TO BE TRIED THURSDAY.

[illegible]

The trial was set for next Thursday.

MERCY WAS SHOWN TO HIM.

Oliver Simpson, a delicate looking young fellow about 23 years of age, withdrew his former plea of not guilty to highway robbery and with the consent of the prosecution, plead guilty to a common assault.

The offense was committed on Third South street, in broad daylight, on February [illegible]

The accused's attorney, J. W. Corey, made a brief statement to the court in mitigation of punishment. [illegible]

Judge Merritt said he had also received letters from prominent Denver people—including the U. S. district judge—stating that Simpson's character had always been of the best. Taking all these circumstances into consideration his honor passed the light sentence of ten days' imprisonment in the county jail.

HIGHWAY ROBBERY THE CHARGE.

Criminal trials were then proceeded with, the first case being that in which John Welsh and James St. Clair, two young fellows between 20 and 22 years of age, were charged with highway robbery with violence, on March 3rd.

Assistant District Attorney Howat and [illegible] prosecuted. [illegible]

The victim in this case was John A. [illegible]

"And I suppose you went?" remarked Attorney Howat.

The trial was in progress when the court adjourned at noon.
