LOCAL BRIEFS.

Sheriff Hewlett went to Panguitch, Garfield county, today, to bring back Frank Lewis, alias Mart, wanted here for horse-stealing.

Hewlett Bros., the local manufacturers, have just received a warm letter from Secretary Wilkinson of the Washington County Fair at St. George, thanking them for offering special premiums at the fair. The prizes offered were first a gold medal for the best cream on the Exposition of Washington County, and second, one dozen cans of Three Crown baking powder.

Isaac M. Waddell, the well known attorney, is contemplating the removal of his family to Twin Bears, Idaho, where Mr. Waddell has a large ranch of 1,100 acres. The gentleman will spend both next week and one-half the situation before changing his place of residence. It is Mr. Waddell's intention to go into ranching on a large scale, as he says there are abundant opportunities for it in that section.

Captain H. D. Styer, formerly a lieutenant of the Sixteenth Infantry at Fort Douglas, and who is now transiting with his regiment, the Thirteenth Infantry, from Fort Porter, N. Y., to the Philippines, was greeted at the Rio Grande Western depot last evening by a number of friends. County Surveyor Wilson, who is a brother-in-law of Captain Styer, accompanied him to Ogden. Mrs. Styer remained at Fort Porter.

Dr. Seymour B. Young is out and around again attending to his patients after being confined to his house last week owing to a painful accident that left his ankle sprained. He fell and twisted his ankle a week ago when, while endeavoring to assist his horse from sticking post, he slipped and fell upon the carbonate with sufficient force to fracture one of his ribs. Although Dr. Young feels considerable pain at the present, he says he is getting along alright.

According to the agreement which was filed yesterday for record with the county recorder, it is stipulated that the Provident Life & Trust company extends the time of a mortgage given by Fanny V. Clayton and L. A. Clayton on lots 1 and 2, half block 86, March 23, 1898, with the rate of interest reduced from seven and a half to six per cent yearly. The principal that are mortgaged are 44 by 126 feet fronting on Richards and South Temple streets, and on the original debt of $15,000 the sum of $3,000 has been paid.

The fire department responded to an alarm turned in from box 25 at 8:45 this morning. The call came from a two and a half story brick structure known as the Salt Lake College, situated at 226 east Second South, the roof of which was developing a lively blaze when the department arrived on the scene. A few gallons of chemicals sufficed to subdue the blaze that was caused by a spark from the flue igniting the dry shingles. This is the second fire from a similar cause within 36 hours. The damage was practically nominal, a liberal estimate placing the loss at $15.

BUILT BY E. KESLER.

The Old Mill that Stands in Liberty Park, Erected in 1852.

I built the old Storing mill that stands in Liberty Park for President Brigham Young in 1852. Samuel Richards was my foreman. Pharon Wells and Mr. Weeks were members of the Nauvoo Temple, were prominent hands in assisting in building it. The mill had three runs of burr stones and it made the very best of flour. It was the pride and pleasure of that day and we had in the market of being.

I would say beauty its surroundings and make it attractive, and thousands of people will take great pleasure in viewing one of the old land marks of the early days of Utah.

I am sure that thousands of school, thinking people will come to visit such sights as these the old mill.

PAUPER CLERK SQUABBLE.

A severe session of the board of county commissioners was held yesterday afternoon, owing to the appointment of J. C. Clayton as pauper clerk. It will be remembered that W. F. Gray, the former incumbent, was removed by the board because it was in Clayton's hands, and Mr. Kerrigan appointed in his place. The meeting yesterday afternoon was called for the purpose of giving Commissioner Wilcken an opportunity of receiving charges against Gray. What the nature of the charges would not be learned, but it has been stated that at last week's meeting Gray will be reinstated by the votes of Armstrong and Kerrigan.

IDIOSYNCRASIES OF MONKEYS.

Interesting Stories of the Nimble and Imitative "Missing Links."

SOME VERY BIG FISH TALES.

San Francisco's Magnanimous Bid for the Big National Conventions Next Year.

Special Correspondence.

Washington, April 22.—A consular report to the State department, says that thirty and enterprising Italians in Kerry, the river town near Genoa, are forming and now employ them in the field with good results. This presents a new field of employment for the monkeys and may serve to prevent their wholesale destruction by the people of British India. They are very numerous there, so much so as to be a great pest, and the newspapers of Bombay and Calcutta have recently editorial from Bombay at the present time, engaged in proved this on the place that the monkeys are causing great injury to the fruit trees. Most of these monkeys have disposed his beer or wine, or sandwiches, or cigars, or whatever he may be, stands in expectant attitude, for all the world like a man-waiter. If the table happens to be occupied by a gentleman from the club, entertainment, reasonable looking at the guest. It is a little funny to see the monkey pitching his head with a little bit of a smile, and he calls to each him to say:

"Is a nice day. How does your mother-in-law? Fine, isn't it? Something looking like a speech, the always goes a big, big, which he secures at a Cheapside, low and leaves the cigars behind, which he secures carefully. The money received is tips to these monkeys is making the proprietors rich.

The worship Ralegh has five monkeys, picked up in the tropics, where they abound. The pets are from a bet made in Singapore for a cocoa-nut. They frisk about the boat playing all sorts of antics, and some of them are said to be quite clever at rigging. A sailor came to a tube at the half-rail, to speak with the engineer, when he had hardly finished and gone one of the monkeys climbed cautiously down, and looking around carefully, to see that he was not observed, pocked back of the speaking tube and stuck his nose in. Then inserting his "pace," he foolishly released the whistle-spring, held by his other hand, and was caught fast. Jocko squealed like a pig until the sailor released him.

A baby monkey on the Raleigh died of fever. Its mother thereafter could not be induced to eat, but moped around the deck all day and nearly howed her baby to a watery grave. The funeral ceremony, in which the sailors participated, was of a kind which should be a course was offered and Mrs. Monkey was seen in Dary Jones's locker.

But enough of the Raleigh's pets. Jocko is the prize monkey stories. "I see in the papers that Jean south, they are going to try the experiment of monkey cotton-picking," said Mr. Jocko, a good, kind-hearted man, who is just about as high as H. C. Jacobs, 10 Fourth Street, Salt Lake City.

I think if all Monkeys were as smart as the one I used to have, they would make better cotton-pickers than black pots. If my monkey could have talked he would have took smarter than the average nigger. He was a big, big, mind of the navy helped him from the tropics and presented him to me. I used to have a lot of fun with him in my room at the Capitol, and good company he was, too. He was fond of an occasional sip and liquor, and always a cigar we had together. Jocko would take the bottle to his lips and take off then replace the stopper, and hide the bottle in the place where he had got it, but always he did it. Jocko wound to know when I was thirsty. Without my ever ordering it, he would bring me a cigar. Oh, no.

Mrs. Proctor Knott made a pretty suit of white linen—it-it-trousers. He was very proud of it but only were allowed outside. He was very partial with his clothes, and for every day would wear a suit of cheaper material which he had. He would carefully hook his white flannel suit and hang it away in a closet in the committee room. Jocko was very fond of my daughter and whenever she visited me to the committee room, Jocko would be indeed the chief charge; he ran to a jiffy and rumpled dressed in his best. Several years afterward, I showed him a number of photographs, showing them being one of my daughter. Were he had not seen for three years. He threw up his hands and the photographs fell out, and gazed at it long and affectionately. He could not be induced to give it up.

BUT RAN AWAY,

when we attempted to resume possession of it. We soon discovered its hiding place, however, under the stairs, in a corner, or rather behind it, back of the vertical strip; but we did not thereafter dispute his proprietorship of the picture. Often would he be discovered staring earnestly and affectionately at the photograph. Jocko was useful to me in many ways. He used to arrange and find the paper on my table, and he could open the door to admit visitors.

"Never represent no again about my fish stories," said Delegate Mark Smith of Idaho, when the conversation had concluded his memory story. "That is the biggest whopper I ever heard."

"I have never told a story about a two-hundred pound fish on a hook and line," retorted the senator. "Whereat Mr. Smith, deeply hurt, left the room. He could not look at the picture on the mantelpiece in Dick Bright's office. There was the fish, with a man by my body, and he was around as spunker Rock's waist. The inscription on the back of the picture read, 'Senator Dubois, with his line, and gives the date and all the facts. Photographs don't lie. Isn't this picture proof of the truth?"

WITH A HAND SAW.

"Well, admitting that it is true, that is not such a great feat after all, for when I lived in Arkansas near a deep hole, I used to catch all the fish I wanted with a hand-saw. An ordinary hand-saw, and I never brought much about my fishing prowess either."

"A hand-saw," exclaimed Mark Smith; "you can't catch fish with a hand-saw. I never heard of such a thing."

"Yes, I can," said Mr. Blackburn, "did not use any kind of bait at all—just smoked upon them, measured, and we had them for dinner."

This was greeted with a burst of laughter from the senate chamber, which brought down from his chair, admitting the defeat.

"Come along. They're on me. I'll never tell another fish story while you're around."

"Sit down, this is a true story," urged the senator, as he resumed his seat. "When I lived in Arkansas, before removing to Kentucky, our house was near a beautiful lake, which was very deep and narrow, but deep, and was fairly alive with fish. Now at night the fish sleep with their noses pointed against the bank—

"You don't, a Fact," interrupted Smith with a burst of admiration at the unexpected extinction of his knowledge. "And," proceeded the senator, "a brisk light, instead of scaring them away, seems to attract, fascinate or stupefy them. My wife and I used to slip down to take a moonlight, a hand-saw and a light and bring home a sack filled full of fish, enough to last for two or three days. It's odd you easily discover the sleeping fish, by the red of the bright light, and I could easily spear them with the hand-saw and bring them to me. Now, do you believe me?"

"Yes," replied Smith reluctantly, "I believe you, but I have my opinion of a man who will stab fish on a dark night."

Here are some more stories of Jacobs Fish's early life.

From Salem he went to Paris, and a little boy who was playing with gold bricks discovered in California. He took a boat for America and took a ship for the Golden Gate. He landed in San Francisco with $10 in his pocket and had to pay out seven of them to get a room and take board up from the floor. He goes on the floor that night at a room for which he was to pay $25 a week, and his breakfast the next morning, the cheapest he could find, cost him $2. The result was that his first day in California was begun with $1 in his pocket. He was then 21 years old and he says that, notwithstanding the lack of funds, he felt happy and hopeful. He had, however, only $1 left, and he needed money at once. His first employment was from a Chinaman who had bought some of the vegetables which he had brought along to tend on the voyage. He had carefully dried them and sold them to early comers, and gave Jacobs a share with the understanding that he was to divide the profits. New York papers were then worth $1 apiece in San Francisco, and the men pulled up the stakes and left for the East. He gave the future Supreme Court Justice half cash when that person received it a day and half in the gold mines. Jacobs was offered as much as $10 a day, the prize money seemed brighter. His next venture was in the form of a note which belonged to David Dudley Field. He learned that the signer had grown rich and was able to pay the note, and began to talk about the country, without saying anything about the note. He said to the man, "you will like it out here; this is a glorious country. I have already made $10,000." "Is that so?" replied the man, "I am very glad to hear it, for I have a note of my brother's, David Dudley Field, has been out here and he has grown rich and he promised to pay me the money when he gets back." The man's face fell, but he had been blinding to such an extent about his prospects that he could not refuse to pay it. He looked the note over, and then at last, in a sharp tone of voice, he said, "I signed this, and I thought you said the full amount with interest."

At one time Judge Turner swore he would drive Field into the Yuba river, and he advised to buy a shotgun and Bill Turner on stilts. He replied that he would not do that, and that he could only act in self-defense. He bought, however, a couple of revolvers and practiced firing at a mark by throwing them into the air, holding the pistol in his pocket. He said that he soon acquired considerable skill, and that he could hit a mark 20 feet across the street. He thinks he could have hit a man easily, and could have killed at 50 paces if he had had a mind to. Turner, seeing that he would not avoid him he would be "gone up" in a few days, said that if he dared attack him or come near him in a threatening manner he

WOULD KILL HIM.

Judge Turner, upon learning of Mr. Jacobs' fear of his revolver, did not seek to carry out his threats. He was jealous of the court, however, and he prevented Field from attacking him.

Shortly after this Justice Field was in San Jacinto County. He had a revolver in his pocket and in hand in a drawer of his desk in the legislative hall. He also carried a pocket knife. Some one had carried a pocket knife to a judge in a case, and challenged to a duel, and he had sent a message to challenge, and as he had the choice of weapons, stated that the fight should be with knives, and that he would tie his left hand behind him and fight with each man to have a Colt's revolver and a bowie knife. The two principals were to be placed in a room, where the door was barred. To these terms the challenged party would not consent and the duel was off.

The first authentic information received here of the intention of Spain to the renewed insurrection of Spain to elevate her representative in the country to the rank of a minister was received by an official cablegram from Madrid, which announced that the Duc d'Arcos had been appointed to succeed Polavieja in America. This action on the part of the Spanish government is still necessary, as the Duke has been regarded as a Madrid by a director of equal rank, and will be sent to Washington. Polavieja is to leave America's first ambassador to the court of Spain. The Duc d'Arcos is known to be a man of the highest rank of the nobility in this city, and he occasional meets with full appreciation of the offices here. He was at Washington some years ago, and he has lived there and married Miss Virginia Lowry, of this city. He was recently minister to Mexico.

San Francisco is making an energetic bid for both of the national political conventions next year. It has been the ambition of the residents of the metropolis of the Pacific coast for a good many years to have the honor of entertaining at least one national convention. They have kindly offered to pay the expenses of all the delegates and alternates from the time they leave their homes until their return provided the convention is held in their city. They have also stipulated not to reduce the number of delegates, but that they intend to anything. Free champagne and free everything will be the order of the day. However, it is not remembered likely that San Francisco will capture either the Republican or Democratic convention next year. The time that would be consumed in going to the Pacific coast and getting back if it should be held in San Francisco is the most serious objection in the minds of the national leaders. It would mean an absence from home of at least three weeks to the majority of the delegates and their friends.

The indications are that both national conventions next year will be held in Chicago.—CARLTON.

GUARD NOTES.

A large number of officers witnessed with interest the drill of company A, National Guard of Utah, at the armory last evening. After the regular drill a special one was gone through with, as is to take part in the Y. M. C. A. entertainment to be given at the Theater next Friday evening. The boys are very proud to be being looked for by the Y. M. C. A. and this summer's work will be of unusual interest.

MAIL CHANGE SERVICE.

Early last January, Mr. Fisher of Oxford, Idaho, communicated with Postmaster Thomas, asking him if it would be possible to inaugurate a mail service between Oxford and Salt Lake. The matter was referred to the proper bureau and nothing was heard of it. Mr. Thomas has received word from T. R. McMillan, who has charge of the Oxford mail, that he has been informed that commencing May 15, a double service will be put on between Oxford and the railroad station. Thanks are due to Mr. McMillan for the manner in which he has done the mails can be forwarded on both the local and through trains.

AMUSEMENTS.

There is one bright and beautiful thing about the Devil's Auction—it plays every night, and every night it is a good show. Many theater patrons realized the enjoyable when the engagement was announced for one night only, but the success of the production was so great that it became impossible to prolong the engagement here, owing to the feeling of anticipation on the part of the people who had been looking for a good show. Last evening, there was hardly an inch of unoccupied space to be found in the Salt Lake Theater, and the demand for liberty commenced to be made from various portions of the house. Performances of this kind are very rare, and little have been the present Devil's Auction, but not much. It there is one thing more than another which is the principal personage who has lines to utter, betting, poetry, the business of the play, it is the Devil himself, and he is on the stage almost all the time throughout. It was not in evidence last evening. The lady who played the Queen Portia was willing, acted like a kindergarten, prize declaimer; the lawyer was by the last degree wishy-washy; the judge composed the committee of the jury, could show an average intelligence, if not good, in a new, and, of course, preferable to his actual shape. The ballet girls and the chorus girls were good looking, and they had good voices, and they were not of the first grade, though the gallery paralled appeal of them continuously.
