CLOSING MID GLOOM.

The Last Day of the Fair Comes With Grief and Sadness.

CLOSING WITH SERVICES OF DEATH

A Proposition to Perpetuate the Glories of the Fair in an Immense Columbian Museum.

Special Dispatch to the NEWS.

CHICAGO, Oct. 30.—The last and one of the greatest days of the Columbian Exposition is clouded with mourning. Although the weather is superb and the sun never shone more lovingly and beautifully the vanishing city carries with it the spirit of the assassinated mayor, whose body now lies in state in the city hall; waiting to its side more thousands of sympathizing visitors that are entering the gates of the White City. The flags are at half mast over the Exposition grounds. No cannons are to boom today, no triumphal marches, no gorgeous pageantry. The grand program is all excluded on account of the dead mayor of Chicago. The insane, cranky assassin, Prendergast, lies sputtering and muttering behind the bars.

For several weeks past the weather has been wonderfully propitious, a genial sunshine constantly mollifying the crispness and freshness of the October atmosphere.

Thursday was a rainy, gruesome day and many feared that the end had come, but the skies became propitious again and the past few days have been unsurpassed in splendor.

How the crowds have come pouring in to this great western metropolis! The roads are burdened with increasing trains. The streets to the central part of the city are a seething, surging mass of humanity. The population of Chicago is now about [illegible] and at no time is there an influx of less than about 1,000,000 people. The street cars are overburdened. They run three cars together, and these stop every few rods to take on or discharge passengers. They fill the aisle and cling around them like swarming bees on the branches of a tree. A single train of these cable cars will be loaded down with not less than 600 passengers. Just yesterday I rode from the Union depot to the Fair grounds, about seven miles, and starting at twenty minutes past three o'clock, it took till half past five o'clock to reach the destination. All this is due to mismanagement in part, for the cars should move forward promptly when sufficiently filled, and many more cars are needed to carry the millions that are gathered here.

Never did the world witness a more patient, forbearing and courteous crowd, and it is an honor to human nature that such vast multitudes should plod and sacrifice so freely to learn these unfading wonders of man and of the universe.

The following are the official figures for the paid admissions to the Fair up to date:

[illegible]	[illegible]
Total	[illegible]

The grand total of paid and free admissions will run thirty millions closely.

It will be seen how the grand totals for each month have bounded upward, especially since the reduction of railroad fares throughout the country. The Chicago & Northwestern report an increase of travel of over 40 per cent in the past other than Pullmans and sleepers, cars that entail no extra expense. Indeed the millions that come are of the middle classes, people who husband their small savings in order to acquaint themselves with the world's wondrous achievements. It shows a lower rate from the start would have greatly enhanced the mighty aggregate.

How marvelously this vast jumble of people provisions itself! Half the number are living on lunches; and the whole drama is to most of them a precious outing—one that comes not more than once in a life time. No place in the whole country furnishes a cheaper or a better meal for the money than can be had here anywhere on the outside among the fakirs and cheap [illegible] of the culinary profession. On the inside, rates are higher and quality no better.

How many volumes have been written about the World's Fair? Words and pictures have been multiplied with all the ingenuity and rapidity of modern methods. The secret of it is that the Fair is a product, not of one mind but of modern civilization. The world speaks through the Fair. No one can pass in, review its numerous departments and its numberless accumulations in each, without feeling that his thought has been enlarged and educated. In every direction he will find things that are supplementary to his own intelligence. He will see that all men are infinitely greater than one man or one class of men. Probably no previous fair has been conceived with half the universality and cosmopolitanism, a world wide conception worked out in universal art.

But many people seem needlessly overwhelmed with the immensity of the present achievement, as though the world would have to look back to 1893 as excelling and eclipsing all subsequent enterprises of similar character. Doubtless fifty years will so greatly enhance the capabilities of mankind that this Chicago Fair will rank only as a [illegible] introduction to the world's exhibitions of the power of mind over matter, or rather the creative power of mind. Progress and history are onward and upward, and we are just becoming conscious of our [illegible] with the universal creative energy.

But no future pen is any consideration of quality our regard for this beautiful child of today. This beautiful city, this world-thought, worked out in the material substance of nature, this accumulated exhibition of the world's progress, this earnest of man's eternal [illegible] in the universe, this rallying point of the world's intelligence, this brightest symbol of human brotherhood, this demonstration of American enterprise, this dream of the soul breathing and speaking through materialized forms, as the gorgeous cloud [illegible] away in the arching sky, so must this city of this nineteenth century intelligence take to itself wings and flee into the eternal but unforgotten past.

But this mighty pageant is destined to be immortalized in substance. There is to be a Columbian Museum that will commemorate Chicago and the glories of the Columbian Exposition. Marshall Field has tendered a million dollars in behalf of the enterprise and scores of others will follow with princely offerings. We shall find the day when the nation will create a World's Fair as a permanent institution with all the increased advantages that will naturally cluster about a permanent exposition of the wonders of nature and industry and progress of mankind.

BEAUTIFUL WEATHER.

By Associated Press.

CHICAGO, Oct. 30.—The last day of the World's Fair opened with beautiful weather but a pall hung over the great Exposition and its myriad of flags fl[oat]ed at half mast. Instead of the scenes of dazzling splendor that was to have crowned the day, of brilliancy in speech and song, only the necessary lights will burn tonight and the White City will be shrouded in darkness at an earlier hour than any day since its opening. So with the tragic death of Mayor Harrison the life and gaiety of the Exposition went out forever. Instead of a festival of oratory and music which was to have filled the grounds in the afternoon memorial services were held in Festival hall, at which tributes were paid to the memory of Chicago's most characteristic Chicagoan, by World's Fair officials, national and local, and by representatives of the assembled nations.

The great audience, some of whom had come from far distant states to see and at the rejoicings over the successful end of the great Exposition are filling every seat and occupying every foot of standing room. President Palmer of the national commission presided. Rev. Dr. Barrows delivered the prayer and read an address prepared by President Higginbotham of the Fair directory, previous to the mayor's taking off. This was thought best because it was so consonant with the spirit of the meeting. After the preliminaries and reading of appropriate resolutions President Palmer declared the Columbian Exposition officially closed.

A national salute should be fired at sunset.

HARRISON'S MURDERER.

It is Said He Might Have Assassinated Cleveland.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 30.—Prendergast's bullets, which took the life of Mayor Carter Harrison might have found lodgment in the heart of a United States senator or even the President of the United States, for fully two weeks before the murder of Chicago's mayor, the assassin had been directing messages through the mail to at least one United States senator which indicated that his mind was intensely wrought up against President Cleveland. The burden of all the communications was the silver question.

Senator Dubois, Idaho, and others, were recipients of communications which have been received almost daily since Oct. [illegible]

Writing on the 21st inst. he said: "Repeal is effectively beaten unless cloture is resorted to, to stifle the voice of the people, and if this dishonorable, unconstitutional, and unusual course is resorted to, the peace of the nation is risked, and no senator who votes for cloture can justify his course from a patriotic standpoint. I repeat that repeal is defeated unless cloture is resorted to."

On the 24th he wrote: "I notice a wavering in the ranks of the silver enemies. Your side is now the strongest. If you are determined, firm and patient, you can win. The last thing to do is to fight it out. Look out for artifices on the part of your opponents. Remember that the strongest and most intelligent leadership is on the part of the silverite side. Grover Cleveland is impotent. The cry for repeal is simply a whim of his. Is the United States Senate going to yield to an irresponsible President's whim?"

On the 26th he wrote: "Hold the fort. The President is about to give up the fight, but when certain persons like John Sherman and Dexter Benedict, of New York, reconciliated him, if you hold out you are sure to win."

"They dare not attempt cloture. Hill, of New York, has no influence in the Senate, owing to his unsavory record in New York. The President has become tired and will give up in despair, if you delay the vote as long as possible by every means at your command."

He adds a postscript to this note in which he says: "I have done and shall continue to do my duty."

Silver senators paid no attention to these cards for the reason that since the silver fight began they have been receiving many others from all parts of the country and from people apparently excited on both sides of the question. These have included threatening letters as well as some telling them that if they did not cease their opposition to the repeal bill they would be shot down like dogs."

HE ENJOYS HIS BREAKFAST.

Prendergast, Mayor Harrison's assassin, apparently slept soundly from midnight till 6 this morning. When the tramping of the cell bolts moved by the turnkeys waked him, he sat up moodily on his couch, refusing to talk till breakfast was brought him, when he brightened up and ate it with apparent relish. Then he came to the front of the cell and listened with apparent interest to the jibes going about the prisoners. When a reporter for the Associated Press approached him on the subject of the assassination, he gave monosyllabic replies at first but finally repeated his former assertion that the reason for the deed was that the mayor deceived him, and betrayed him, and he took that means of getting even, declaring that he was justified in so doing.

ARRANGING FOR THE FUNERAL.

A special meeting of members of the city council was held this morning at which resolutions were passed calling a special memorial meeting, providing that the body lie in state in the city hall from Tuesday morning till Wednesday morning, inviting all civil and military bodies of the city and citizens generally to attend the funeral services.

CABINET CRISIS IN AUSTRIA.

VIENNA, Oct. 30.—Emperor Francis Joseph has accepted the resignation of the entire cabinet and has conferred separately with the leaders of the three parties to consult their views upon the reconstitution of the government.

THE UTAH ADMISSION BILL.

Why the Administration Does Not Wish to See it Passed Now.

The Amount of Land to be Granted the Territories if They be Accorded Statehood.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 30.—The House committee on territories has been busy several weeks perfecting a bill for the admission of Utah. Though the administration has not wished to see the admission of the territories pressed just now the fact that the men who will come to the Senate from all the proposed new states would be silver men has caused the promoters of the statehood movement to pause. In order to get around any such difficulty as this Delegate Joseph of New Mexico has proposed to have the bill admitting his territory changed so that admission will not become operative until 1895.

For Utah, Arizona and New Mexico it is proposed to grant them double the amount of land granted the last territories to be admitted. The reason for this is that large grants were made for the purpose of establishing a fund for various institutions, and it is claimed the lands which the three territories that are now knocking at the door will receive, are mostly, if not entirely, arid and fit for nothing until they have been made valuable by a costly system of irrigation. The last six states admitted received as grants for various state institutions about 100,000 acres of land each. The three territories asking for admission think they will need at least a million acres.

The Chinese Bill.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 30.—It is generally understood that the Senate will pass the Chinese extension bill while the House is considering the silver bill. Several Pacific coast men said if the Senate should amend the bill as has been suggested, by striking out all amendments making it simply an extension of six months, a quorum will be needed in the House to pass the amended bill. The California members do not propose to give up what they could gain in extension with the amendments they proposed and which the House has accepted.

An Appointment.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 30.—The President has nominated E. F. Uhl, Michigan, assistant secretary of state.

Foolish Strikers.

ST. PAUL, Oct. 30.—All the street car lines are in full operation, about one-third of the force being Union men who refused to strike. The strikers still hope for support from the other unions.

More Heresies.

CHICAGO, Oct. 30.—Behind closed doors the Chicago Presbytery today begins the trial of Rev. Dr. W. W. Totherton, late pastor of Hyde Park Presbyterian Church, on the principal charge that on two visits to the Pacific Coast, one when the general assembly met at Portland, he was accompanied by a woman, not his wife. The registers at the hotel at Portland and another at Tacoma were searched and photographic copies of certain pages will be shown. In addition to this a deposition of A. M. Coleman who was with Totherton in the far West, will be read, also extracts from letters written by Totherton to Coleman, dated Sept. 12, outlining an affidavit which Totherton wanted Coleman to make and which would accord with the defense which Totherton intended to set up before the presbytery. It was to show that Coleman was in Totherton's company at the time the alleged misconduct occurred, and that his actions were indiscreet. In the letter Totherton admits that he was not in church, but he thinks he and Coleman were in Chinatown together.

BRAZIL AND UNCLE SAM.

The South American Republic Finds a Strong Protector.

RIO JANEIRO, Oct. 30.—It is stated that a secret treaty between the United States and Brazil, has been signed. This treaty, it is said, is in addition to the commercial treaty of 1891 and is said to involve the United States in the support of Brazil if the latter country asks for support. It is also that the United States is pledged to support the Brazilian government in case of any attempt to restore the monarchy. The rebel movements at Bahia are said to have been influenced by the monarchists with whom Admiral Mello might ultimately join issues. In that case it is said intervention of the United States will be justified.

The Last Day But One.

A steady stream of humanity in the shape of taxpayers has been flowing into the office of County Collector Leonard all day. Tomorrow the taxes become delinquent and those who have delayed payment are now hurrying to settle up and so avoid the disagreeable alternative of being "tated" in the customary way.

POLITICAL AFFAIRS.

Another Canyon City Ex-Convict Registered by the Liberals.

SENTENCED TO SERVE TEN YEARS.

Cases Before Judge Baldwin Today—Big Rally in the Theater Tonight.

The better element of the Liberals are now beginning to wonder how many Colorado convicts have really been saddled on to them by the machine during its ascendancy—most through legislation reign in Salt Lake City.

It will be remembered that the Colorado record of one Hector Galenti was fully given in the News some time ago. It was shown how he served a term of years in the State prison at Canyon City for attempted murder, and how he narrowly escaped hanging at the hands of an enraged public. His career in this community is well known. He aspired to lead not only the Italian contingent of this city in political affairs but also the whiter colored associates.

Now it transpires that a would-be leader and organizer of the Liberal colored voters in Salt Lake has a history of a darker hue even than that of Salt Galenti. His name is Berry Gates and will be called to mind from the fact that he is a member of the Afro-American Liberal quartette. There have been well founded rumors for some time in regard to his conduct before coming to this city and an inquiry a News representative learned the following:

That John Fitzgerald, a barber, was robbed and murdered in Denver in 1884 in a house of ill repute. Four persons were arrested on the charge of murder. Two of them were men, the two were women and all were colored. The guilt of the prisoners was so well established that the quartette were sentenced to ten years each in the Colorado state prison. One of the women died in the institution while the other three prisoners were released in 1891. From this it will be seen that they served but seven years, three years being deducted under the law on account of good behavior.

Gates came to Salt Lake two years ago. He has been a failing and consistent Liberal ever since his arrival and it is claimed, like Fred Tripmer, voted every time he got a chance. The commission [illegible] that Gates is not entitled to vote, not having been pardoned. At present he is registered in the Fifth precinct. A summons was served on him this morning citing him to appear before Judge Baldwin at 2 o'clock this afternoon and show cause why his name should not be stricken from the lists. This little transaction caused a great deal of excitement among some of the colored people, and on Commercial street they could be seen in groups by the score discussing the situation.

Gates himself became turbulent and threatened dire vengeance on whatever gentleman whom he said had exposed him. He has an ugly disposition and was emphatically informed that unless he ceased his scene he would be arrested and held to keep the peace. This had the effect of putting a temporary quietus on him. His case was set down for 2 o'clock this afternoon.

In response to a telegram to the warden of the Colorado State prison at Canyon City the following dispatch has been received:

CANYON CITY, Col.

Berry Gates served out his sentence. No record of pardon.

FRANK A. MCLISTER,
Warden.

On going before Judge Baldwin this afternoon the latter decided that there was no law in the Territory that would prevent a man from voting who had been convicted of murder and therefore overruled the objection, and so found Gates will probably vote.

GRAND RALLY TONIGHT.

Those who attended the magnificent rally of Independent Citizens in the Theater on Wednesday night last can form a slight idea of what will be done in that direction at the same place tonight. A joint citizens' and workingmen's committee have been earnestly at work for several days getting up a meeting that will prove to the laboring man the manner in which he has been treated by the Liberal party in the past and the certainty of him receiving that kind treatment by the same organization in the future.

The full program for tonight's meeting is as follows:

[illegible]

The workingmen's committee who have charge of the meeting consist of John G. Smith, chairman, George R. Sanburn, Albert E. Jermon, T. J. McEwen and W. P. McKeever, Edward King is secretary.

A DOUBLE DISCLAIMER.

Judge Powers writes to the News as follows:

"I desire to correct two statements that have been made, one regarding myself personally and the other concerning Hawes.

First—I did not cause the arrest of Mr. J. J. Grimes, was not consulted about the matter, and knew nothing of it until I read the News. I have no knowledge of the merits of the matter now.

Second—Regarding the suit brought against the Insurance society for a small amount and against myself, D. P. Tarpey, H. T. Duke and Henry Barnes, sureties. The note was originally for several hundred dollars and it was left to me by the others to look after. In the multitude of other matters last week I neglected it and I want to take upon myself what criticism can be made. Mr. Duke, Mr. Barnes and Mr. Tarpey are not in fault and are in no way to blame.

O. W. POWERS.

SALT LAKE, Oct. 30, 1893.

THEIR NAMES STRICKEN OFF.

Judge Baldwin is still hearing objections to men who are registered but not entitled to vote. Three men were stricken from the rolls this morning. They were: G. H. Thompson, Eli Mayfield and C. Vandyke.

"POLITICAL LEGERDEMAIN."

An important change has been made in the Republican legislative nominations for that district a part of which is situated in Territorial Juab counties. Originally Mr. A. Hague, of the First National bank of Nephi, was nominated for the House of Representatives and C. H. McBride, of Tooele, for the Council. But these gentlemen, presumably acting under the advice of their respective political managers, have changed places, McBride filling Hague's place and vice versa. The Democratic candidate that was pitted against McBride was H. F. McCune, of Nephi. A friend of the latter is greatly exercised over the change and is a better democrat than he is a bit of clever "political legerdemain of the now-you-see-it-and-now-you-don't order, something for which the Democrats were not in any way prepared. He gives as a reason for the transposition that McBride was not very well known in Juab and that the Republicans were afraid that McCune would "run away" from him on the matter of votes. As it stands now the race between McCune and Hague promises to be a very close one.

POLITICAL PARAGRAPHS.

Judge Baldwin will hear no more objections against illegally registered persons after Thursday next.

Arrangements were being made today to print the Democratic legislative tickets.

Attorney W. H. King of Provo was in the city on election and law business today.

The Independent-Citizens' precinct campaign committees are booked for a joint session at headquarters at 4 o'clock this afternoon.

The Citizens' buttonhole badges—beautiful designs—are expected to reach here from New York this evening. They will be on sale at headquarters.

A large number of prominent Democrats left the city today to take the stump for their party in the legislative fight. Republican speakers are also seeing to their fences and the campaign from now on until the 7th of November promises to be a hot one.

As foreshadowed in the News of several evenings ago, T. J. Everill, Democratic nominee for councilman from the Third precinct, has withdrawn from the field leaving the Citizens' nominee in full possession. This makes victory doubly sure in that district. Mr. Everill, by tendering his resignation, has raised himself several notches in the estimation of the public.

Primary Officers' Meeting.

The monthly meeting of the officers of the Salt Lake Stake primary association will be held on Friday the 3rd prox at 147 East South Temple street at 2 p.m. A full attendance is requested.

TRIAL FOR MURDER.

The Killing of Little Clyde Robertson the Subject of Judicial Inquiry.

The trial of the two boys, Harry Hammond and George Gaylor, charged with the wilful murder of little Clyde Robertson, in the outskirts of this city, in June of the present year, was taken up in Judge Bartch's court this morning. The prosecution is in the hands of Assistant District Attorney Hiwat, with whom Attorney Duncan J. [illegible] is associated; the defendants are represented by Attorneys Whittemore and Walls. Both defendants were present when the case was called, but separate trials will be had, and the case against Hammond will be first investigated. The hearing is expected to consume at least two days, as there are a good many witnesses to be called. Gaylor is 14 years of age and Hammond 12. Both lads, who are of respectable parentage, set [illegible] their counsel. Since the indictment was found against them by the grand jury they have remained confined at the penitentiary.

The story of the alleged crime is doubtless still fresh in the minds of readers of the News. The unfortunate child, Clyde, while playing with his sister and some companions, near his parents' house, was shot with a pistol which it is claimed was in the hands of one of the defendants, and died almost immediately. Whether the shooting was accidental or wilful the jury will now be called upon to determine.

The impaneling of a jury began about half-past 10 o'clock this morning but up to noon only three jurors had been chosen and sworn.

The court was crowded during the day, and the trial appears to excite deep interest.

A jury was secured shortly after 2 p.m., as follows: W. H. Lowrance, J. P. Mahan, H. A. Smith, Fred Hamilton, A. H. Parsons, R. Y. Golding, Casenas Brown Jr., Frank Victor, J. E. Beveridge, J. C. Taylor, C. S. Farmer, F. J. Sonnet.

The prosecuting attorney at once made his opening statement and this evening upon adjournment of the court the jurors will visit and inspect the scene of the tragedy.

Foreclosure Suit.

The case of Mrs. W. Taylor, plaintiff, vs. Alexander Johnson, John H. Park and Jacob A. Darling, defendants, came up before Judge Zane for hearing this morning. Attorneys Daniel Harrington and T. D. Lewis represented the plaintiff; Attorney Tenn. Albers appeared for the defendants. The amount involved was $90, the action being one of foreclosure on a promissory note for that amount. The defendant Park had come upon the scene as an intervenor and was made a party to the suit.

The court took the matter under advisement.

Laid to Rest.

The funeral services over the remains of the late William Howell were held at the Twenty-first ward meeting house, at 11 o'clock yesterday morning. The house was filled to overflowing with friends and acquaintances of the deceased. W. L. N. Allen, Bishop of the ward, conducted the services. The employes of S. P. Teasdel & Sons, where the deceased had been employed for the past four years, acted as pall-bearers.

The ward choir, under the direction of Thomas McIntyre, rendered the musical exercises. By request of the family, a male quartette, composed of Messrs. Samuel Spry, J. T. Dunbar, Elijah Gill and John James, sang sweetly and pathetically, "Oh! Bury Thy Sorrow." Following were the speakers: William White, C. L. Jackson, Joseph Maynes, S. P. Teasdel and Elder Allen, Bishop of the ward. The remarks of all were highly eulogistic of the deceased, showing that his course in life had been one of honor and integrity. The floral offerings were profuse and beautiful. A large cortege followed the remains to their last resting place. The school children of the ward joined the procession, each of them carrying a bunch of flowers, making the scene an impressive and solemn one. At the grave the quartette sang, "Shall We Meet Beyond the River?" The dedicatory prayer was offered by Elder M. B. Wooley and all that was mortal of William Howell was consigned to mother earth.

A WINTER OF DISCONTENT.

Divorced By Law at the Ripe Age of Seventy-four.

A Husband Who Has a Penchant for Smashing Furniture—He Couldn't Work, but Ate Well all the Time.

Judge Zane this morning was occupied for some time with the hearing of the divorce suit of Margaret Petterson vs Axel S. E. Petterson, the petition having been based on the ground of failure to provide.

Attorney J. H. Moyle appeared for the petitioner and Judge McDowell and Attorney Marriomeaux for the defendant, who by trade is a tinsmith. He has also been engaged in mining.

The parties intermarried in this city on November 18th, 1878, and are quite elderly people. Mrs. Petterson stated that the defendant for more than three years past had failed to provide her with the necessaries of life, although able-bodied and abundantly capable of doing so. Her testimony also tended to show that he was a rather troublesome individual to handle domestically.

It transpired from the evidence of the plaintiff that she was a widow with a family at the time she married Petterson, and that the defendant was a widower and also had children. Since the separation the woman's children have been maintaining her, while the defendant's offspring have been looking after him.

In his answer the defendant stated he was 74 years of age, that for the last six years he has been in feeble health and unable to perform any physical labor. For fifteen years, he states, he provided his wife with a comfortable home, and they resided happily together till May, 1890, when his wife, instigated as he believes by certain of her relatives, refused to allow him any longer to share the home with her. Since that time he had been homeless and dependent on the charity of friends.

A step-son and step-daughter of the defendant were called and testified that he could have worked had he not disposed, but when their mother asked him to do anything he would get into a rage, break the chairs, and on one occasion demolished a cupboard in the house.

Attorney Moyle inquired as to the old gentleman's appetite, and Petterson Jr., who is a strapping young man of about twenty-five, replied—Why, he could get away with more than I could right along!

Judge McDowall asked the step-son whether it was not a fact that he and his folks drove the defendant from the house before this suit was brought and barred him out. He answered no, but said he knew that the old gentleman was afterwards taken care of at the poor house.

The defendant is at present in Massachusetts, where he is being supported by one of his daughters, and the step-daughter who gave evidence today testified that she and her brothers had been the means of maintaining their mother during the last six years.

It was sought to show by the defense, on the calling of witnesses, that Petterson Sr. had for several years been a victim of rheumatism and was by no means a man able to do hard work.

Attorney Moyle claimed that the pretended weakness of the defendant was a mere feint in order to avoid work and to obtain from his acquaintances small sums of money to purchase tobacco, etc., when he came down town.

Judge Zane, in granting the decree of divorce, said he failed to see the use of the marriage relationship between the parties being continued. His honor thought the better way of disposing of this case would be to let the plaintiff's children take care of her and the defendant's children look after him. It seemed, he said, pretty clear from the evidence that the defendant had been a rather disagreeable member of the family when he liked.

The divorce suit of Maggie Herman vs F. J. Herman was continued by consent.
