PROFESSOR WILLIAM APMADOC.

There is on the program for Thursday evening next one of the most notable events in musical matters which has fallen to the lot of Salt Lake people to enjoy. This is the lecture and entertainment to be given in the Stake Assembly Hall by Prof. Wm. Apmadoc of Chicago, the great musical instructor; and for the importance and value of the suggestions and instructions given, every teacher, student and lover of music should be in attendance. By the force of his high order of genius and his intense love of the divine art, Mr. Apmadoc has won for himself a place in the foremost rank of his profession. As an employment he follows the business of professor of music in the high schools of Chicago, having occupied that position for the past six years; previous to that time he was at Utica, New York, for a considerable period.

Known to the musical world by reason of the exalted ability he has displayed, it was in connection with the Tabernacle choir's visit to the World's Fair in 1893 that he became more intimately associated with the people of Utah. It was through his agency that the choir received its invitation to participate in the great event at that time, and to him is largely due the credit for the enthusiastic reception the sweet singers of Israel received. Therefore, in addition to admiration for his genius and energy, there is for him, in the hearts of the people of Utah, a strong feeling of gratitude, and his welcome here is one of warm and earnest friendship.

Today Professor Apmadoc took his first glimpse of leading points of interest in this city. It is his first trip to Utah, and he is enthusiastic over the climate, the resources, and the work accomplished by the people of this part of the great West. This, Tuesday, evening he will go to Ogden, and the goodfolk of the Junction City anticipate giving him an enthusiastic welcome; tomorrow he will return to Salt Lake and in the afternoon will be given a reception at Saltair by the local Cambrian association; and on Thursday evening will appear in the Salt Lake Stake Assembly Hall.

We extend to the distinguished gentleman a most cordial greeting, and assure him that he is in the house of his friends. In his efforts to extend the field of musical instruction to the masses of the people of the country, he is performing a work that will live after him to his lasting honor. We believe that here in Utah his noble and kindly efforts will be appreciated at least as fully as by any other people, and we trust that his visit here will be as full of pleasant satisfaction as his heart can desire.

THE FUTURE OF PALESTINE.

Ever since the memorable day when Apostle Orson Hyde on the Mount of Olives, dedicated the country of Palestine for the gathering of the descendants of Abraham, there has been a marked change in the conditions of the country. It has become more attractive every year and many Hebrews have found a home and rest in sacred places. There is now hardly any doubt among those acquainted with the progress of the country that it has a bright and glorious future, although it may not be within human reach to foretell exactly in what way this is to be accomplished.

Among those who believe in the redemption of the land is Dr. Alfred Hettner, who writes to Die Geographische Zeitschrift as follows:

The future of Palestine rises up before us in so pleasing colors as the present displays a sombre aspect. Once let a good government be established, and from that moment the development of the country will set in. Today, it has about the worst possible government, and notwithstanding that drawback an improvement is taking place in consequence of increased communication with Europe. This is most notable in Haifa, Jaffa, Nazareth and Jerusalem, but slighter traces of the same influence are felt east of Jordan. Nazareth has established three hospitals and twelve schools, at some of which technical instruction is given. In Jerusalem, where the Mohammedan population is in the minority, [illegible] synagogues and numerous hospitals, besides schools, orphanages and other public buildings. And at the present day the Holy City has more than ever the aspect of the city of the world and also of [illegible].

Though agriculture and commerce have declined and the population has decreased, Palestine may yet become the granary of the southeast Mediterranean and even for Europe. It is capable of increasing the population four fold, i. e., to three millions, or one hundred to the square kilometer. West of the Jordan the water supply is so good and agreeable [illegible] that it would support this population. The conditions are extremely favorable to the growth of oranges, melons, tobacco, and vegetables, and already garden plots are successfully cultivated in the neighborhood of Jerusalem, Nablous, Tiberias, and a few other places.

The question of government is an important one, and it will be solved as soon as the people who are lawful heirs of the country turn with their hearts to Him who holds the fate of nations in His hands. The work of redeeming the country is progressing, however, and there is no reason to suppose that it will be interrupted again. More likely it will continue until it is accomplished.

"GAIL HAMILTON."

The death of Miss Abigail Dodge, better known as "Gail Hamilton," a bright and vigorous literary woman, and a relative of Mrs. James G. Blaine, is reported in last evening's dispatches. This termination of her recent sickness was not unexpected; nevertheless she will be sincerely mourned, for she was possessed of exceptional courage and power in her chosen avocation, and showed no signs of failing strength or ability until the touch of paralysis benumbed her faculties—hence she might naturally have been expected to live and labor many years yet. An incident of her readiness in repartee, and of her disposition to fairness also, has been reported in these columns before, but it is good enough to bear repetition, if indeed it is not entirely new to present readers. It was at a time when the anti-Mormon feeling ran high in Washington, and when an that ground efforts were being made to unseat, or prevent the seating of, the delegate in Congress from Utah Territory. Gail Hamilton was occupying a place in the members' gallery, and was approached by a representative who was known to be a bitter antagonist of the people of Utah. It was not generally known, but it was a fact that he had the misfortune to bury three wives in succession, and was then living with the fourth. Seating himself beside the fair journalist, he endeavored to make himself agreeable by pointing out various members of Congress on the floor below, and finally his gaze fell upon, and his finger indicated, the Utah delegate. "There's Mr. Cannon," he said; "he's a Mormon and has four wives. Don't you think it a disgrace that he should have a seat in the Congress of the United States?" The bright woman turned to her questioner with a look of arch surprise and replied: "Oh, I don't know; the only difference I can see between the Utah man and yourself is that he drives his wives abreast while you drive yours tandem."

THE NATIONAL DEMOCRATS.

The executive committee of the National Democratic party has issued its call for a national convention at Indianapolis on September 2. It addresses "the Democrats of the United States," cites the history of the regular Democratic party, and comes to the point at issue by declaring of the action of the Democratic national convention at Chicago last month, that "the platform proposes to degrade the coin of the United States by the means of free and unlimited and independent coinage of silver by our government." There are other minor charges against that platform, but this is the chief feature upon which the call announces that the Chicago convention "departed from the recognized Democratic faith and promulgated doctrines new and strange to the Democracy."

Just how extensive this bolt from the regular party will prove remains to be demonstrated. It claims to be strongly represented in thirty-five states. Its conceded force is greatest in a dozen northern and eastern states. The presumption is that it will have distinct candidates on the presidential ticket, and will hold the chief strength of the "sound money" Democratic vote as against the free silver element which aims at practical bimetallism in the United States, independently of other nations. In the particular of going alone, this bolt differs from that of the silver Republicans at St. Louis.

It is notable that the Bryan campaign managers are not putting forth any special effort to prevent this National Democratic convention or to conciliate the leaders of the movement. And why should they? The chief issue now on between the leading candidates for the national presidency is the free coinage of silver as a continuance of the existing gold standard. With only one silver candidate, there are hundreds of thousands of silver Republican voters who are likely to throw their choice to that candidate. If there were only one gold candidate, it might be expected that a like strength of gold Democrats would go to that one, even on a Republican ticket. But with two such candidates, and one of them a Democrat, the gold advocates of the latter persuasion will cling to the tree of their own faith. Thus the strength of the gold standard voters will be divided, and so no silver man, Democrat or Republican, will go to the new party, the silver forces will not be disturbed. Hence the Bryan men are not worrying, as it is a case of letting "the other fellow work." With the gold forces nearly equally divided in any one state which on a solid vote might be certain for gold, there are excellent chances for the silver men to win on a plurality.

There is another lesson that this movement aids in impressing. This is that the probability of party distribution on the old lines is very strong. What the outcome will be, is difficult to foretell, as there seems a marked scarcity of rallying points. The situation is such that in the disturbed conditions which make a readjustment necessary, the dispute over the electoral vote of any state, if it were sufficient to effect the result, might precipitate trouble of the most serious character.

THEY PROPHESY EVIL.

The European press, commenting on the possible consequences of the United States remonetizing silver, conjures up many specters. A writer in the Paris Figaro thinks it may lead to an American invasion of Europe and consequent disasters.

Are Americans drifting toward a dictatorship and military despotism? he asks. And then he proceeds to answer this question by saying in substance that the adoption of free silver means nothing less than that a party of unscrupulous politicians is to be raised to power on the ruins of good faith and of public prosperity, and amid this ruin it would be easy for some pushing politician to play the part of adventurous Caesar. The adoption of the silver standard with free coinage is equivalent to a declaration of bankruptcy. Misery must follow this, and ambitious men will have ample chance for intrigue among the malcontents. Caesarian tendencies will appear in times of general financial ruin and easily get the upper hand.

Then the writer draws a picture of the dangers that threaten Europe from America. Imagine, he says, what could be done by those millions of Americans if led by a victorious general. Thirty years ago an American minister to Spain said, during an unguarded moment: "When the time comes, your old Europe with its prejudices will be only a mouthful for an expedition of American filibusters." Let us hope that an American peril will not be added to the Eastern peril and the Mongolian peril which now threatens Europe.

It is almost incredible what imaginative authors can produce during the hot season of the year, popularly known as the dog days. Fortunately the cooler season is approaching and a more sensible view of the situation is likely to result.

THE BOSTON HERALD, referring to the statement that Rev. T. De Witt Talmage had come out for free silver, says: "Somebody has been lying about Rev. Talmage." Doubtless the reverend gentleman is beginning to feel how it was with some other people whom he has talked about without due regard for the truth.

THE LATEST issue of Printer's Ink contains an article on "Peculiar Advertisements," by Jno. C. Graham. If this is the Hon. Jno. C. Graham who edits the Provo Enquirer, he is qualified to speak as an authority.

THERE ARE some people who affect to believe that neutrality in politics means silence in politics; but as they gain in experience they learn that there is a broad distinction between the two.
