OUR MONTANA FRIENDS.

The NEWS extends a cordial greeting to the Montana excursion six who arrived in Salt Lake today, and trusts that their visit will be one of unalloyed pleasure, and that they will return to their homes with a more abundant measure of good cheer from having mingled with the people here. They are our neighbors, not foreign to the sentiments, fellowships and aims which inspire people here as a part of the Great West; with them we have common aspirations and a common destiny. But the closer fraternal association which comes from their presence in our State is highly appreciated, and must redound to the mutual good of both. The personnel of the party which represents the foremost thought and enterprise of the Mountain State gives abundant evidence of the brightness, vigor, and physical and intellectual force that mark out for Montana a glorious career. The editorial party is thrice welcome to Utah; and may many similar visits be made in the future.

MR. DEBS'S UTOPIA.

The New York World in its issue of June 20th devotes a page to the colonization scheme of Mr. Eugene V. Debs, of which the press of the country has had much to say lately. Two letters, one from Governor Heber M. Wells of Utah, and one from Governor J. R. Rogers of Washington, in reference to the subject, will be read with interest. Governor Wells regards the project as utopian. He says:

The Debs-Bellamy plan of colonization and co-operation in this State is regarded here as chimerical. This State offers extraordinary inducements to home-seekers who desire to become actual settlers and tillers of the soil.

There is considerable unoccupied land which may be reclaimed by irrigation from its present desert character by the construction of its reservoirs or impounding the waters and of irrigation canals. This requires capital. The agricultural lands of the State where water may be more readily obtained for irrigation are already taken up. The construction of such reservoir plants or reclaiming arid lands is far more difficult and expensive undertaking than the Debs people seem to realize, so far as may be judged from any statement made public.

The success of building up a community upon a co-operative basis without capital is not practical unless the people undertaking it are actuated by the most unselfish motives and are willing to consecrate their labors for the prosperity and general advancement of the community instead of the individual.

The Mormon people in early days in Utah carried on such a co-operative system with success, because a religious motive which they regarded as divine inspired them. The followers of Debs have apparently no such self-sacrificing interest upon which to anchor their project, and in my opinion if they settle here within a brief time their community would disintegrate and their co-operative plan result in failure. For these reasons our people do not approve Debs's project.

HEBER M. WELLS,
Governor.

Governor Rogers sends a similar message to Wall street. He writes:

I do not know what Debs and Bellamy's plan is in full, therefore I cannot say how it may be regarded; but in general I will say that I am in favor of any plan consistent with our laws which promises to ameliorate the conditions surrounding the poorer classes, now enormously increasing in numbers.

Something must be done for these people, and the comfortable classes, in opposing any and every plan of relief proposed, are simply acting in the selfish way.

I advise Wall street to read Ezekiel, chapter xxi, verses 6? and 70, and learn why Sodom was given to baptism of fire and brimstone.

J. R. ROGERS, Governor.

The verses from Ezekiel referred to are:

Behold, this was the iniquity of thy sister Sodom, pride, fullness of bread, and abundance of idleness was in her and in her daughters, neither did she strengthen the hand of the poor and needy.

And they were haughty, and committed abomination before me: therefore I took them away as I saw good.

We do not know enough of the Debs plan to judge of its supposed peculiar merits, but there can be no doubt of the truth of the view expressed by Utah's Governor, that no co-operative plan without capital is practical, unless the people interested are actuated by the most unselfish motives. Does Mr. Debs hope to bring together thousands of people willing to consecrate themselves for the benefit of the new community?

According to the article in the World, the project is to colonize a state with enough voters to capture the entire governmental machinery. This done the state is to be transferred into a social community. Railroads, telegraph lines and other classes of business now operated by corporations are to be state property. There will be casual and need building. New structures will be reared and new industries developed by the state. There will be employment for all, money for all.

The idea is said to be similar in that advanced in Mr. Bellamy's new pamphlet Equality, where the author builds a state in which there are no rich, no poor, and no distinctions. In Bellamy's book this has been brought about by a gradual and natural revolution, slowly but surely disintegrating the old order of things when there have become impossible. The author intimates that to force the final climax it will come to this, that laborers, learned men, clergymen, and even women gather in public squares and cry out to the "masters of the break" to give them food in exchange for their services. "Do what you will with us, but let us serve you that we may eat and not die," is the burden of their daily supplications to the "masters of the break." When this condition has been brought about the overthrow of the state is at hand and the dividing line between the capitalists and the starving multitudes is obliterated. The last act is a huge bonfire on the site of New York stock exchange and the ground is broken for the Bellamy Utopia.

Mr. Debs, however, proposes not to await the time when everything is ripe for the final harvest, but to force the plan to a realization. He intends capturing a state and transforming it into a socialistic community, confident that other states will follow the example as soon as its excellence has been demonstrated.

There is, it seems to me, at least one important point that reformers of this class generally miss, a fact which alone accounts for the many failures on record. It is this, that whatever else modern society may be guilty of in the direction of oppression and class distinction, are not due to a social system but to the absence in individuals of a strong sense of right and wrong. No system can be invented that will provide adequate protection against wrong, so long as the voice of conscience is silenced. On the other hand, the worst system is of very little consequence so long as those subject to it are striving to do to others as they would be done by. It follows that all reforms of this kind must commence with a moral awakening, an individual regeneration—or end in failure.

Mr. Debs's social experiment is evidently to be undertaken on a larger scale than ever before attempted. The claim has been made that so far socialism has never been put to a practical test sufficiently elaborate to enable anybody to judge of its merits. When the new scheme has been put in operation, this will have been done, and the world will know whether human wisdom is likely to succeed in ushering in a millennium.

GETTING PEOPLE TO CHURCH.

A Methodist pastor at Delaware, Ohio, has adopted as a plan to increase the attendance at his church, the sending of carriages supplied with coachmen to transport the people to church and return free. The proceeding was directed chiefly to the aged and infirm, and in this was commendable. Often there are persons of advanced years or who are suffering from physical disability who would appreciate highly the privilege of engaging in divine worship, but are prevented by their inability to get to the place of meeting when it is distant from their place of abode. It is a truly religious spirit to extend a kindness to those with a view to conferring benefits upon them. But the giving of free rides to others, as is intimated is a part of the innovation referred to, merely to increase the attendance at church, hardly can do so to the advantage of those who would become beneficiaries of the free rides under such circumstances. There is a dignity about religious worship that would impel self-respecting persons from attending a church meeting merely for the free ride to and from the place of assemblage. Some people would accept such terms, just as some attend funerals merely for the prospect of a free ride, but no one has a high regard for those who do so.

SUBMARINE NAVIGATION.

If the reports that come from Oshkosh, Wisconsin, of the results of tests of the Baldwin submarine boat be accurate, then a revolution will be inaugurated in maritime affairs, especially in matters of coast warfare. A brief reference to this boat has been made in the dispatches, in which the vessel's operations were said to be successful. The final trial was set for Monday of this week, and is claimed to have resulted in a most satisfactory way. The boat is now being provisioned for an extended voyage on Lakes Michigan and Huron, for purposes of submarine exploration and survey. It is said the vessel can be made to rise and fall in the water at the wish of the operator, a complete submersion of the craft requiring less than eighteen seconds, and that it can be navigated beneath the surface for a day at a time. One man can navigate the vessel, which is 85 feet long, four feet wide, and seven and a half feet high; is built of steel plates on a framework of angle irons, with an estimated strength sufficient to withstand the water pressure at a submersion of 300 feet; and carries two sets of propelling machinery—a boiler and electric motor. The statements regarding the boat's success in submarine navigation are very positive, and, if borne out in subsequent trials, will make expensive and energetic work necessary to guard the present big navies of the world from destruction by these cheaper but superior-protected vessels, which can use the ocean as an invulnerable shield, not only from heavy guns but from the searching eyes of the watchmen.

THE COMSTOCK FORTUNE.

An interesting story comes from Ohio, whereby there is a new claimant to the Comstock estate. Mrs. John Kramer of No. 1107 Westland avenue, Cleveland, claims to be an heir to S. R. Comstock, who over thirty years ago opened the rich Nevada mine bearing his name. Comstock died many years ago, leaving no known heir. S. P. Comstock and his sister, Mrs. Susan Farrar of Independence, O., know of the facts, but never investigated for the purpose of learning who S. R. Comstock was, and whether they were related. Both are now dead and Mrs. Kramer, who is a daughter of S. P. Comstock, decided to make an investigation. A few months ago her father's second wife died in Akron and after her death an old family Bible was found among the family possessions, which contained a record confirming Mrs. Kramer's belief that she is related to S. R. Comstock. The record shows that he was her great granduncle. Judge E. T. Hamilton of Cleveland was given the case and he reports that the Independence Comstocks and two sisters in Michigan named Comstock are all heirs to the estate. At the time of Comstock's death the mine was said to be worth $60,000,000; with interest it is claimed that the estate is now worth $150,000,000. This property Mrs. Kramer says she will seek her share of in legal proceedings; and if the facts are as claimed in her statement the case will prove a most interesting one.
