NEWS OF THE WEST.

A Drunken Man Takes His Last Sleep on a Railway Track.

SUFFERING THIRST ON A DESERT.

Asphyxiated by Gases—A Wyoming Celebration Ends in Burning Wax—Causes of Death.

Now it is reported from Colorado that the strange fire has been seen on New York mountains, and people will endeavor to reach it by the use of snowshoes.

Lottie L. Wood killed herself Monday morning at Kern City, Cal., by taking prussic acid. The act was committed until g a fit of despondency, resulting in disappointment.

Glenwood, Colorado, Avalanche: Mrs. Cutler, who conducts a street making establishment in the Brown block, has been called to Ogden, Utah, by a telegram announcing the death of her father.

Geo. Adriaen, owner of a bakery and restaurant at San Miguel, Cal., committed suicide with a pistol on Monday afternoon. Despondency was the cause. He was accordingly sent a well deserving cremation.

Joseph C. Howard, a painter, committed suicide Sunday afternoon at Los Angeles, Cal., by shooting himself through the heart. The act was attributed to sudden reverses. He was at one time a prominent member of the Knights of Pythias.

Wilfram Baker, a resident of San Francisco, employed by Orr & Brothers, contractors at Stockton, Cal., early Monday morning, while intoxicated, fell asleep upon the track and was run over by a freight train and instantly killed. His body was mangled and crushed beyond recognition, his head being found nearly 100 yards behind the scene of the accident.

Cheyenne, Wyo., Tribune: Kansas City parties have purchased 10,000 acres from Cheyenne, and will begin shortly the work of colonizing the tracts. Large reservoirs will be constructed, the land placed under irrigation, divided into farms and will be rented to farmers. The land is situated near the Gordon and Campbell ranch and is very fine for farming.

Miss Amanda Van Horn, of San Francisco, Cal., by dress in her apartment Saturday night in order to lie down and fall asleep. She was found by her father early next morning dead, from the effects of illuminating gas which had found its escape through the tightly closed apartment. It appears that the young lady was in the habit, even in warm weather, of shutting herself in closely, in order to smoke the ordinary house. Upon this occasion, it seems, she had arisen from her couch, and in returning to bed she must have turned off the gas in carelessly that some was left to escape.

James H. Rose Jr., the young carpenter who was taken to the Alameda, Cal., sanitarium last Friday after being violently seized about the body, died at 2 o'clock next morning. The accident which proved fatal to him was due to his efforts in assisting to put out a fire at the Van Brunt residence, when his clothing ignited from a blazing pot of wax which he was carrying out of the house. He suffered great pain before his death, his body being a mass of burns from the waist upward until hardly a whole piece of skin remained. Rose was 22 years of age.

Malad, Idaho, Enterprise: This is truly an unlucky year for Utah sheepmen. Thursday Sheep Inspector Covey brought in sight who fled visiting the sheep law. The names are as follows: Edward Freeman, Estate Pierce, Edward Cassin, two Nelson Brothers, Geo. Carson, James Duckworth and Thomas Crane. They were taken before Judge Howard and placed under $200 bonds to appear before the district court next month. The men all say they propose to carry the fight through to the supreme court before they quit. It will be a fight to be interesting fight, as both sides are determined to carry out their intentions.

Information comes from San Diego, Cal., that J. M. Stone, a cattleman whose range is on Palm Springs, on the edge of the desert, was brought into camp last Tuesday when he was surprised to see two men, badly weary and apparently half crazed, approaching from the desert. They waited, stooping over as if half dead, with fatigue and seemed to be blind. As they neared the camp, they saw it and held fast toward it. The taller of the two, who was the stronger, was a pathetic hanging on the limb of a mesquite tree near by and with a hoarse cry ran toward it. Stone was quick for him however, and took possession of it. The two strangers were frantic and pointed to their mouths in a phrenic manner, being unable to speak on account of the swollen condition of their tongues. Stone poured out a little water on a cloth and each man moistened his protruding tongue. Then, by degrees, each was allowed to swallow a little water. Both were in the extremity of suffering from thirst, and begged piteously for more water. But the cattleman were cautious and would not allow them to drink too freely. The men soon recovered their senses, but were very weak, and it was some time before food would remain on their stomachs. They stayed at Stone's camp for three or four days and finally left for home. The two men told Stone that they were brothers, named Peterson, and that they had left Santa Ana three weeks before to go prospecting on the desert. They went to Salton by rail and then struck south-west, without a guide, but with plenty of provisions and a full description of the country. "We got into a series of dry washes south of Salton," said one, "and were soon lost out of one than we were in another. Each looked the same, and before we knew it we were lost. But Sun Jack's mountain was in plain view, and a spur of the mountain was not very far west of us. So we were not scared much. Our water gave out, and we did not know where to go to find more. We looked around a little for water, but after several attempts we soon discovered and abandoned, and then decided to strike out for a green place we saw to the southwest. After three days of wandering, during which we suffered until fortune from thirst, not having a drop of water to drink during that time, we crawled in canyon and found a few drops water. This must have been Borrego valley. Then after resting two days we made up our minds to strike out for the mountain, which was covered with snow. We made a bee line for it, but the ground was mostly rough as we approached the foothills, and we were lost again, suffering terribly from thirst. We threw away all our rub in our haste to find water, but we did not feel unkindly to the mesquite tree nature of thirst. After two days' traveling we struck Stone's camp at Palm Springs and were saved. Too saved our lives by giving us a little water at a time, for we would have drank a full all spots if we had been allowed to do so."

He Knew Where to Go.

The Boston Traveler recounts a funny incident which took place in another room in that city in the trial of Mr. Bilton. A witness, after telling some of Bilton's alleged frauds, went on to recount an unpleasant experience he had with the accused. The witness came the matter pro bono counsel.

"I called at his office," said the witness, "to try to compel him to return the money he secured from me by false representations. He ordered me from his office, and I didn't want to be assaulted. I contented to stay him. As I was going out he told me to go to—"

"And in consequence of what he told you to do, what did you do?" inquired Assistant District Attorney Hughes.

"Went straight to police headquarters," replied the witness.

It is needless to add that the testimony of the court was disturbed for the next five minutes.

Love.

"Twoddle's an awful fool, isn't he?"

"He's in love, you know."

"What has that to do with his being a fool?"

"Don't you know the definition of love? 'Two souls with but a single thought,' etc."

"Well?"

"That allows Twoddle just half a thought, you see."—New York Sun.

Electric Railway.

An electric wire with a bit of cheese on the end is the latest outrage. The rat or mouse stands upon a small metal plate as he takes the bait, and as his body touches the plate he is caught by the electric current. He is electrocuted before he has done more than smell the cheese.
