Architectural Effects the Pad at the Fair.

PREPARED FOR THE OPENING.

Striking and Artistic Booths—Noteworthy Exhibits—Unpleasant Incident.

The damp weather put no damper upon the army of workers engaged in arranging the exhibits at the Fair. Since last Saturday morning an amount of work has been done in the Exposition building which is simply immense, and this evening all will be almost ready for the grand opening tomorrow, though some of the exhibits are not completely arranged.

SOME SOAP.

The architectural effects that have been imparted to the booths in the main building are striking and pleasing in the extreme. The exhibit which will attract the most attention and elicit the greatest amount of praise, is that of the Grant Soap company. It is a structure in the form of a monument comprising a pedestal, shaft and dome, and is nearly twenty feet high. The walls consist of blocks, slabs, strips, cakes and pieces of soap, showing more and more brilliant colors than any rainbow. Within the pedestal, which is about seven feet square, is suspended an arc light, and in the dome is another. At night, when these two lights are turned on, and show through the translucent material of which the structure is composed, wonderfully heightening the brilliancy of the gorgeous colors of the soap walls, the effect is something which must be seen to be appreciated. Not the least artistic feature of this singular and beautiful creation are the labels and mottoes, designed primarily as advertisements, which have been engraved, in graceful characters, upon the soap with Mr. H. F. Grant designed the structure, and Mr. Klesting, architect, drew it to a scale, while the manual manipulation of the soap was done by Mr. Andrew Kimball. In one panel of the pedestal is the Temple, and in the opposite panel is the city and county building, done in soap. Carved in the slabs that complete the body of the shaft is the beehive, and the walls of the pedestal are overlaid with cakes of Beehive soap, the leading brand made by the firm, each cake containing a sunken panel of marble soap of some brilliant color. The dome is a beehive. The effect of the whole structure is novel, beautiful and grand.

OTHER STRUCTURES.

The booth of the Salt Lake Brewing Co., is a beautiful thing, architecturally. It is a tower, having open arches sides. The corner columns are made of barrels. The arches are filled with bottles of beer, and the base is surrounded with a row of white glass 5-ounce filled with barley. The interior of the tower is filled with empties, and the appearance of the structure as a whole is very fine.

Siegel & Co., furriers, occupy the northwest corner of the main building, which is a sort of wild beasts' den, novel and attractive in appearance, and artistic in the arrangement of its contents.

The Wasatch Mineral Water Co. has a pyramid of bottles of a size and so arranged as to produce a fine effect, and Howlet Bros. show the liquid goods they produce, in a very attractive way.

HOME SOAP.

The Western Manufacturing Co., of Ogden, are making an unselfish and successful effort to show that portion of the world which will attend the Fair, what they are doing for mankind in the way of providing material for keeping the race clean. Their leading brand is the Idaho Soap, and they have a capacious booth, figure in shape and very neat in architectural style, in which are displayed the various kinds of soaps they manufacture. As the Utahian gazes upon what is here displayed he may well assert that Utah is now independent of the whole world so far as soap is concerned.

FINE BRICK WORK.

A piece of architecture which is creditable of either point of view, is shown by the Salt Lake Pressed Brick company. It is a facade constructed against the wall at the south end of the main building, and is designed to show the color and quality of their brick, the kinds of work that may be done, and the beautiful effects that may be accomplished with it. This piece of work is worth looking at by those who admire handsome and artistic effects in brick work. Geo. H. Cushing handled the trowel.

VARIOUS FEATURES.

Hewlett Bros., manufacturers of the Three Crowns baking powder, have the front of a cottage constructed of cans of their baking powder, which is a unique, novel and beautiful thing. Its two doors, windows, etc., and side to the impression that taste in architecture is a leading feature of this Fair.

The display which is being made by the J. G. McDonald County and Paper Box Co., though not characterized by any particular architectural design, is nevertheless attractive and attractive.

The horticultural exhibit, though its arrangement is incomplete at this writing, makes the mouth of the beholder water. It is taking up more room than was at first intended, and the good things that grow on trees and vines, which are embraced in it, are wonderful in variety, beauty and quality.

Much of today was consumed in the field crops department in arranging, in artistic style, the samples of grain and vegetables which will certainly attract much attention and favorable comment.

Z. C. M. I. is engaged in arranging a display of boots, shoes and clothing manufactured by it, which will be, when completed, exceedingly creditable in extent, variety and quality.

IN THE GALLERY.

The departments and exhibits assigned to the gallery, which embrace the art and women's work departments, and a number of exhibits, will prove well worth inspecting. The art department is sure to attract vast crowds, and will elicit surprise and admiration. It will prove that Utah possesses painters of genius, and presages her future superiority in this regard.

The women's work department is bewildering in the number and variety of the articles of beauty, merit and utility which are exhibited. In occupies a large space, in fact nearly the whole of the north end of the gallery, and is artistically arranged.

One of the most beautiful and attractive objects of inspection in the gallery is a large show case filled with birds' eggs. The egg of a remarkably large variety of birds are embraced in the collection, which is owned by the Elk Curio Co. of this city.

NOTES.

All day today drays have been unloading their contents in the Exposition building.

Exhibitors who have been behind in the work of arranging their wares, have put in a big day today.

Postmaster Neals has erected a letter box to be placed near the inside of the west entrance to the main building. Thanks!

A few head of horses were in the stalls today, but tomorrow there will be a fine display of these animals.

This year's Fair will show that the people of Utah are taking rapid strides in the direction of being self-sustaining.

Outside the main building are temporary structures erected by the Improvement Bros., in which will be shown how nearly farms are turned by machinery now-a-days.

The educational department is simply immense. The work the schools are doing is remarkably well shown in it, and it adds a study full of interest several days, to those interested in it.

An unpleasant incident occurred at about noon today. The faculty of the Agricultural College of Logan had arranged to make an exhibit, but a few firm purchased space adjoining that which the College was to occupy, and in such a shape as to be very objectionable to the faculty, who thereupon decided to withdraw. Considerable heating was exchanged after the affair. As the Fair grounds are spacious, and the attention of all was diverted, the College faculty were informed of what had been finally decided upon, but it was unsatisfactory to them, and they decided to make an exhibit, although the stuff brought down from the College, which will remain.
