TARIFF DISCUSSION.

A Big Crowd Yesterday in the House to Hear McMillan, Reform.

WASHINGTON, March 9.—The tariff discussion of the Fifty-second Congress opened in the House today with Mr. McMillan (Tenn.) leading tariff reform and Mr. Dingley (Me.) defending the McKinley bill. To Representatives (Ills.), a parliamentarian of many years' congressional experience, was accorded the honor of opening for the committee of the whole. In the days of long political wrangling that are to follow in the history of the 52d Congress, Speaker Crisp will be the nearest to his seat. Today he occupies a seat in the gallery and was as interested as either side in the fray. The other 356 members who had eagerly forward to it with every word of the proceeding written. The galleries and floor were also crowded, and the crowning indication of the importance of the discussion was the deep attention to the speakers. During McMillan's speech, Burrows (Mich.) and Reed for seeing Republicans, one of whom voted against the McKinley bill, joined on the Democratic side, to be near the Tennessee gentleman as he
