The second week of the Lenten season has been marked by a slight falling off in the number of social events and in increased interest and attendance in the literary clubs, the remarkable exceptions consisting on the part of many having the effect accompanying an admirable greater interest in intellectual pursuits. Spite of both, however, and the discouraging state of the weather, which has rendered stormy, during the past seven days, the greater part of the population, it resolves a fair number of both public and private entertainments having occurred for just week.

* * *

On Wednesday night the University building was the scene of a celebration which memory will linger with. Its walls long after it has passed from the land of the of the location where same the affair happened. The occasion was the passage of the bill providing for a change of site for the University buildings, and the appropriation of a sufficient sum to begin the design. The enthusiasm evoked by the action taking vent in a celebration, in the form of a delightful social function tendered to the governor and Legislature, the guests of the different classes and societies which contributed to the success crowned to the occasion brilliant with their several class colors, the hall being literally festooned with the colors of the institution, the colors of the different classes and societies, and the colors of the present year's graduating class—navy blue, and old Gladstone, and was brilliant in features and accessories of purple and gold.

The library was a fairyland combining of the colors of all the classes mingled with the regal red and white of the institution, arranged with artistic effect. In another room the class banners waved amidst patriotic decorations of national flags and the classic red and white bearing of alma mater, and here and there streamers of purple and gold and white and red prominent legends of welcome to the guests in hospitable and complimentary vistas.

In the hall of honors the reception took place, the students, formed in lines, marching into the presence of the assembled legislators to the sound of inspiring measures played by the Brigham Young band. An address was made by President J. T. Kingsbury, followed by responses on the part of Joseph J. Cannon and Prof. McNay, representing the University, President Wells and the members of both houses of the Legislature responding with speeches replete with compliments to the University and concern, upon the past record of the University, and its future bright prospects.

This feature was followed by a delightful entertainment in the way of musical and dainty dancing, the social activities continuing till a late hour, during their progress the legislators were officiated by the students as the "pets" of the various classes—the boys in lady escorts to drown out the lady and dancing a Waltz of Waltzes that came sigh lifting the rafters from the building. Taken altogether the affair must have produced a definite impression upon the minds of the Legislators as to the greatness of the institution and enthusiasm with which the students received their recent effort in behalf of the University.

* * *

On Wednesday night the local representatives of the three extradition of conventions gave a pleasant reception—the event being in the form of a ball, which took place in Christensen's hall.

The music for the occasion was composed of familiar airs of the three nations, the music search with which the ball was opened consisting of a pretty medley of national airs of Denmark, Sweden and Norway. Nearly five hundred people were present, the affair being an exceedingly enjoyable occasion to all present.

* * *

The members of the Myrtle Lodge Knights of Pythias joined in a celebration at Castle Lake on Wednesday night, the affair consisting of a pleasant entertainment to the war of a bouquet made up of speeches, recitations and songs, during the first part of the evening, followed by social conversation and refreshments afterward. The opening address was made by Prof. W. Gardner, and was followed by speeches from N. W. Sommerdorf, E. Dwyer and Grand Chancellor C. F. Jennings of Ogden. Recitations were given by D. A. Doty, Will Wilcomb and Master Joe Ward, a Spanish duet by Master Ward and Master Doty, a Chinese duet by Master Doty and La Roe with Master Ward, a song by the sisters Dwyer and Master Ward, a Chinese song