DESERET EVENING NEWS.
FRIDAY, JANUARY 18, 1895.

MISS BABCOCK'S READING.

The Second of the Course of University Lectures Delivered Last Evening.

The second of the course of lectures of the Utah University was given last evening by Miss Maud May Babcock.

Thought, reading, was treated with reference to education, school work and living. Education was defined as the art of speaking language so that it is music clear and expressive; it is the speaking of all thought whether written or extemporaneous. Reading is the art of speaking written language in a clear and expressive manner. We think and just as we speak and for our mother "up to nature."

Reading is acknowledged to be the tool of all study, but if the same exercises were required in this as in other branches, not one person in ten hundred would be allowed admission to our high schools. Sufficient time is given to preparatory schools to satisfy the most enthusiastic editions, but this time is not profitably spent. Children do not read, they shout, chant, "sing-song" or spell out the words. Before the child enters the school his expression of both mind and body are perfect, and the chance of unmarred reading lies at the school door.

Miss Babcock likened elocution to a tree having three great roots, namely, voice-production, word study and control of the body. These roots must be deeply buried in the ground and all must be nourished to form the perfect trunk. Now and when these roots should be grown wisely and artistically explained.

The lady spoke of the need of being well versed in English before too much time is given to other languages. The great need of voice cultivation was shown, also the need of corrections in emphasis, accent, pronunciation, etc. No correction should be omitted on the plea that if the person used the proper form he would be laughed at. Every step in progress is laughed at by some, but it is he who takes the step that advances.

Elocution with reference to acting was presented and explained. No true actor can be ignorant of the art of elocution.

Oral reading at home was strongly urged. By it the reader is improved in elocution and it affords amusement to others a literary taste which is otherwise dormant.

In conclusion Miss Babcock rendered "The Merry Speech" from the Merchant of Venice, to show how the cardinal expression differs from the unnatural or strained.

The important subject was artistically handled and the audience went away feeling greatly satisfied and pleased.

A Happy Student.

Le Roy C. Snow was the successful competitor at the Salt Lake Business college for the beautiful gold and silver medal for shorthand and typewriting, which was presented to him today by Prof. F. B. Cornwall of the college.

Darkness Tonight.

There will be darkness in a large part of the city tonight, as one hundred and twenty-five of the arc lights which have illuminated the streets heretofore have been snuffed out under order of the Council. How long this condition of affairs will be allowed to continue probably only the municipal solons and the Electric Light company can explain.

THE UNEMPLOYED.

Further Resolutions Passed by the Mass Meeting Yesterday.

Mr. N. E. Dresser was speaking to the unemployed workingmen at the Tuesday yesterday afternoon when the NEWS report closed. At the conclusion of his remarks a resolution was adopted urging upon the City Council and other private citizens to open up some kind of work to give employment to those in a distressed condition, and a committee consisting of Joseph Ed-wards, John Hughes and Warren Foster was appointed to present it to the City Council. The committee was also authorized to approach the Council with request to the opening of the sewer trench, and ask that the men be paid by day's labor and paid every week.

Mr. Hugh Watson, contractor, spoke in favor of petitioning the City Council to open some kind of work to give the laboring men employment.

At the conclusion of Mr. Watson's remarks, the following was adopted:

Resolved, That we, the workingmen of Salt Lake in mass meeting assembled in the Tabernacle, on January 17, 1895, respectfully request that the Constitutional Convention shall place a clause in the new Constitution for Utah to the effect that we shall have a state labor bureau, and that all state and municipal work shall be done under its supervision, and that the old system of letting out contracts shall be abolished, so far as possible, and that all such work shall be done by our own citizens, and that the hours of labor and wages shall be settled by our Legislature.

John Hughes then arose and made a few remarks, after which the meeting adjourned.

Under Indictment in Utah.

W. W. Sampson, of Salt Lake City, who is under indictment in the Mormon city, was arrested at Denver on Wednesday, says the News of that city, by Deputy United States Marshal Lovell, in the postoffice building. He was taken before United States Commissioner Hinsdale and gave bond in $200 to appear for trial.

TICKETS FOR SALT LAKE.

A Dashing Denver Miss and Her Proposed Elopement With an Old Man in This City.

There was another chapter added to the story of the aged Edward Robbins, of Peoria, Ill., Wednesday in Carr's court, says the Denver News, when Miss Ora Leslie, known in Miss Eva Edwards, was placed under bonds upon a charge of larceny.

The story of Robbins' wild career in Denver, his arrest and sudden flight, was told in Monday's News. While in the city Robbins fell in love many times and he purchased bagfuls of other valuable presents for several young women. Attorney David M. Tayne, a friend of Robbins, took it upon himself to clear the old man from trouble that night result, and so had warrants sworn out for the arrest of Robbins and Miss Leslie, slipping in the bud a prepared elopement which Robbins had arranged.

Last Saturday Robbins gave Miss Leslie, it is claimed, a roll of bills amounting to $300 to buy tickets to Salt Lake City. The young woman purchased the tickets to Salt Lake and returned only about $100, according to the allegation in the complaint.

The complaint is submitted to by Deputy Sheriff Joe Simpson, who, it is said, had it made out at the suggestion of Taylor. Miss Leslie gave bonds in the sum of $500 for her appearance on the 22nd inst. The hearing upon the minor charge was postponed by agreement until the 22nd inst.

Political Club Elections.

The Tuscarora Society of Utah will hold its annual election this evening at the Federated Trades hall, on Second South street, beginning at 7:30. The call is couched in characteristic Tuscarora language as follows and is made by Grand Sachem Lelohet and Big Medicine Man Dalt: In the moon of Wind and Snow Shoes called to all the warriors to hide, called the old men, called the young men from the wigwams by the river; from their homes within the forest. And they came—their footsteps falling like the sound of rain in autumn. The trend came from his wigwam by the big sea water lake yon. He has lighted the signal fires upon the mountain tops, and their curling smoke talks a watch of willow" beckons you. He desires you to meet him around the council fire, which will be lighted in the hall of the society at 7:30 which is the evening of the eighteenth day of the month of Cold Winds. There will be much business of importance, of which the Pale Face must not know, for your consideration. Come.

The annual meeting of the Salt Lake Central Workingmen's Republican club was held last night in G. A. R. hall. The following officers were elected: President, A. L. Harding; first vice president, Dave Dixon; second vice president, Benjamin Nasbitt; secretary, John James; assistant secretary, Geo. Matlower; treasurer, N. B. Conset.

THE BUTTE HORROR.

An Eye Witness Tells How the Sixty Boys, Formerly of Salt Lake, and Others were Killed.

David Magee, a member of the Butte fire department and an eye witness to the terrible scenes of suffering following the explosion at that place, says, as reported in the Anaconda Standard:

"After meeting the fire we had been at work for some time and I happened to be in the engine house when the explosion occurred. I ran up to the building with the hose and then drove back from it about 200 feet and stopped. A moment after the first explosion occurred in the building and the flames burst through the roof, but no one was hurt by the explosion. The boys then went back to the building again, thinking that the danger was all over.

"Jack Sloan came over to the wagon and got his axe, and started to go into an opening in the building. My brother William got to the door of the wagon and strived me to drive farther away for fear of another explosion.

"I told him there was no danger and got down to handle the horses. I usually got off on the side nearest the fire, but this time the horses were between me and the fire, and it is entirely fortunate for me that such was the case.

"Just as I pulled the blankets down from the seat and spread one of them on to throw it over the horse, the second explosion came. I did not see anything and only remember hearing the awful roar and being knocked down. When I recovered a moment later I found the wagon partly on top of me with the tongue across my knees, and the off horse was lying right on top of me. The blankets had caught fire, pieces of wood were burning all around me and I was momentarily stunned and bewildered. I struggled to get loose, but was unable to free myself.

"People were screaming all around me and crying for help, and I could barely make my voice heard. After a while a man came along and I begged him for God's sake to help me out. With his assistance I managed to get out from under the weight that was pinning me down and struggled to my feet. I jumped along but was moving slowly when a couple of men came along and carried me into the German house and from there I was brought home.

"The last I saw of Jack Sloan he was pounding away at the door, and when I saw Cameron last he was taking the girls out of the long between the wagon and the burning building.

"All of the other boys were close behind Sloan and they were certainly all killed. It is impossible that Dave Moss could have escaped.

"William Magee's body was found close to the demolished hose wagon.

Mrs. E. L. Sloan is almost crazy with a grief that is almost beyond human comprehension. In addition to the death of her son, John, the assistant chief of the fire department, and Ed, one of the paid members, had his hand and both of his legs torn off at the knees and his recovery is doubtful.

The Sloan family suffer perhaps the worst of all. John Sloan had both his legs crushed and both his arms were killed.

CONTINUED FOR A WEEK.

A Case Made Up of Wrongdoing, Sickness, Destitution and Misfortune.

A pitiful case came before Police Justice Smith late yesterday afternoon in which a young man named John Smith figured as defendant. Smith, who is a drunken spree Monday night last, was ejected from the Resort saloon, when he retorted and hurled a brick at the head of bartender Stanford, which failed of its mark, going through and smashing a large mirror, valued at $100. There were four charges looked against Smith, which he was called upon to face in court, viz: Malicious destruction of property, assault, drunk and disturbing the peace. Justice Harris appeared for the defendant, and recited a tale of woe in the extreme, which was that the defendant's wife was at the point of death and was without means to procure medical attendance, and that his parents were also in a most abject state of poverty. Justice Smith, after considering the matter for a time, continued the case for one week and allowed the defendant to go upon his own recognizance until that time.

TERRITORIAL ITEMS.

The Detroit Mining District—Farmers' Convention at Ephraim.

Millard county Sheriff Geo. Busby and A. M. Lillel came in from Detroit on Saturday. Relative to Detroit, Mr. Busby says every claim on which work is being done is improving. In the Chastnut, of which Mr. Busby is foreman, forty are now steadily mining, below the 100 foot level. The shaft is in "dead" ground and the ears will be pierced at every 50 feet in depth and levels run on the ore. The recent strike of large quantities of native copper in the lower workings is an encouraging indication of increased richness with greater depth.—J. B. Joy, of Detroit, Mich., and C. M. Howard, capitalists, came also, came in on Friday last and immediately started to the Detroit district. Mr. Joy has returned to Utah earlier than he expected. What took him here. The object of his present visit is to wait existing on the Keystone and Hall Treat claims that are both on the same vein. A shaft 60 feet deep will be sunk and the vein tapped at that point, this method of development, large and permanent ore bodies will be encountered, for within the entire claim there is not a vein that shows better on the surface than the Keystone. All those that know Mr. Joy and have been acquainted with his wind fate to bring Detroit to the front in the past, will be gratified to see him strike success. And if it is there, he will find it.

Ephraim Enterprise: The work undertaken by the Central West Canal & Tunnel company is one of great magnitude but its completion promises good returns for the comp ny, and will be of incalculable benefit to this city. The tunnel will be 4,000 feet in length. It penetrates a mountain that is honey-combed with springs and high up the south slope of the Manti-cora Mountain, the water of which now flows into Emery county. Men who are well acquainted with the locality express the opinion that there will be water enough found in the tunnel to pay the cost of completing it.

Arrangements are being perfected for holding a farmers' convention in this city. It is the intention to have one or more bottles of mineral water, to be used in the agricultural addresses delivered by some of the professors of the Agricultural College.
