$2,500 DAMAGES AWARDED

In the Action for Personal Injuries Sustained in a Mile.

SUIT AGAINST THE UTAH CENTRAL R. R.

Damages Claimed from the City for the Taking of Smallpox Patients to the Old Western Woolen Mills.

It was nearly 10 o'clock last night when the jury in the damage suit of John S. Lindeberg vs. the Utah Central Mining Company reached a conclusion. They had been in consultation about nine hours. This morning they brought in a sealed verdict, finding for the plaintiff, and awarding him $2,500 damages. The amount claimed was $25,000.

The trial had occupied two days and a half, and it will be remembered that the action was brought to recover the sum named for the loss of a leg, which resulted from the carving to of the earth while the plaintiff was following his occupation as a carman in the defendant company's service.

CLAIM FOR PERSONAL INJURIES.

The trial of the case of George C. Armstrong vs. the Oregon Short Line was then resumed in Judge Anderson's court. C. C. Dey appearing for the plaintiff and P. L. Williams for the defendants.

Some time ago, while the plaintiff was working in the defendant's yards at Pocatello a car ran over him. He thereby lost the right leg below the knee and four fingers of the left hand. Negligence is assigned as the cause of the accident, and $15,000 damages are demanded. The case was expected to run for into the afternoon.

DAMAGE SUIT.

The case of M. Ruth Warner (administratrix) vs. the Mutual Accident Association of the United States was to have come up for trial in Judge Anderson's court this morning, but a demurrer and the hearing of which has been previously noted in the news, and it was stated that it would be called on probably some time this afternoon. Judge Rawlins is counsel for the plaintiff and Attorney Talbot (Baldwin & Talbot) for the defendant.

This is the case in which young Warner's life was insured with the defendant company for the sum of $5,000. While it is admitted on the one side that the plaintiff's death was the result of a blood clot, fired by a burglar, the defendant company claims that the young man committed suicide.

BEFORE JUDGE ZANE.

Tenon Tennyson et al. vs. Taylor, Hershey Armstrong Co. et al. (in dock) and were allowed ten days time in the statement for a new trial. This action, for personal injuries, was tried about two months ago.

CASES DISCONTINUED.

In the matter of Adam Dunsse vs. the Utah Central Railway company, the defendants by Attorney LeGrande Young, moved for a continuance, and the case went over for the term.

This action arises out of the killing of a boy, named Dunsse, for which substantial damages are claimed. The accident occurred in July of last year. It would appear that the lad was playing on a track near the company's line of railway, and, getting upon the track, one of the cars knocked him down and went over him, sustaining fatal injuries.

ASSOCIATION SUIT FOR DAMAGES.

The case of John H. Wilson vs. Salt Lake City was then taken up, S. H. Lewis appearing for the plaintiff and City Attorney Hoge for the defendant.

The plaintiff sues to obtain judgment against the defendant in two causes of action, the first in the amount of damages (being in the sum of $2000, alleged to have been lost by reason of the unlawful entering by the defendants and taking possession of certain premises of which he was then seized, and the placing in the buildings thereon persons sick with smallpox, to the second cause for $500, alleged to be damages sustained by plaintiff in the failure of the defendants to let him into the possession of the buildings known as the Wasatch Woolen mills, in Salt Lake county, same having been let to plaintiff by defendant from January 1st, 1890, to January 1st, 1891.

Several persons suffering at the Valley House about eighteen months ago were attacked with smallpox, and the place was quarantined for a short time. The patients, at the instigation of the local authorities, were removed to the old Wasatch Woolen mills, in consequence of which the plaintiff was deprived of the rental, said to be about $25 per month, and he was also unable to rent a cottage for the same reason, thereby losing $12 per month. It seems that defendant has been corresponding and talking in question on which chips are raised, but owing to the removal of the small pox patients into the locality he could not let out one to gather the rentals, most of which had to remain there and spoil.

The jury, after a brief consultation, found for the plaintiff, assessing the damages at $50.

SETTING OF CASES.

The Court gave notice that on Tuesday, the 10th inst., at 10 a. m., a session of the court would be held at which additional civil jury cases would be set for trial from May 2nd to May 5th.

THE SENATE AND UTAH.

The World's Fair Bill and the Chairman of the Senate Committee.

A Washington special to the Herald this morning states that the Senate Committee on Territories had viewed with favor the Utah World's Fair bill and that Senator Platt had telegraphed to Judge Zane asking for information in respect to the work done by the Utah Legislature on behalf of the World's Fair. The Herald correspondent was interested as to the views of the chairman of Judge Zane, as the Utah Legislature had been questioned in regard to the matter. From what he knows it is altogether likely that the Senate will be satisfied by the action of Utah on this question. It is true that the Senate committee has considerable bill, and that many of its members have the contest with Utah. And it is believed Senator Platt regards a contest for Utah, after some postponement, is preferable to the "Utah-Idaho" proposition. This is about the sum and substance of the matter.

SERIOUS CHARGES

Against the Heads of the Police Department Now Being Preferred.

Some of the ousted officers of the police force are now at work to indict a series of state charges against the heads of the police department, in writing, which they say they will present to the City Council as soon as they can be drawn up.

The alleged offenses cover a wide range and consists of dereliction of duty in not the illegal paying of money to new women and kindred crimes.

The accused officers declare that it is a deliberate scheme been organized to oust and say that they will, without difficulty, be able to prove their innocence.

On the other hand those who prefer the charges point to figures and facts, and give day and date and names of witnesses and parties who they say they intend to show that the police force kind of men have been elected to office.

The trouble becomes more ominous and threatening daily.

"GREEN GOODS."

One of the President Fellows Who Deal in Them Greatly Feared.

We have occasionally directed attention to the fact that different persons in this Territory have for some months past been receiving communications from "green goods" swindlers. Gentlemen who have been favored with correspondence of this character have notified us of the fact and in some instances have forwarded the letters to the office with requests to expose the fraudulent business. Only the other days gentlemen who had been approached, by mail, on the bogus money subject, called and made a statement of the fact, and in the course of a conversation caused, in the course of which it was stated as remarkable that the officers did not succeed in entrapping and arresting men belonging to the class of criminals referred to, as it seemed a simple matter to accomplish this feat by the application of a little planning and ingenuity. An article in the New York Herald gives the details of a clever capture of this character. The following is the story of the affair as it is stated above and occurred:

"A dozen persons were in the office either Assess and Fulton streets at 9 p. m. yesterday when two young men walked into the office and inquired for the proprietor of the room. They had written about the time when the proprietor was not behind himself to the door of the room, where they waited.

"Two minutes later the young men were joined by a third, who had evidently been waiting for them somewhere in the room. They was a Fresh of stock, a small leather satchel and a bundle of papers. The proprietor appeared and introduced the three to the persons in
