FRUIT GROWING FOR UTAH.

One of the Best Localities in the Union for Temperate Fruits.

PROFITS OF THE INDUSTRY.

Lists of the Best Fruits of Leading Varieties Suited to the Soil and Climatic Conditions of Utah.

The fine exhibit of hardy fruits made in the Hall of Below in this city last autumn demonstrated beyond a doubt that Utah is naturally as fine a fruit growing country as there is in the United States, not even excepting California, exclusive of tropical fruits. Visitors were in rapture over the fine fruit that was shown, both of green and dried fruits, and were astonished to learn that so little attention is given to the raising of fruits in wholesale quantities in Utah.

The indifference of Utah agriculturists to the fruit interests in the past is accounted for in some measure in the fact that many had become so high discouraged on account of the depredations of the codling moth and other pests.

SPRAYING A SUCCESS.

But those who have faithfully sprayed their orchards have shown very conclusively that the destructive pests of the fruit destroyed by them can be prevented, in a great measure, and good fruit, free from worms, can be secured by the Utah orchardist, if the work of spraying is continued, and made more generally the practice of our fruit growers, there is no reason why Utah should not become the best fruit producing State in the Union. We should export millions of dollars worth of fruit instead of importing a few hundred thousand dollars worth annually.

WHEAT GROWING UNPROFITABLE.

The Utah agriculturist, with his average farm of twenty acres, which he must irrigate in order to bring in a competence, cannot possibly compete profitably with the great wheat-thousand acre farmers of Dakota, Minnesota, Nebraska, Kansas and Iowa, but he can compete, very successfully too, with the California fruit growers, for the same is worse under similar conditions. Both have to irrigate, both average small holdings of land. The Utah farmer cannot raise oranges, lemons, olives, etc., but he can produce apples, pears, peaches, plums, prunes, apricots, cherries, and all the small fruits as successfully as his neighbors in the West. If he will try; and if he will make a business of it as the fruit growers are obliged to do in California, there can be no question of his success.

A DEMONSTRATED SUCCESS.

The writer is not giving a haphazard opinion on this matter, but is simply stating a few facts which have been demonstrated by the experience of a few wide-awake men in Utah who have been "working hard and saving nothing about it," and who today are reaping golden harvests from their fruit farms. So successful have some of these been that it seems almost incredible that they could be induced to say anything about their business, for fear that if it were known how profitable their orchards had been to them, some of their neighbors would also start an orchard, and have fruit to sell in competition with them.

NOT AN EXPERIMENT.

Fruit-growing in Utah is not an experiment, except to those who have never made any effort in that direction. A few of the class we hope to convert to the fact that the fabled wealth of Utah, in a great measure, at least, will accrue from fruit culture. When one acre of fruit can be made to yield a profit of $100 to $500 over above all expense, according to the experience and ability of the producer and the nature of his crop, it is simply folly to continue to raise wheat and potatoes. Land that will produce these profitably under irrigation is available, will grow the finest orchards; and if the same amount of work is put on the orchard that is usually devoted to the cultivation of corn and potatoes the profits will be immeasurably greater in favor of fruit.

MARKET DEMANDS.

The rapidly growing mining population will supply a ready market for all the good fruit that can be grown here for years to come, and as the population increases beyond the demands of local consumption, other avenues will undoubtedly be opened up to profitably dispose of the surplus.

VARIETIES OF FRUIT FOR UTAH.

As to kinds and varieties of fruits to plant, that are profitable in Utah, and that can be raised in large quantities, a striking unanimity of opinion is expressed among orchardists and nurserymen, many of whom have tested most of the popular varieties of fruits, and recommend the lists named below, as the very best of their kind, both for profit in the market and varieties for family use. The varieties named under each variety will afford a succession of fruit all through the season, and in the case of apples and pears the kinds named will hold till the next season's apple crop comes in. All the best kinds and bushes are obtainable obtained from any of the leading home nurseries, and there is no need to send east or west to obtain the best trees that will grow here. Many kinds could be named under each variety, but we name but a few of the best, and those—the very best of its kind for this locality.

Of Apples—For summer, plant the Red Astrachan, Yellow Transparent, Early Harvest and Red June; for fall, Jonathan, Gravenstein, Maiden Blush, Duchess, Gravenstein, Maiden Blush, Porter, Twenty Ounce, and Hoxie; for winter apples, plant Newtown Pippin, Rhode Island Greening, White, Winter Pearmain, Ben Davis, Baldwin, Stone Beauty, Jonathan, Esopus Spitzenberg, and Wine Sap and Sweet.

The winter apples will always bring the greatest profit, and the apple orchard should be made up mostly of the winter sorts. In western New York the advice used to be, in planting a thousand trees plant nine hundred and ninety-nine Baldwins and plant the other tree a Baldwin. While those who may have been too large a planting of one variety, it shows the high esteem in which this apple is held as a market fruit; no variety yields larger crops, or bears shipment better or is more attractive in color and size and shape than the Baldwin. While not of the highest quality it is esteemed as an cooking apple and for cooking.

Plant in October or November, or in spring.

Of Pears—Plant for a succession Wilder Early, Tyson Bartlett, Garber, Seckel, Howell, Bosc, Bosc Extra, Flemish Beauty, Sheldon, Bartlett, Anjou, Mt. Vernon, Clairgeau, P. Barry, Winter Nelis, Kieffer, A prominent New York orchardist says: "In planting an orchard of one thousand trees, I should plant one hundred Wilder Early, three hundred Bartlette, three hundred Anjou, one hundred Clairgeau, one hundred Sheldon, twenty-five Kieffer, fifty Howell. But for commercial purposes four varieties are better than a greater number, although the orchardist may plant a few rows of different varieties to test them.

Plant pears in October and November, if possible, or in spring.

For peaches in succession through the season, plant Alexander, Hyslop, Schumaker, Amsden, Crawford's Early, Mountain Rose, Liberty, Miss Rivers, Crosby, Muir, Orange, Stump the World, Woodbury's Utah Orange, and Heath's Cling.

The best varieties of peach to plant for the market may be gleaned from the practice of J. H. Drury, the best authority on peaches in the United States. He recently planted an orchard of 20,000 trees, the bulk of the planted as follows: 6,000 Mountain Rose, 4,000 Crosby, 3,000 Stump the World, and 3,000 Late Crawfords. Middle trees in the fall if possible, and heel in damp soil, covering entire and plant in spring.

The best varieties of Utah apples to plant are Mother, Transcendant, General Grant, Hyslop and the Siberian.

Plums and prunes are hardy trees, and may be planted in the fall to good advantage. The best kinds are the Bradshaw, Pond's Seedling, Cox's Golden Drop, Gerdi, Lombard, and Yellow Gage plums, and Imperial, French, German and Italian prunes, named in their order of merit. As a matter, the prunes are the more profitable. Of the plums Lombard is the most profitable to cultivate, though it is not the best eating.

The Japanese plums are becoming very popular and some of them do well here, as the Burbank, Abundance and Bloom, and they ripen very early and the fruit is excellent.

Cherries are better if planted in the spring, the best varieties are: For sweet—Yellow Spanish, Black Tartarian, Napoleon, Black Eagle and Black Eagle. The best sub-acid cherries (the most profitable to grow for market) are Early Richmond, Montmorency, May Duke, Hortense, Olivet, and English Morello. Each variety is named in the order of ripening.

The three leading Nectarines are Early Violet, Hunt's Tawney and Boston.

The apricots are led by a Utah variety in point of quality—Moulton's Seedling, Tilton, Early Rivals, Early Golden, Moor Park and Blenheim.

The best quinces, in order of merit, are the Fuzzy Orange, Orange and Meech Prolific. Plant in fall or spring.

Of the hardy true vine grapes, the best varieties to grow in Utah are claimed to be the Worden (black), Moore's Diamond, Salem (white), Nadgers (white), Concord (black), Agawam (red), Pocklington (amber), and Delaware (red). The first three named are considered the best of the kind for all purposes.

Many of the so-called tender kinds of grapes will ripen in this climate in favorable localities without any protection. We recommend the planting as the best and most profitable varieties of the Black Hamburg, Black Malvoisie, Muscat, of Alexandria, Black Prince, Rose of Peru, White Sweetwater and Verjenne. Try the two first named.

From the extensive list of blackberries Kittatinny, Wilson Jr., and Snyder are recommended and the Lucretia Dewberry.

Five kinds of raspberries are named—the Cuthbert (red), Greg (black cap), Gotheagan (black cap), Turner (red), and Marlboro (red).

The gooseberries recommended as the finest from mildew, and as the most profitable are Houghton and Oregon Champion for white and Red Jacket for red.

The best currants are Fay's Prolific, Versailles and White grape.

The leading strawberries at present are Bubach, Jessie, Crescent, Sharpless and Wilson. Plant the Bubach in rows alternate with other varieties. Of the varieties named above the Bond Sirve is the earliest and claimed to be the best grower.

BEGIN WITH SMALL FRUIT.

It is suggested to the beginner to start the orchard with strawberries and small fruits, they will bring almost immediate returns, are the most profitable as well.

BEAUTIFUL DREAMS.

A Golden-Haired Child of It Was Found Freezing in a Huge Drift.

New York Press.

In the blinding swirl of sharp-edged snow that whirled down the east north-east gale, a policeman saw, in a snow bank at One Hundred and Twelfth street and Lenox avenue, the form of a man's boots. Breasting the storm, he hurried forward, expecting to find behind the high white drift the dead man's boots. Breasting the storm, he hurried forward, expecting to find behind the high white drift the dead man's laborers engaged in that neighborhood succumbs by the fury of the storm.

Instead, he uncovered a golden-haired child, her arms clasped over her head and her face in a rosy-cheeked ecstasy. She was buried beneath three feet of snow. She was in the dreamy half-conscious state that precedes death by freezing.

"Oh," she said, "it is all so beautiful. Do not move me, please. I see green fields and a brook with pebbles, and I want to sleep under the trees on the bank."

Straightway the policeman lifted the child from her snowy shroud and bore her to his arms and hurried down Fifth avenue. A dozen workingmen were there, warming themselves with smoking pipes of cheap tobacco.

"Here," commanded the policeman, "bear a hand. The girl is dying."

As soon as he uttered the words a rough way perhaps, but with a good heart and generous intent, in two minutes the green fields and the brook had disappeared, and the child came back to the coldness of reality. They carried her to the nearest actually cold, and that her feet were caused in a pair of men's boots.

As soon as she had sense enough to know where she was, she said she was Clara McGlinn, 9 years old, and that she had been sent from the Ladies' Aid and Fuel Society to beg for food and clothing for her mother, her bedridden father and her little brothers and sisters. She became sleepy, she said, and wanted to sleep.

So wretchedly poor was the family that when Clara was sent out to seek charity she was without either go barefooted or put on a pair of her father's big boots, and it was the tips of these that Patrolman Daniel Henry saw sticking out of the snow-drift.

The men in the saloon divided up all the money they had. The policeman added his share, the barkeeper doubled the contribution, and when the child was taken home to her mother, Mr. Hyslop, who is president of the Aid society at No. 6 East One Hundred and Twelfth street, $7 was added to the fund, besides a lot of warm clothing.

"Such beautiful dreams," said little Clara, "but was I really going to die? It was cold, awfully cold at first, but then I got sleepy, and I saw green grass and the pretty little brook under the trees."

"STRICTLY PRIVATE"

THE CONFIDENCE REPOSED IN DR. R. V. PIERCE, BY Suffering Women.

WHEN a woman first feels backache, nervousness, weariness, bearing-down pains, or other symptoms of derangement, displacement or female trouble, she naturally turns to seek medical help. But as she takes the first step she shudders and shrinks back.

"THERE'S A LION IN THE WAY"! and that lion in the way is the dreaded familiarity of the questions, the indelicate examinations, the offensive local treatments, generally inseparable from the "doctoring" of a local practitioner.

THERE'S A BETTER WAY FOR WOMAN—to sit down in her own private room and write a private letter to Dr. R. V. Pierce, of Buffalo, N. Y., setting forth her symptoms, telling her troubles. That letter will be read by Dr. Pierce in privacy as strict as that in which it was written. Its contents will be treated as a sacred confidence. The reply will be written in private and mailed in a private envelope, perfectly plain and bearing upon it no advertising or printing. There is absolutely no charge for this consultation by letter.

500,000 WOMEN have been confidentially treated by Dr. Pierce, and his staff of skilled specialists in the past thirty odd years, and ninety-eight out of every hundred who have been so treated have been perfectly and permanently cured.

There is hope for you however sick you are; there is help for you however chronic your disease, when you write to Dr. Pierce.

YOU WRITE TO A DOCTOR when you write to Dr. Pierce—a doctor of more than thirty years' experience, at the head of one of the most important medical institutions in the land. The advice of Dr. Pierce is not to be classed with that offered by those who are not qualified physicians, and cannot give the advice of a physician, although they seek, by cunning advertising to convey the idea that they can. Bear in mind, that the advice of the unqualified woman is just as useless and just as dangerous as that of the unqualified man.

"QUIT ALL DOCTORS AND GAINED EIGHT ALONG."

ESCAPED AN OPERATION.

"It is with pleasure that I write you to let you know the great benefit I have received from your medicines, and by following your advice regarding self-treatment at home," writes Mrs. Debra Erickson, of 426 Rice Street, St. Paul, Minn. "You kindly advised me to take Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription and 'Golden Medical Discovery,' and 'Pleasant Pellets.' When I wrote you I had been to three different doctors, and ten of them said I would never get better without going to the hospital for an operation. I just sat down and cried, and said, 'If I have to die, I will die at home with my own dear little ones.' I had a miscarriage, which left me so weak all summer. Was not able to do anything. If I would get up and walk to the kitchen and back I would have to lie in bed for a day, or sometimes two days. Last August I picked up one of Dr. Pierce's pamphlets and read of his wonderful work. I wrote to him for information and received an answer within few days from the day I wrote, advising me to try his medicines. Now I have used six bottles of his 'Favorite Prescription' and six of the 'Golden Medical Discovery,' and the result is just wonderful. I did not tell the doctors what I was taking. I have not been to any physician since the day I received the first letter from Dr. Pierce, and I feel as good as I ever did. Before I had the miscarriage, I was so nervous I had to have some one by my side all the time, even in day time, and I could hardly eat anything. I took treatment from a doctor twice a week, and every time I would go there I felt so sick, but since I quit all the doctors and began taking your medicines, I gained right along. I gained 40 pounds within the last four months. I weighed 124 when I began taking your medicines (in August) and now I am up to my usual weight, 164. I cannot thank you enough for your wonderful medicines, and I wish you every success in the treatment of other cases, as you have had to mine. When I think about how I suffered last summer, it seems now like a dream. My aged father was by me all summer, and at times he could not get out of patience with me, saying that I make you so peevish? What will you be when you are my age? His speaking so would only make me feel worse. I did not know I was a misery to every one around me, but can realize it now. I will cheerfully recommend your remedies to all my afflicted friends, for to-day I am as well and feel as good as ever."
