THE CRITICS CRITICIZED.

A Sharp Lance, Too, For Both Performers and Public.

To the Editor:

Salt Lake people have long had their reputation established for cool, severe criticisms of dramatic endeavor, but that they do not fully understand and appreciate the true and artistic is now and then demonstrated beyond all question. The critics, too, either do not understand their calling, or else are afraid to give a just, fair and often necessarily severe criticism. I submit that the public has been hood-winked by such neglect long enough. It is better for the critic, better for the public, and better for the performers themselves that the criticism be just, even though severe. We criticise those we love, because of that love we desire their most perfect development.

As for acting and elocution, ranting, unnatural and boisterous recitation too much the general public believes that anything natural and true is commonplace. They cry out for and applaud the former because they cannot distinguish between the natural and the commonplace. They mistake recitation, so true to nature that we can see and feel the idea of the author "has no elocution in it—it is merely common talk and conversation."

Distinguish between the three kinds of discourse, the commonplace, the ranting and the natural. We should be natural, but we certainly should not be commonplace. And while the inward feeling expresses the outward expression, as it always should do, there can be no such thing as routine. People go to the theater and appreciate good acting; they also go and appreciate very bad elocution. The two, acting and elocution, should go hand in hand. An elocutionist may be an actor, but an actor must be an elocutionist. (We are speaking now of the best of course.) The elocutionist has no cause to infringe upon the rights of the actor; and upon this subject allow me to quote from a well known teacher of elocution:

"We should distinguish between the reciter and the actor. * * * There must be no attempt at costume, or dependence upon stage accessories. We must suggest the picture, and allow the imagination of the audience to paint it. We may personate a number of characters * * but we should not act them. * * * The personator draws his locations, scenes, characters and accessories from the realism of the imagination, uses them for the moment to suggest the picture, and then they vanish without any literal accounting for, leaving their idealistic impress upon the minds of the audience. There should be no encroachment upon the actor art by the elocutionist or orator.

If Salt Lake keeps up her reputation and gains a place with her dramatic-loving sister, New York, Boston, San Francisco, and even Chicago, she will have to make an end of accepting everything that is thrown at her and learn the difference between the false and the true.

JOHN P. ISAAC DEAD.

An Old and Respected Citizen Dies From Injuries Received More Than a Year Ago.

John P. Isaac, an old and highly respected resident of the Sixteenth ward, passed from this into the unseen world this morning at the age of sixty-two years.

Death was the result of injuries received in an accident which occurred in July of last year. He was on his way home from the race track when the conveyance in which he was riding was collided with by another vehicle in which were a party of drunken boys. For a time his life hung in the balance but a surgical operation and kind nursing prolonged his days until the final summons which came this morning.

The deceased was the son of Reese and Margaret P. Isaac. He was born at Pawnah, Trevaughn, Carmarthenshire, South Wales, February 2, 1833. He was baptized into the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints in 1849, and arrived in this city in 1850, and resided here continuously until his demise. He held the office of a seventy, and both here and in his native land was known as a man of sterling worth. In every walk of life he performed his duty as he understood it. Many friends will be pained to hear of his death.

Funeral services will be held in the Sixteenth ward meeting house on Wednesday afternoon at 2 o'clock. Friends of the family are requested to attend.

SILVERWARE STOLEN.

The Residence of Attorney Waldemar Van Cott Visited by Thieves.

That Salt Lake is infested with local sneak-thieves there can be no doubt. From all quarters of the city there come reports of petty depredations, which are being committed daily or nightly, and the manner in which the job is generally done goes to show that the pilferers are far from being adepts at the business.

On Saturday night last about 7 o'clock, Lawyer Waldemar Van Cott and family left their home at 417 south First West street, returning about 11 o'clock. Upon leaving, which was immediately after the evening meal, a valuable set of silverware was left on the table, but upon returning the silverware was gone, showing conclusively that the house had been visited during the family's absence. The footprints found in the snow, revealed the fact that the job had been done by two persons—a man and woman, or a man and a boy.

The articles taken were valued at $100, and consisted of one silver sugar bowl, one silver milk pitcher, one silver spoon holder, one syrup pitcher, two silver nuts and two silver pickets, one gold band, solid silver bonbon holder, square shaped with double handle, one pair silver sugar tongs, one and one-half ounce silver tea spoons and two sapphire rings with diamonds on top. The thieves were evidently pretty well scared while operating, as they could have added very materially to their plunder had they left no disposed.

The matter has been reported to police headquarters, and the officers are now at work trying to lay their hands on the guilty ones who are evidently greenhorns at the business.

AMUSEMENTS.

This evening at the Salt Lake Theater the engagement of the Rose Coughlan—L. R. Stockwell company opens with the presentation of The Magistrate. Tomorrow evening Marie and Faces will be given by the same organization. There is every indication that the engagement will be in every respect a successful one. The core, Mr. Stockwell and Miss Coughlan, have matured operatunes and many warm admirers.

On Wednesday and Thursday Schilling minstrels will appear at the Theater. Mr. Schilling claims that his company this season is the strongest of his heavier efforts. The first half offerings and disposies and the novelties were by the company are said to be exceptionally fine.

AT THE GRAND.

Victorine Sardou's comedy, A Scrap of Paper is the bill at the Grand this week. It ought to prove a drawing card with the talent at the command of the Grand company.

Second Quorum of Seventy.

The Second quorum of Seventy, comprising those of that Priesthood residing in the Sixth and Fifteenth wards, will meet in the Fifteenth ward hall this (Monday) evening, at 7:30 o'clock.

Utah County Teachers.

The regular session of the Utah County Teachers' association was held in Provo Saturday, Nov. 23, 1895. After the usual opening exercises, Miss Hutton addressed the association on "The relation of science to the other branches of the curriculum," especially emphasizing its relation to reading, drawing and history.

Prof. N. L. Nelson, of the B. Y. A., addressed the association, his subject being "The title and criticism." As an introduction he gave the popular definitions of the critic: "a man who never sees a good quality, and never fails to see a bad one; he is the human owl, morning the earth, but never seeing noble game. The definition applies to the cynic rather than to the critic. The enlightenment of the nineteenth century and all its attendant glory depend upon the character—the true critic is the man or woman of good judgment; the one who is able to detect the merits and excellences of a composition—the word composition being used in the broadest sense. It is the business of the critic to assist the mind to act well. He who knows how to do a thing well, is a good critic, for the ability to criticise, manifests the ability to do. We become merit in the exact ratio that we become critical. The advancement in all lines of human activities is due to criticism. The clothing we wear owes its beauty and perfection to a multitude of critics, who have worked in such arts. The results have been reached by each workman becoming keener than his predecessor. This faculty to criticise or to improve is as universal in man, that it must have been planted there designedly for a wise purpose. "Let good enough alone" is fully in the extreme. If such doctrine had been followed in Utah, we would still be living in the log hut and the cellar. As to the qualities of a critic, no man or woman is fit to be such who does not lean to optimism, yet either must have considerable pessimism. The one looks for fault the other forgives them. Reverse these qualities and you have the carping critic, one who cannot enjoy the beauties of a composition because all energy is focused to catch a grammatical error or a mispronounced word. Paternalism and materialism, though excellent in their sphere, must not extend to the children of the intellect. The critic should be independent. His bolstering up qualities should be in the secondary of his tearing down qualities. All such qualities of criticism should be shaped and made more perfect, for upon true criticism depends all progress.

Miss Hutton again spoke to the teachers, the subject of her lecture being, "How to Make Your Work systematic."

The Recitation was considered under the following heads:

1. It must be complete in itself.
2. It must be one link of a chain and just as strong as the others.
3. It must be joined to what has gone before.

4. Characteristics—A definite point; logical; clear, thorough; interesting; something taught. Parts of an ideal recitation: introduction; middle parts; ending. Each part should stand out clearly. Ideal recitations must be connected with the previous life of the children, and with this provision—knowledge. Ideal recitations must lead to the world of books. Ideal recitations must have important parts, and these parts clearly emphasized. Results of ideal recitation—1. An increased desire to learn; 2. Increased intellectual power; 3. An increase of organized knowledge.

The first of the midwinter sessions will be held at Pleasant Grove the second Saturday in December. H.

Prof. Mills's Views.

To the Editor:

From what has been published in regard to the foundation of the State Agricultural Society, and the position I have taken on the "Water question" since the matter was brought up in the Constitutional Convention, the impression seems to have gone out that the State Agricultural Society was formed expressly to fight the irrigation commissioners. If this be the case, the impression is entirely wrong. During the discussion in the meeting at which the organization was effected, it was thought that among the many interests that of antagonizes against irrigation corporations would probably be one of the leading subjects for present and future consideration. On investigation it was found that the officers of the State Irrigation association consisted mostly of the presidents and managers of irrigating corporations. For this reason, and owing to the fact that after their proposition was so overwhelmingly defeated in the Constitutional convention, they still persisted in pushing along, it was thought by all who expressed an opinion that the State Irrigation association and as it is grind—and that the grinding would not be to the benefit of the farmers. And at best, it was thought—as one farmer expressed it—they are not in touch nor in sympathy with the plain and practicable methods of the farmer, only in so far as he is made to pay till into their treasury."

Considering that such was the case, three plans were proposed for combating the irrigation association, viz: To join the irrigation association, and when enough farmers had joined all out in and change the name of the association and you have all interested in water corporations; to attempt to checkmate their influence by holding meetings in opposition to any they may build to form the State Agricultural society, as originally designed, and constantly guard the agricultural interest of the State, without reference to any other matter, but be well prepared for self-defense against irrigation corporations.

Here let me state that the records of Salt Lake county show that sixteen (16) irrigation and land companies have incorporated in the past two years. One of those companies alone has incorporated for ten millions of dollars. Four of the largest companies in the territory are not included in the above statement. As far as I can estimate, there have been incorporated in Utah in the past two years irrigation companies with an aggregate of at least fifty millions of dollars. Is this a moderate state of affairs?

It has heretofore been the crowning pride of Utah, of which she has prided itself boasted, that her canals and entire irrigating systems were owned and controlled by the bona fide irrigators. This is as it should be. In some instances, however, I believe it absolutely necessary that capital take hold in the larger plans. I fear, however, that the "absolute necessary" limit has been passed by millions of dollars.

But it is said by some that this fringe in capital and thus helps up the country. Let us see how the country is built up. One of three companies, through its engineer, says: "The estimated cost of bringing water onto the 22,000 acres of land is proposed to reclaim is about $90,000. The company sells water rights at $10 per acre, with an annual fee of 50 cents per acre for maintenance." It will be seen from these figures that $90,000 is put in and $220,000 taken out—the people, meanwhile, paying "maintenance," which probably includes interest on the investment. The expense are obvious. Yet this company sells its water rights cheaper and puts in "maintenance" lower than any other corporation I know of in Utah. The engineer adds: "If property managed, this enterprise should prove to be a lucrative investment, with good returns to the owners." Eminently obvious!

The value of the irrigation works owned and operated by the people is estimated to be between two millions and three millions of dollars. Now come the irrigation corporations and propose to develop the irrigation waters in several times their present worth. In conclusion, let me say that at a meeting of the Utah Irrigation association, held in the Assembly hall in Salt Lake City during last October, I rose and listened to what might be thought to be a combination trade against water corporations. It remained, however, for one speaker to say, in substance: The great danger in Utah is that the waters may fall into the hands of corporations. To this I heartily agree, but would add that the greatest danger in Utah is that the waters may fall into the hands of the corporations represented by the officers of the Utah Irrigation association.

A. A. MILLS,
President State Agricultural Society.

OGDEN.

OGDEN, UTAH, Nov. 25, 1895.

Young Lady Killed.

On Friday night Miss Hannah Clark, a domestic servant in the employ of Mayor Brough, was killed. It was a fierce, stormy night, the wind blowing a hurricane. A young man named Charles Stone called at Mayor Brough's residence about 7:30 with a two seated buggy and invited Miss Clark to a dance at Slinger, which was obliged to by Mrs. Brough because of the stormy night, when it was agreed they would drive to Wilson lane to the residence of Stone's parents, which they did. It was on the way back to town that the fatality occurred. Stone says that while driving on Twenty-fourth street east of the Weber bridge, in the dark, a buggy going west drove into his buggy and upset it, throwing Miss Clark under the buggy. Stone was but slightly bruised, and when he righted the buggy Miss Clark got up and remonstrating towards the bridge. Stone started in pursuit and just as he caught up with her a Mr. Edison on his way home in Wilson lane hearing the screams came up when Stone related what had happened. Edison declares that the girl was intoxicated. This was denied by Stone. Edison assisted him to get the girl to Stone's residence. She became very weak and said, "I am gone, I am gone," and died. Stone then hurried to a bed and Stone asked Edison to get a doctor. Edison replied, "what you want is the coroner." They came up town for a doctor but the night was so stormy they could not get one to go out. When Stone and Edison returned they found Miss Clark dead. On Saturday morning the remains were brought to Lindquist's undertaking parlors and a coroner's inquest was held. The verdict of the jury was that the deceased, Hannah Clark, came to her death by being thrown from a buggy through the careless driving of one Charles Stone. Miss Clark has been living with Mayor Brough about three years, and had a good character. Her father lives at Harley, Idaho.

Bank Stock Sold.

Dr. Carnahan, president, and T. A. Winder, director, of the Commercial bank sold out their interest to A. H. Heyward.

No Tabernacle Meeting.

On account of improvements being made on the Tabernacle meetings were held in the several wards Sunday afternoon instead of the Tabernacle.

In Search of Health.

Bishop M. F. Brown, on account of poor health, returns to Southern California on Tuesday next.

School Bonds.

The school board has suggested that $30,000 be borrowed to build additional school houses. It is quite probable that the question will be submitted to the consideration of the taxpayers.

PROVO.

PROVO, UTAH, Nov. 25, 1895.

A Narrow Escape.

The two-year-old son of Francis E. Wilson of the Fourth ward swallowed a large class of rye yesterday. Mrs. Monte Roberts, a neighbor, promptly administered ipecac syrup and Doctor Noyes was sent for. It is hoped the life of the child will be saved, although it is a serious case.

Birthday Celebration.

Yesterday Mrs. George Meldrum, of the Fourth ward, was seventy years of age. A large number of relatives surprised Sister Meldrum and a most enjoyable time was spent in honor of the event.

Came From Chicago to Plead.

Fred B. Smith, who was once indicted for criminal libel, committed by publishing an article in the Mountain Park Herald, of April 5th, 1895, reflecting upon the morality, integrity and reputation of H. J. Stewart, a resident of that place, is in town. He now lives in Chicago, but came back to plead.

Judge Smith's Death.

There was a cloud of gloom around the court house this morning among officers and attorneys, and all who were acquainted with the late Judge Smith, when it was learned that he was dead.

LOGAN.

LOGAN, UTAH, Nov. 25, 1895.

Mrs. Williams' Death.

Mrs. T. V. Williams a well known and highly esteemed lady of Salt Lake, came to Logan a short time since to see that her daughters Mrs. Alfred and and Mrs. Frank Palmer, received proper attention. She became very ill and confinement. Mrs. Frank Palmer gave birth to a girl on the 13th, and Mrs. Alfred Palmer to a boy on Tuesday last. On the latter date the devoted mother came down with an attack of typhoid fever complicated with lung trouble. All that medical science could suggest was done for her, but in spite of the best attention the lady died on Saturday evening. Her remains were taken to Salt Lake on yesterday afternoon's train.

Entertainments.

St. John's church was crowded on Saturday evening with an audience of Logan's music loving public, for whose amusement a splendid program of vocal and instrumental music and several elocutionary numbers had been prepared.

Logan's best vocalists, instrumentalists and elocutionists combined to make it a success. A new star arose in the musical firmament in the person of Mr. Weidle, a tenor singer with a fine voice, who made his first bow to a Logan audience on this occasion. At the conclusion of the sermon refreshments were served in the rectory adjoining the church.

The German Benevolent Association, whose primary object is to give entertainments for the benefit of German missionaries and their families, will give their initial performance for this year on or about the first of December. Part of the program will be rendered in English and part in German. One of the farces to be produced on that evening is the Trials of an Editor, and the newspaper fraternity are invited.

Malicious Mischief.

Some one who should serve a term in jail for malicious mischief, threw a large stone against and broke the plate glass in one of the front doors of the Co-op Wagon & Machine Co.'s place of business the other night. Before throwing the stone appearances would indicate the person held it in his hand and with a sweep of the large windows two heavy blows, as it is cracked in two pieces and plainly shows the marks of the stone, which, after it was thrown against the glass in the door, rebounded and was found broken into four separate pieces on the doorstep.

Notes.

On Saturday the A. C. of U. and B. Y. College football teams had a practice game for the benefit of the Agricultural College team, which is engaged to play the High School team of Salt Lake on their own grounds on Thanksgiving day. Holton, the right end man of the team, had his nose disfigured during a practice game early last week, but is expected to "hob up secretly" on Thursday.

William A. Lish, who is charged with having married Amelia Woodland, of Richmond, when he already had a living and undivorced wife, and who was committed in default of bail, was taken to the penitentiary by Deputy Marshal Cook on Thursday.

Sidney Stevens visited Logan during the week and determined to tear down his present place of business and erect a large brick business house in the site. On account of the sudden advent of cold weather, work will probably be delayed until spring.

It is probable that Joel Shoemaker, former editor of the Nauvoo Mercury, will leave the place of the Logan Republican and once more become an editor and publisher. It is said that he intends to double the size and make it a weekly paper.

The owners of the Nelly mine, at Richmond, have decided to resume operations this week by crosscutting their vein, which is quite a large one. They claim to be able to take out ore that will pay expenses from the start.

Several hunting parties are out and others are going. The recent snow and cold winds have driven the deer out of the tops of the mountains, as the experience seen in the butcher's shops bear witness.

Schilling's minstrels will hold the boards of the Theater upon house one night this week.

Complete Recovery by the Use of Ayer's Sarsaparilla

"Some years ago, as a result of too close attention to business, my health failed. I became weak, nervous, was unable to look after my interests, and manifested all the symptoms of a decline. I took three bottles of Ayer's Sarsaparilla, began to improve at once, and gradually increased my weight from one hundred and twenty-five to two hundred pounds. Since then, I and my family have used this medicine when needed, and we are all in the best of health, a fact which we attribute to Ayer's Sarsaparilla. I believe my children would have been fatherless today had it not been for Ayer's Sarsaparilla, of which preparation I cannot say too much."—H. O. Hinson, Postmaster and Planter, Kinard's, S. C.
