PROVO.

PROVO, UTAH, - Oct. 2, 1894.

New Mining Company.

Articles of incorporation of the Alma Mining and Milling Co. have been filed with County Clerk Halliday on Saturday. The corporation owns the Alma group of mines adjoining the Bullion-Beck and Champion mines in Eureka, on the north. The capital stock is $250,000, divided in 250,000 shares of $1 each. The incorporators are C. E. Loose, David Evans, R. R. Clark, Reed Smoot, L. Holbrook. These gentlemen form the board of directors, with Reed Smoot president and L. Holbrook vice president. John R. Twelves is the secretary and treasurer. Fifty thousand shares are held as treasury stock.

The Alma group of mines was bought a short time ago by Messrs. Loose, Evans and Smoot from Mr. V. L. Thomas and others, and the new owners commenced to work their property. On Friday last a Mr. Ryan took possession of the property by a force of armed miners from the Bullion-Beck and Champion mine, and ousted the men placed on the property by Loose et al. Mr. Ryan seeks to hold possession under claim of a bond and lease given by Thomas some years ago to a Mr. Rockwell, and long since expired, although a clause in the instrument provides that no money should be paid till certain suits involving the property are settled. The property has been, until lately, in litigation which was determined in favor of Thomas et al., a short time before the sale to the present incorporators was made. The board of directors of the new incorporation authorized Mr. Evans to employ such legal assistance as was necessary to protect the rights of the company against Mr. Ryan's claim.

Republican Candidates.

The following are the candidates nominated by the Republican county convention at Payson:

For delegates to the Constitutional Convention: John E. Booth, J. R. Kesler, J. D. Jones, C. E. Loose, Provo; J. W. Bissell, Springville; R. P. Snell, Spanish Fork; George Webb, Lehi; Wm. Bramwell, American Fork; J. T. Thorne, Pleasant Grove; J. S. Page Jr., Payson; J. W. Vance, Alpine; D. R. Taylor, Salem.

Selectmen: Thos. R. Parker, American Fork; Charles Brewerton, Payson; J. B. Bringhurst, Springville. County clerk, W. H. H. Paxman, Provo. County recorder, Don R. Corey, Provo. Sheriff, John W. Turner, Provo. County Assessor, Richard Bradshaw, Lehi. Collector, George D. Snell Jr., Spanish Fork. Treasurer, J. D. Walley, Pleasant Grove. County attorney, Thos. Jahn, Provo. Surveyor, W. D. Dougall, Springville. Coroner, F. H. Simmons, Provo.

Notes.

Samuel T. Vickers, of Nephi, convicted of befouling water in Salt Creek canyon, was fined $20 and no costs.

The time for sentence of Magnus Erickson, of Ephraim, convicted of adultery, has been changed from October 1 to December 20 upon request of defendant's attorney.

Joseph S. Patterson et al, tried in the First district court for malicious trespass, were acquitted. The case had been appealed from the justice's court at Scofield, and defendants' costs were taxed against Carbon county.

A case against Aleck Jennings and Peter Greenhalgh, for forging and uttering a forged check, was, upon upon motion of Prosecuting Attorney Thurman, dismissed. The check in question had been lost, and for that reason it would be difficult to convict.

Aleck Jennings and Nephi Jennings, convicted of obtaining money under false pretenses from Almon Robinson, of Fillmore, by selling him an interest in a salted mine, are confined in the county jail in default of $2,500 bail pending sentence. A motion for a new trial will be made. Greenhalgh has given bail.

AUSTRALIAN ORANGE CULTIVATION

The cultivation of oranges and lemons has lately become an important industry in New South Wales, especially in the districts around Sydney. The orange is not an indigenous fruit, but was introduced shortly after the work of settlement had been commenced, a clergyman who had arrived in Australia with the first fleet obtaining a few seeds from Portugal, which, planted in his garden on the shores of the Parramatta, grew so rapidly that within a few years he was enjoying the pleasure of eating oranges obtained from his own trees. The suitability of the soil for orange cultivation being thus practically demonstrated, the formation of orangeries became general in the districts watered by the Parramatta and Lane Cove rivers, afterwards extending to Maitland and other portions of inland country. The orangeries range from four to twenty acres in extent, and, as a rule, bring a fair amount of profit to the owners, especially where the work of drainage has been properly attended to. When the trees are full grown and kept free from scale and other insects, they become extremely valuable, each yielding fruit to the value of 24 or 25 per annum. During the early spring time the trees are white with blossom, and rival in beauty of appearance the masses of peach blossoms with which residents in Japan are familiar. The orange is so easily grown in some districts that, like the gooseberry bush and currant tree in England, it often finds a place in the humblest garden. So abundant also is the fruit that in most seasons the supply is largely in excess of the means of local consumption; consequently endeavors are being made to develop an export trade with the United Kingdom, Canada, and elsewhere, the oranges arriving in London when the imports from Spain and other countries of southern Europe have ceased. Almost every known description of orange is grown, the trees continuing in bearing for many years. The work of packing the fruit for the London market is still imperfectly understood, but when the requisite experience has been obtained large quantities will find their way to the United Kingdom during the summer months, when the fruit is most welcome. Until 1879 no statistics relative to orange cultivation were collected in New South Wales, but in 1882 it was found that there were in the colony 5,116 acres devoted to orange-growing; in 1889 the area had become more than doubled, being 11,158 acres, representing 1,917 orangeries, with an average area of six acres each. Of the 11,158 acres, about 9,601 acres were productive, the remaining 2,057 acres representing young trees not in bearing. The productive area yielded, in 1889, 10,360,970 dozen oranges, or about 1,200 dozen per acre; but, as the yield from fair-sized trees during an average season is 5,000 dozen per acre, it is clear that a considerable proportion of the fruit was obtained from young trees. Some of the orange growers devote a portion of their land to peach cultivation, and there is no prettier sight than that afforded by the myriad orange blossoms on the one side and the equally luxuriant clusters of peach blossoms on the other. Strangely enough, notwithstanding the abundance and cheapness of the fruit in the colony, the bulk of the orange marmalade consumed is imported from the United Kingdom, although an excellent article can be locally produced.

Compelled by Circumstances.

THIS what the makers of Bicycles write when they say that their new wheels will be lighter for '95. The "circumstances" mean just this: "The STEARNS, that superb road wheel, that strong wheel with lines of beauty in every detail; the wheel that has passed the experimental stage and demonstrated to the wheel [illegible] one maker at least knows how to give us a 22 pound wheel, has compelled the other makers to write their trade that they will have 22 pound road wheels for '95." Only one year behind the STEARNS with their promise. Can they do it? Namely, can they make a road wheel at 22 pounds that will stand up? They said it couldn't be done. That they couldn't do it, and pooh-poohed the STEARNS, saying it wouldn't stand up, but it did. Now, we don't think conditions have changed with them. We believe they will fail. We don't think they know how to so handle their materials so as to make the light wheels that will stand road work, and we believe their promises will be a barren one, just as their statements that their wheels were 25 pounds this year were not true, their so-called 25 pound wheels actually weighing 32 pounds.

A Lady said to the writer: "I have been riding a wheel, built like a watch, and what do you think it weighs? I was told it weighed 26 pounds and it actually weighed on the scale at the Salt Lake Hardware Co's. store 32 pounds. What do you think of that?" We didn't dare to think. Our think machine had stopped running.

TRY THE STEARNS. | TRY THE GENDRON. | We have a sample of the '95 ORIENT. [illegible]
