD BURNED TO DEATH.

Little Daughter of Sheriff and Mrs. Hoppe of Malad, the Victim.

Malad, Idaho, Enterprise: A shock was cast over this community the Twenty-Fourth by a terrible or fatal accident to the little child of Sheriff and Mrs. Hoppe. The little one's mother had just dressed her preparatory to going out for a ride. The child slipped out of the house and went over to Mr. Dougalts barn, a few rods away, where the with two other children were playing with Brewsters. It seems that they made a bonfire in the barn and in some manner Hoppe's entire dress took fire and in a moment the little one was enveloped in flames. Mrs. Brewster, the elder screaming, ran out to find her writhing in flames. Mr. Dougalts barn is a few rods off the road, and the child ran directly in question, but before she had reached her gate she was fatally burned, and died a few hours afterwards.

The Mother and Mrs. Hoffer were immediately summoned, and did all that could be done to save the child. The child was in her mother's care and the same was Elma. The bereaved parents and family have the sympathy of the whole community. Wednesday morning the body was taken to Weston for burial.

The Deep Creek Railroad.

In an article on the Deep Creek railroad the Tooele Transcript says: We are almost sure the road would have been all but complete now if President H. Chasser would have been alive. He was on the road to Tooele, but his death put a stop to the work, and before it could be resumed on the original plans, the Oregon Short Line stepped in and bought their bed, grades and the old story of failure was again repeated. The fact is the Oregon Short Line was jealous of the work Mr. Chasser's success would have made, forty miles of their road nearer, and that line could not stand that if they could help it. In the meantime, the Mine Owners and land owners for the public benefit, they build them for the benefit of the corporation. And if ever we have a road made to Deep Creek by any railroad corporation it will be at private cost or other company from reaping the benefits, and not from any benefit the road might be to the general public.

SERVICES AT THE TABERNACLE

Elders Clawson, Kesler and Freibergh Call-ed and Sustained as Speakers.

The Many Blessings the Saints Have to be Thankful for, Enumerated—Missionary Work in the Eastern States.

Elder Charles W. Penrose of the state penitentiary presided over the services in the Tabernacle Sunday afternoon, July 31, 1898.

The choir sang the hymn:

"The dispensations through your way
Pass on, pass on, ye Heralds of God.
Proclaim your offerings by Elder Arthur Winter.

The choir further sang:

Behold the Great Redeemer die
A broken heart to satisfy.

Prayer by H. Clawson of the Twelfth ward, was the first speaker. His opening remarks dealt with the great blessings enjoyed since the Latter-day Saints and the many things they had to be thankful for—health and strength, the crops, immense stocks of cattle and all the necessaries and comforts of life. Moreover, said the speaker, the Latter-day Saints should be thankful for the privilege of worshiping God according to the dictates of their own consciences, which were being one which made this a land of freedom and bought the battles of independence. For all these blessings the people should be thankful, some of them were but little aware of the extent of the blessings, for improvement in this direction.

Elder Clawson turned his attention to the young people of the Church at home, upon whom devolved great responsibilities in the near future. The war, said he, was opened up the way for the preaching of the gospel in the Eastern States, and the young men were awake to carry it into the nations of the earth. This being the case, it behoved the young men to fit and prepare themselves for future operations. The young women, also, were called upon to build up the kingdom, and in the training of both, it was necessary for parents to exhibit the spirit of the Lord that God's walk and conversation would be such as to have a bearing with the children.

Elder Alonzo F. Kesler, president of the Eastern States mission, first addressed the congregation. For the past seventeen months, said he, he had labored in the large cities of the East, striving in connection with others to promulgate the principles of life and salvation. Prior to his arrival there, said the speaker, he had learned in the presidency of the mission had labored with the Eastern press, and that successfully. He had spoken in calling the attention of the people to Mormonism and its ambassadors. For a time the effort was a failure, and he felt the idea of opposition had gone down and at the present time Mormonism was being looked upon with favor. The work in the Eastern States was progressing. Upwards of the Elders were engaged in it, and they had succeeded in establishing District conferences and organizing Sunday schools. It embraced that district, West Virginia on the south to New Scotia on the north and the faithful people had already been added to the Church membership, with prospects for still greater accessions in the near future.

Elder Kesler referred to the indifference manifest among the people of the large centers with which subjects in Mormonism, and the fact that it was being received with favor and a number of the leading people of the East were interested in the work of building the works of the Church, prominent among them the Book of Mormon. He had found, he said, that with that Mormonism was the most interesting subject they had ever undertaken to deal with, and yet, notwithstanding they had seen that it contained principles worth to mankind with those taught by the Lord and opening the Bible, Dr. J. Kidd, Salt Lake City.

The speaker dwelt in some length on the distinguishing characteristics of the Gospel as set forth in the Book of Mormon, and the principles of life and purpose for the Latter-day Saints, and showed the absurdities from a Scriptural standpoint of polygamy, which was discussed so extensively and carried out by modern denominations.

President Charles W. Penrose was the next speaker. He commenced dwell with the success attending the preaching of the Gospel in the Eastern States, and the interest in the work. The success would be brought into close connection with the work in the Lord's vineyard, and the Saints were continuing for the benefits and His blessings.

President Penrose's discourse was the closing sermon. He referred to the desires of Moses to commonly endowed with the spirit of prophecy, and to the which many of them acted from one Elder. A Scriptural and the modern, and sufficient to show that the Lord is to be followed by an obedience, which, in the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints, is very little. President Penrose said the Saints of those having the trials to endure, it will always, and that humble people, of course, and their consecration and forwardness in humbled and faithful to the Lord, that control. Faith without works is dead. Faith must be accompanied by works of obedience.

President Penrose said there is the blessings and labors of President Brigham Young, and the faithful Saints who have gone before, and the Saints who are living, who are in other quarters of the world, who are in the enjoyment of which God has poured out in the dispensation of fulness.

The choir sang the anthem:

Press onward, ye Saints, press onward.

Benediction was pronounced by Elder George A. Smith.
