Residents on the Canyon road are complaining that for the last few weeks the water supply is cut off for hours at a stretch almost every day. They believe that it is caused by some one turning the valves which that part of the pipe system. Superintendent Hines explained that the trouble lies in the fact that whenever the draft is large during the late summer and the pressure goes below sixty pounds, it is impossible to supply Canyon road, as the outlet for this section is below the other lines. This state of affairs has existed for ten years and Mr. Hines says that the only remedy for it was to lay about 900 feet of pipe to connect the Canyon road and First North street pipes, now a part of middle system, with the upper system. On Eighth East street, where the higher part of the middle system is also at the highest level, the same evil exists.

GLENDENNING TELLS STORY.

Recites to the Court Facts Connected With the Hedges Killing.

WITNESSES TO CHARACTER.

Most of Them Say Hedges Was a Bad Man and Some Call His Reputation Good.

(Special to the "News.")

Parowan, Utah, Sept. 24.—In the trial this morning Mr. Glendinning gave his history from childhood to the morning of the shooting. He, the defendant, had received his monthly payment from Ophir company. He said that he then had gone down town, paid off some debts, and met Hedges at the State House. Both were in good humor and discussed their ability at shooting, ending with a challenge to shoot at cans. Hedges said: "If it is a fight you want, I'll get my gun, you G—d—s— of a—"

Glendinning tried to stop him and asked him to have a drink and have no trouble. Hedges went to his cabin and returned to the saloon with a loaded revolver and cartridges. Glendinning remained at the saloon, being afraid that if he left he would be shot down like a dog.

Some one said, "The old man is coming with his gun." Glendinning turned and saw Hedges opening the door with his left hand, and drawing his gun with his right hand. "Come out, you G—d—s— of a—"

Glendinning jumped, grabbed Hedges' right hand to prevent the gun being drawn, saying, "Don't do that, old man; don't do that." Glendinning held the revolver in his right hand. The deceased, in the struggle, struck Glendinning, discharging his revolver, breaking his left arm. Being disabled, and knowing Hedges' reputation, and believing his life was at stake, and that he would be killed unless he shot the deceased, he fired the fatal shot. All shots fired before Hedges fell. Hedges tried to draw his gun even after he fell.

A BAD CHARACTER.

Mrs. Claybourn said Hedges' character was bad.

Mr. Mosher, justice of the peace of Stateville, testified that Hedges' character was bad. He had allowed Harvey Hedges to read notes of the examination at the coroner's inquest, and had not refused to allow him to come to them.

John Zille knew Hedges eight years. He would use a gun or knife when under the influence of liquor. "I've been assisting in taking a gun from him when threatening to kill an old man."

Messrs. Claybourn and Flinspach testified to Hedges' character being bad, as did four other witnesses.

John M. Hanson, of Fillmore, had clerked for Bennett Holbrook at Frisco, off and on for three or four years, and knew that Hedges' character was bad.

GOOD CHARACTER.

Mrs. Muldon said Hedges' reputation was good. John Morehouse of Salt Lake City knew that Hedges' reputation was good, but upon cross-examination said he knew he had paid a $25 fine.

Mr. Lippencomb said Hedges' name was good; knew he had gotten his gun on two occasions to shoot in self-defense. One man had run away, the other had no gun.

Peter Rosen of Beaver said Hedges' character was good; had heard of him being in a gun trouble, as also had Mr. Buchanan of Milford.

Mr. E. B. Bates, who recalled and testified Hedges' character was good.

Court adjourned until 2 p. m.

ROGNON'S ADVENTURES.

Romantic Career in Alaska of a Former Salt Laker.

Ernest G. Rognon, formerly a well known attorney of Salt Lake, and afterwards United States commissioner in Alaska, is attracting some attention in Alaska. Rognon was charged with embezzling government funds amounting to about $4,000, and was arrested at Teller City July 15th last. He was made out on bond. Another episode in his checkered career is related by the Nome Gold Digger in the following language:

According to Mrs. E. J. Mitchell, ex-commissioner of Rognon of Teller is an adventurer, and his deeds would make a good subject for a modern novel.

Rognon, before coming to Nome, had lived in Salt Lake for the last fifteen years. There he met Mrs. Mitchell, and induced her to secure a divorce from her husband, which she succeeded in doing. Rognon was interested in the mining business, and Mrs. Mitchell states that just before he left for Nome the Salt Lake papers accused him of selling the New Mammoth mine, and that he had received $20,000 of stock when he found out that Rognon had perpetrated a mining fake and was endeavoring to sell the mine at an enormous figure by selling it.

Mrs. Mitchell states that she gave Rognon a sum of money and they both came on to Seattle. From there Rognon came to Nome alone, as at that time Mrs. Mitchell had not secured her divorce. She would not leave until the judge had given her a decree. They exchanged numerous letters, full of tender phrases, and in October Mrs. Mitchell, at the request of Rognon, came on here, after selling what little furniture she had, and found that Rognon had transferred his fickle affections. The only excuse made was that the long-looked-for letter never came, and it is claimed that his sister had signed the registered receipts.

Mrs. Mitchell is preparing to bring suit against the ex-lake as he has deceived over to her an interest in a mining claim on Alder gulch that he had no claim to in order that she would release him from a promise of marriage. The contract is duly signed and witnessed.

Part of Rognon's ill-gotten gain he spent on a house and lot at Teller; he is also said to have sent out $300 to Seattle for diamonds he had pawned. He gave to his sister, Mrs. J. P. Barina, $1,000 for speculation.

A Certain Cure for Dysentery and Diarrhoea.

"Some years ago I was one of a party that intended making a long bicycle trip," says F. L. Taylor, of New Albany, Bradford County, Pa. "I was taken suddenly with diarrhoea, and was about to give up the trip, when editor Ward, of the Laceyville Messenger, suggested that I take a dose of Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhoea Remedy. I purchased a bottle and took two doses, one before starting and one on the route. I made the trip successfully, and never felt any ill effect. Again last summer I was almost completely run down with a attack of dysentery. I bought a bottle of this same remedy, and this time one dose cured me."
