NAILS THAT WHISTLED.

A JOKE THAT MADE 40,000 MEN THOUGH THE ENEMY WAS REAL.

It Spread From the Agitation of Southern Women, and Prizes Was Dropped That the Ingenuity of the Yankees Had Evoked Something Terrible.

"Yes," said the veteran, as he leaned his foot up on the wagon railing and gazed lazily at the sunset, "that they are making while lots of talking in the newspapers nowadays about secession and modern powder. Why, we were talking about the same thing when I was in Price's army.

"You know we were never down in the brush in southwest Missouri, where we were all cut off from the world and couldn't get any news from the outside. We simply got sick of the talk about the Yankees and invented a new powder—an kind that burned with no smoke, no flash and no noise. Pretty soon they were talking about it in every regiment, and the girls—we had to have them to make it interesting—began to talk about the terrible ingenuity of the Yankees. There was nothing to talk about, and you know how it is to a big body of the men.

"There was one fellow that took great pride in the efficious powder story. He believed like all the rest. This was Bill Green, of Colonel Winston's second Missouri. Bill came from up here at Platte City. He was a blacksmith, a stamping great big fellow, strong as a horse. He weighed, I reckon, 200 pounds.

"One dark night Bill was put out in the brush on picket duty. Now, he was posted as only a fighter is posted. He was in line with a man on either side of him, but I tell you, my boy, not a man cut in a dark thicket all alone and the enemy known to be near had supposed to be carried more fear of himself the sturdy of the last of him.

WHISTLING NAILS.

"So Bill was steadily and thoroughly and two Yankee sharpshooters—everywhere.

"Now, in the same regiment they had a decided, humorous sense for—drab Bill. This Bob Bill was the kind of a spoilsman every outfit has—a practical joker—a nuisance that everybody liked. Now was a rich chance for one of Robinson's little pieces. Bob in Bill had got settled in his post Robert loaded his pocket with a dozen or so big wrought iron nails, and cut through the dark he crawled by get in front of the picket. He hid in a sassafras bush about a hundred feet from the big blacksmith and looked out.

"There was Bill listening up and down his beat like an elephant on a rickety bridge, dodging and whistling every time a grasshopper chirped or a bream bob in his camp started. He was getting badly scared. Bob picked up a right rugged nail and flung it just as hard as he could jolly.

"You know what a vicious screaching a nail makes when you throw it that way? No mule bull ever sounded wickeder. It goes:

"Whiz-z-z-out!

"Poor Bill's heart stopped with a big thump like a sledgehammer, and Bob, seen, away off in the thicket, heard him catch his breath as if some one had dropped a bucket of ice water on him. Then he held despairing for the words his a sack of sand, and for about a minute there was not the sound of a breath. Then the big picket muttered shakily: 'Who, I'm gittin' skery as a woman with thirteen of her Yanks an their new fangled powder.' And he got up and began wearily to walk his beat.

"Bob let go another of his nails, and a third just as quick as he could throw. They went whizzing bloodthirstily toward Williams, and some of them ripped through the leaves over his head, spattering twigs and bits of leaf all about.

AN ARMY IN SCADDING.

"There was no doubt about it this time, and big Bill, as he let his modes of wildly in the air, cracked for camp, yoffering, yelling, yelping, tearing up trees and rail and falling into trees. The tall beanpole of a fellow ran like a cyclone into the camp he plunged, over men and tents, scorched stacks and cook trenches. It is an actual fact that in no over a little foraging pony that was tied to a tree and couldn't get out of the way, knocked the poor beast down and crippled it for a week. His head was way inside. P. Scadly brought up full tilt against a wagon. "A hickory singing, whistles can down a mouse, leading up to the body zip with his hands clawing at the boughs.

"He waked every man in the regiment. Down the line went shouts and laughs calls. Within ten minutes every one of Price's sixty-odd men was in line of battle, staring into the darkness for the enemy's advance guard, listening for the roar of their always feed bullets.

"Of course, the enemy did not come, but the same joy on their same all night.

"Bombs was too tricked are the way Bill tore through the brush to headquarters. Next day everyone in the army had the story. But it did not take well with the officers. A court martial guard came after Bombs and put irons on him, and his little joke was prominently considered by a court martial. That afternoon some news of the enemy in deadly earnest, and Price set out on one of the wild, forced marches. Bombs went along. He took with him in expected an speed of the court martial a full canteen black oak bark tea, soggy with sun. He was charged carefully not to lose that bark on the hard ride.

"The first day I said the disconsolate joker after it was all done, 'that rail felt pretty heavy, just like an ordinary rail. Next day it felt like a whole tree, but, say, on the last day I thought I was carrying all the woods.'

"It is still an open question among the boys of Price's regiment whether the joke was on Williams or Bombs."—Kansas City Times.

Something Was at the Circus.

Julius—Been to the circus, eh? See anything new?

Hilliks—Yes. The children who laughed at the clowns were new.—Good News.

Nearly two bushels of antiquarian curing out of an ancient Indian mound in the Little Miami valley built a dozen years ago. They were all as much desired, however, as to be of no commercial value.

Robert Burns, the great philosopher of the Revolutionary century, mentions an English author who could not scan and another who could not glaze.

THEY DONNED SERVANTS' CAPS.

Two Pretty Daughters of a Well Known Citizen Did Their Duty.

A well known literary man who has been the recipient of not a little attention during a brief stay in London, received and long ago a letter from one of the English friends concerning his arrival in America and proposing himself for a visit of a few hours, including one night. Although delighted at the prospect of meeting a man whom he much admired, Mr. T. was not greatly pleased in regard to the entertainment and accommodation of his visitor, as their modest house held boarded of only one servant, and he wished to ask a few friends to meet his distinguished guest.

His eldest daughter laughingly bore matters in their own hands, telling him to invite the guests and they would "guarantee satisfaction." The day came, bringing the author of Tess to his unassuming home, and he was hidden inside of half a dozen dinner parts in his little country house and retired to his den and his books with perfect equanimity.

"We make only two participants, papa," said the girl, "and we have to that Mrs. and third daughter and he the only one ready to receive your grand English friend, and that you will not mention the fact of us." Mr. T. readily agreed to everything, and, shocked to his bachelor home, was quite oblivious to all arrangements until Mrs. Irving, as pretty as a pigeon, in the freshest of gingham, announced that the maiden to dinner. He was a handsome, a stamping great big fellow, strong as a horse. He weighed, I reckon, 200 pounds.

"One dark night Bill was put out in the brush on picket duty. Now, he was posted as only a fighter is posted. He was in line with a man on either side of him, but I tell you, my boy, not a man cut in a dark thicket all alone and the enemy known to be near had supposed to be carry more fear of himself the sturdy of the last of him.

WHISTLING NAILS.

"So Bill was steadily and thoroughly and two Yankee sharpshooters—everywhere.

"Now, in the same regiment they had a decided, humorous sense for—drab Bill. This Bob Bill was the kind of a spoilsman every outfit has—a practical joker—a nuisance that everybody liked. Now was a rich chance for one of Robinson's little pieces. Bob in Bill had got settled in his post Robert loaded his pocket with a dozen or so big wrought iron nails, and cut through the dark he crawled by get in front of the picket. He hid in a sassafras bush about a hundred feet from the big blacksmith and looked out.

"There was Bill listening up and down his beat like an elephant on a rickety bridge, dodging and whistling every time a grasshopper chirped or a bream bob in his camp started. He was getting badly scared. Bob picked up a right rugged nail and flung it just as hard as he could jolly.

"You know what a vicious screaching a nail makes when you throw it that way? No mule bull ever sounded wickeder. It goes:

"Whiz-z-z-out!

"Poor Bill's heart stopped with a big thump like a sledgehammer, and Bob, seen, away off in the thicket, heard him catch his breath as if some one had dropped a bucket of ice water on him. Then he held despairing for the words his a sack of sand, and for about a minute there was not the sound of a breath. Then the big picket muttered shakily: 'Who, I'm gittin' skery as a woman with thirteen of her Yanks an their new fangled powder.' And he got up and began wearily to walk his beat.

"Bob let go another of his nails, and a third just as quick as he could throw. They went whizzing bloodthirstily toward Williams, and some of them ripped through the leaves over his head, spattering twigs and bits of leaf all about.

AN ARMY IN SCADDING.

"There was no doubt about it this time, and big Bill, as he let his modes of wildly in the air, cracked for camp, yoffering, yelling, yelping, tearing up trees and rail and falling into trees. The tall beanpole of a fellow ran like a cyclone into the camp he plunged, over men and tents, scorched stacks and cook trenches. It is an actual fact that in no over a little foraging pony that was tied to a tree and couldn't get out of the way, knocked the poor beast down and crippled it for a week. His head way was inside. P. Scadly brought up full tilt against a wagon. "A hickory singing, whistles can down a mouse, leading up to the body zip with his hands clawing at the boughs.

"He waked every man in the regiment. Down the line went shouts and laughs calls. Within ten minutes every one of Price's sixty-odd men was in line of battle, staring into the darkness for the enemy's advance guard, listening for the roar of their always feed bullets.

"Of course, the enemy did not come, but the same joy on their same all night.

"Bombs was too tricked are the way Bill tore through the brush to headquarters. Next day everyone in the army had the story. But it did not take well with the officers. A court martial guard came after Bombs and put irons on him, and his little joke was prominently considered by a court martial. That afternoon some news of the enemy in deadly earnest, and Price set out on one of the wild, forced marches. Bombs went along. He took with him in expected an speed of the court martial a full canteen black oak bark tea, soggy with sun. He was charged carefully not to lose that bark on the hard ride.

"The first day I said the disconsolate joker after it was all done, 'that rail felt pretty heavy, just like an ordinary rail. Next day it felt like a whole tree, but, say, on the last day I thought I was carrying all the woods.'

"It is still an open question among the boys of Price's regiment whether the joke was on Williams or Bombs."—Kansas City Times.

Something Was at the Circus.

Julius—Been to the circus, eh? See anything new?

Hilliks—Yes. The children who laughed at the clowns were new.—Good News.

Nearly two bushels of antiquarian curing out of an ancient Indian mound in the Little Miami valley built a dozen years ago. They were all as much desired, however, as to be of no commercial value.

Robert Burns, the great philosopher of the Revolutionary century, mentions an English author who could not scan and another who could not glaze.

THEY DONNED SERVANTS' CAPS.

Two Pretty Daughters of a Well Known Citizen Did Their Duty.

A well known literary man who has been the recipient of not a little attention during a brief stay in London, received and long ago a letter from one of the English friends concerning his arrival in America and proposing himself for a visit of a few hours, including one night. Although delighted at the prospect of meeting a man whom he much admired, Mr. T. was not greatly pleased in regard to the entertainment and accommodation of his visitor, as their modest house held boarded of only one servant, and he wished to ask a few friends to meet his distinguished guest.

His eldest daughter laughingly bore matters in their own hands, telling him to invite the guests and they would "guarantee satisfaction." The day came, bringing the author of Tess to his unassuming home, and he was hidden inside of half a dozen dinner parts in his little country house and retired to his den and his books with perfect equanimity.

"We make only two participants, papa," said the girl, "and we have to that Mrs. and third daughter and he the only one ready to receive your grand English friend, and that you will not mention the fact of us." Mr. T. readily agreed to everything, and, shocked to his bachelor home, was quite oblivious to all arrangements until Mrs. Irving, as pretty as a pigeon, in the freshest of gingham, announced that the maiden to dinner. He was a handsome, a stamping great big fellow, strong as a horse. He weighed, I reckon, 200 pounds.

"One dark night Bill was put out in the brush on picket duty. Now, he was posted as only a fighter is posted. He was in line with a man on either side of him, but I tell you, my boy, not a man cut in a dark thicket all alone and the enemy known to be near had supposed to be carry more fear of himself the sturdy of the last of him.

WHISTLING NAILS.

"So Bill was steadily and thoroughly and two Yankee sharpshooters—everywhere.

"Now, in the same regiment they had a decided, humorous sense for—drab Bill. This Bob Bill was the kind of a spoilsman every outfit has—a practical joker—a nuisance that everybody liked. Now was a rich chance for one of Robinson's little pieces. Bob in Bill had got settled in his post Robert loaded his pocket with a dozen or so big wrought iron nails, and cut through the dark he crawled by get in front of the picket. He hid in a sassafras bush about a hundred feet from the big blacksmith and looked out.

"There was Bill listening up and down his beat like an elephant on a rickety bridge, dodging and whistling every time a grasshopper chirped or a bream bob in his camp started. He was getting badly scared. Bob picked up a right rugged nail and flung it just as hard as he could jolly.

"You know what a vicious screaching a nail makes when you throw it that way? No mule bull ever sounded wickeder. It goes:

"Whiz-z-z-out!

"Poor Bill's heart stopped with a big thump like a sledgehammer, and Bob, seen, away off in the thicket, heard him catch his breath as if some one had dropped a bucket of ice water on him. Then he held despairing for the words his a sack of sand, and for about a minute there was not the sound of a breath. Then the big picket muttered shakily: 'Who, I'm gittin' skery as a woman with thirteen of her Yanks an their new fangled powder.' And he got up and began wearily to walk his beat.

"Bob let go another of his nails, and a third just as quick as he could throw. They went whizzing bloodthirstily toward Williams, and some of them ripped through the leaves over his head, spattering twigs and bits of leaf all about.

AN ARMY IN SCADDING.

"There was no doubt about it this time, and big Bill, as he let his modes of wildly in the air, cracked for camp, yoffering, yelling, yelping, tearing up trees and rail and falling into trees. The tall beanpole of a fellow ran like a cyclone into the camp he plunged, over men and tents, scorched stacks and cook trenches. It is an actual fact that in no over a little foraging pony that was tied to a tree and couldn't get out of the way, knocked the poor beast down and crippled it for a week. His head way was inside. P. Scadly brought up full tilt against a wagon. "A hickory singing, whistles can down a mouse, leading up to the body zip with his hands clawing at the boughs.

"He waked every man in the regiment. Down the line went shouts and laughs calls. Within ten minutes every one of Price's sixty-odd men was in line of battle, staring into the darkness for the enemy's advance guard, listening for the roar of their always feed bullets.

"Of course, the enemy did not come, but the same joy on their same all night.

"Bombs was too tricked are the way Bill tore through the brush to headquarters. Next day everyone in the army had the story. But it did not take well with the officers. A court martial guard came after Bombs and put irons on him, and his little joke was prominently considered by a court martial. That afternoon some news of the enemy in deadly earnest, and Price set out on one of the wild, forced marches. Bombs went along. He took with him in expected an speed of the court martial a full canteen black oak bark tea, soggy with sun. He was charged carefully not to lose that bark on the hard ride.

"The first day I said the disconsolate joker after it was all done, 'that rail felt pretty heavy, just like an ordinary rail. Next day it felt like a whole tree, but, say, on the last day I thought I was carrying all the woods.'

"It is still an open question among the boys of Price's regiment whether the joke was on Williams or Bombs."—Kansas City Times.

Something Was at the Circus.

Julius—Been to the circus, eh? See anything new?

Hilliks—Yes. The children who laughed at the clowns were new.—Good News.

Nearly two bushels of antiquarian curing out of an ancient Indian mound in the Little Miami valley built a dozen years ago. They were all as much desired, however, as to be of no commercial value.

Robert Burns, the great philosopher of the Revolutionary century, mentions an English author who could not scan and another who could not glaze.

Shoes That Develop the Feet.

"Those boots being worn before shows that one sole wears so generally in one place—the ball of the foot—that a shoe sole is a big up down over the other day. "You see, the summer shoes are so much more roomy than the ordinary shoes that the foot broadens, and this when our customers, especially those who wear the summer shoes all the season, come to get fitted with an ordinary shoe they wonder why we cannot fit them as easily as usual, and why the shoe that used to fit them pinches and cramps their feet. We have to give some of our customers half a size larger, and those who like to have their feet look as small as possible protest that it is the fault of our stock, when it is of course the fault of their summer shoes.

"The foot shows that so many women wear in summer cause no trouble even when the new's worst show. Those who shoes or the wives constantly develop the bunion and bone of corns and toes and to get a shoe to fit the one the summer wore is the habit of wearing. Then comes real trouble. It is hard to break the news to a young and pretty woman that her foot has grown larger during the summer, and it is still harder to see her to believe that manufacturers are making and selling to the outdoors in her shoes when she gives her a larger instep."—New York Times.

Christmas Tree Sandals.

Thackeray's dream of a wedding Angelica bridge may yet be realized. Indeed, who shall say that Indeed there is not hard men no? Most of the Roman Catholic clergy under the Protestant clergy of England Roman order, or rather in Anglo Saxon country a respectable proportion are addicted to the habit. At no time in the history of the word have the clergy so a body discountenanced its use. In the United States the Unitarian clergy, next to the Catholics, are the men who are to the habit. Many of Unitarian members, most of them look with tolerance upon the habit.

The Nestor of the Book, Dr. William Paxson, of Philadelphia, who has been a smoker from his youth up, confesses the habit as a "lade and hearty octogenarian." Robert Collyer smokes whenever he wants to, and thinks Phoenix's business too far gone. Dr. Bartol, though not a smoker himself, fails to see why clergymen should not smoke if men of other professions do.—New York Sun.

Three Irvings on the Stage.

It has been known for some time past that Mr. Irving's elder son, Henry, is about to go upon the stage. A similar resolution has now been taken by his younger son, Lawrence, a pupil in house of Mr. Irving's old friend, John Lawrence Toole. Lawrence Irving was destined for the diplomatic service, or his child teacher was for the bar, and while that view was made to Mr. Irving's sons time ago to learn languages. But the boat is his one also for the stage has proved so strong that Mr. Irving, remembering what a Shakespeare professor "I do know" he was for himself, felt fit justified in supporting his wishes. It has been announced that Lawrence Irving shall join T. R. Roberts's touring company in the autumn. Meanwhile, as an amateur, he is to take part next week in some fashionable theatricals now being organized at Wimbledon by Mrs. Lee Schuster. Henry Irving, Jr., it will be remembered, joins Mr. Hare's company at the Garrick.—London Star.

Science in the Metropolis.

The Commissioner E. B. Hodge of Pyramids, who finds an ice mass in the Mammoth Cave, has been at work for some time past the Lawrence date was fifty, forty years ago, and he thinks even further back than that. In one day he caught twenty-five fish at Lynnwood, with one, however, being mercifully slaughtered by Jerome Garrow's Falls, at the mouth of the Sassafras and Sycamore rivers, and at other points.

Speaking of the account which between the two state and Massachusetts Colonel Hodge said it was generally thought that the problem and New Hampshire could solve money, which the fact is that the matter has been so arranged that the Massachusetts government has footed the bills and it has not cost this state a cent. Moreover, it was this agreement with Massachusetts which alone made possible the establishment of the first fish hatchery in this state.—Cincinnati (N. H.) Monthly.

A Strange Bittersweet.

A curious story comes from Salt Lake City which is attracting much comment in the Gentile circles of that city. Fellowman Charles F. Washoe, who not killed by Joseph A. Brown, Sept. 11, 1889, and our favorite medical non-smoker subject for discussion, Barton was having a quarrel with his wife, which the officer attempted to stop. Barton fired, and the bullet passed through Washoe' heart, leaving a jagged bullet hole in the breast.

A martial officer of the dead officer was subpoenaed and came in the Barton at once her home in Salt Lake. She was soon affected by the tragedy, and took the loss of her brother to heart. In a short time she returned home. Almost three months ago, as the story is told, she was brought home by friends of the dead officer, the latter gave rise to a her perfectly friend, her with a set bordereck over the heart of the exact shape and appearance of the wound made in Washoe' breast by the bullet from Barton' pistol.—Denver News.

A Police Station Phenomenon.

While I was in the Eldridge street police station the other afternoon a hard case in with his handcuffs on strolled and a pained expression in his face.

"Give me some modern machinery," he said to the sergeant in deploring tones.

The sergeant took a bottle from the locker behind the desk and called the doorman, who administered a dose of the stuff to the prisoner. He went out apparently relieved.

"I didn't know you ever saw a phenomenon," I said to the sergeant, who explained that in the summer the police in some of the station houses keep on hand medicines obtained by the commissioner of charities and correction for the relief of suffering frequently too poor to patronize a drug store.

MRS. GRAHAM'S

Cucumber and Elder Flower Cream

[illegible]

MRS. GRAHAM'S

Face Bleach

[illegible]

The Druggist [illegible]

Sample Bottle [illegible]

LEGAL NOTICE.

In the Probate Court, in and for Salt Lake County, Territory of Utah.

In the matter of the Estate of James Nelson, Deceased.

NOTICE IS HEREBY GIVEN THAT [illegible]

ASSESSMENT NOTICE.

[illegible]

NOTICE TO CREDITORS.

Estate of John Lewis, Deceased.

NOTICE IS HEREBY GIVEN TO THOSE [illegible]

NOTICE OF SALE UNDER DEED OF TRUST.

WHEREAS [illegible]

DELINQUENT NOTICE.

[illegible]

NOTICE.—THERE IS DELINQUENT [illegible]

NAME.	No. of Cert.	No. of Shares.	AMOUNT
Chas. H. Biggs.	[illegible]	[illegible]	$[illegible]
H. F. Wesley.	[illegible]	1,000	[illegible]
R. C. Sack.	[illegible]	2,000	[illegible]
John T. Evans.	[illegible]	1,000	[illegible]
L. H. Hurd.	[illegible]	500	[illegible]
Chas. H. Biggs.	[illegible]	14,000	[illegible]
Geo. S. Field.	[illegible]	[illegible]	[illegible]
H. Dougherty.	[illegible]	[illegible]	[illegible]
H. Blumenthal.	[illegible]	12,000	[illegible]
Blanche.	[illegible]	[illegible]	[illegible]
Boyd Park.	[illegible]	1,000	[illegible]
J. A. Pimental.	[illegible]	1,000	[illegible]
A. Pimental.	[illegible]	1,000	[illegible]
J. H. Beadleston.	[illegible]	[illegible]	[illegible]
J. H. Leach.	[illegible]	[illegible]	[illegible]
A. Lyon.	[illegible]	[illegible]	[illegible]
J. H. Beadle.	[illegible]	[illegible]	[illegible]
J. F. Wolcott.	[illegible]	[illegible]	[illegible]
W. S. Jennings.	[illegible]	[illegible]	[illegible]
A. C. Dewsnup.	[illegible]	[illegible]	[illegible]
D. L. Wilson.	[illegible]	[illegible]	[illegible]
J. Bennett.	[illegible]	[illegible]	[illegible]
J. Bennett.	[illegible]	1,000	[illegible]
F. H. Hunt.	[illegible]	2,000	[illegible]
C. Dietz.	[illegible]	200	[illegible]
J. C. Green.	[illegible]	100	[illegible]
J. H. Dietz.	[illegible]	100	[illegible]
J. H. Dietz.	[illegible]	100	[illegible]
J. B. Fenton.	[illegible]	50	[illegible]
W. F. Dietz.	[illegible]	400	[illegible]
J. A. Rogers.	[illegible]	75	[illegible]
Arthur Brown.	[illegible]	50	[illegible]
J. Bonnyman.	[illegible]	500	[illegible]

[illegible]

LEGAL NOTICE.

In the Probate Court, in and for Salt Lake County, Territory of Utah.

In the matter of the Estate of Hannah Carson Hamilton, Deceased.

NOTICE IS HEREBY GIVEN, THAT [illegible]

NOTICE.

A MEETING OF THE STOCKHOLDERS [illegible]

NOTICE

THE REGULAR ANNUAL MEETING OF [illegible]

HENRY WAGNER

SALT LAKE CITY.

CALIFORNIA BREWERY.

LAGER BEER, ALE & PORTER.

Wholesale & Retail.

PO. EAST FIRST SOUTH STREET.

Graefenberg PILLS.

They cure Headache, Biliousness, Liver Complaint and Indigestion. No griping or nausea. These

PILLS

Tone up the system and restore health to those suffering from general debility and nervousness. Sold by all druggists. 25c. per box.

Best for Women.

GRAEFENBERG CATHOLICON

Cures all forms of Female complaints, weakness, nervousness and general debility. Sold by all druggists.

Z. C. M. I. Drug Dept. Wholesale Agts

THE BOYS!

JOHNSON, PRATT & CO.

Carry Everything in the DRUG Line.

"TAKE A SMILE TO A DESPONDING HEARTH." CALL ON THEM FOR THEM DOES PUTTIES.

FINE .·. WINES .·. LIQUORS .·. AND .·. CIGARS.

—(MAIN)— Wholesale and Retail. —(STREET.)— Mail orders solicited.

GRANITE IRONWARE is more than a luxury—it is a necessity. It is clean, healthy, handy and cost; there is no difference between it and tinware, as between a china and a cup. It is cheap, because it lasts, and it is always nice. Every good housewife should use it, and those who once try it won't have anything else. It is the best ware made for the kitchen. Cook Book and Price List Free on application. Mention this paper. Manufactured only by the ST. LOUIS STAMPING CO., ST. LOUIS, MO.

Boiling. Baking. Boiling. Preserving.

MEN'S CLOTHING.

40 OFF

ALL

Summer Weight Goods

AT TEASDEL'S.

A FEW of DUSTERS and ALPACCA COATS at LESS THAN COST AT

TEASDEL'S

H. DINWOODEY FURN. CO.

FURNITURE,
CARPETS,
WALLPAPER,
REFRIGERATORS,
BABY CARRIAGES,
RUGS,
LINOLEUM,
CURTAINS,
DRAPERIES.

Furniture Repaired and Re-Upholstered. Window Shades Made and Hung.

Our Stock for Fall Trade is now arriving. Come early and see all our New and Novel Designs in CURTAINS and RUGS.

Mail orders receive prompt attention.

H. DINWOODEY FURN. CO.