ANOTHER WRETCHED HOME.

Mrs. Lena Hauswirth is Anxious to Get Rid of a Bad Husband.

Mrs. A. Hauswirth this afternoon filed a suit for divorce against her husband, John Hauswirth, in the Third district court.

The parties intermarried in this city January 18th, 1888, and there are children, Mabel Grace and Harry Harrison. Cruelty and failure to provide are alleged. Mrs. Hauswirth states that her husband has neglected to provide for the family the common necessaries of life, though he has a source of income, a regular monthly receipt of wages. She states that since their marriage he has treated her in an inhuman manner, and states that in November, 1893, he took and knocked her senseless on a door sill, that he threatened her and left her for dead. Within the last six months he has repeatedly threatened, both privately and in public, to poison her of infidelity, and has used such a brutal manner that she was compelled to occupy a separate part of the house at night, securing the doors against him. The defendant is, she further alleges, in the owner of several pieces of real estate, all of which has been acquired by him since their marriage.

Hence plaintiff asks that the marriage be dissolved, that she have the custody of her children, that a portion of the community property be set apart to her use, and that her husband be restrained from disposing of or encumbering any of the property pending the trial of the suit. Attorney in the case is $50 per month, $50 attorney's fee and costs are also asked for.

Nye & Armstrong are the plaintiff's attorneys.

A GOOD WORK.

A Society for the Moral and Intellectual Improvement of Young Men Organized at Draper.

A correspondent writes: "A scene was witnessed a few nights ago by one of the observing matrons among the young men of this county, in the peaceful little town of Draper, that is deemed worthy of mention in the News.

"The term a great many boys there are in many Utah towns, ranging in age from 12 to 18 years, who begin forming habits of spending their evenings in loafing around stores, saloons and other public places, where none to evil reader, even as smoking, drinking, using profane and vulgar language, etc.

"Mr. Stewart, principal of the Draper schools, seeing many such boys are not too young as they are not astray by the examples of others, and the best way to prevent their forming bad habits is to interest them in educational pursuits, and through their interest in study keep them away at night and place restraints upon them that the forming of any of the habits mentioned is a moral impossibility, he organized a society of Ity of these boys. They meet twice a week, aside from attention to listening to a carefully prepared lecture on subjects of mutual interest to them, they discuss questions in the form of great men, topics on politics, engagement to parents and all other questions. The leaders have taken their offices as interesting that they decline to be honor and special privilege to belong to the society. No money is in the chest that the leaders take no difficulty in getting the boys to contribute to what is required to defray expenses. Some of the requirements are: No member must smoke, use profane language or attack intoxicating liquor.

"If any member violates any of these rules he is properly tried by the committee and if found guilty, sometimes, the time depending on the offense committed. The result in Draper is that the great amount of good being done can hardly be estimated.

Miss Mayhew's Funeral.

The funeral of Miss Grace Mayhew, of Pleasant Grove, took place yesterday under the auspices of the Methodists in that place. The young lady was highly esteemed by all who knew her, and at the University, where she was a student for a brief time this year before being taken ill, she was regarded by the faculty as a student of unusual promise. In accordance with a custom now prevalent, that some member of the family should attend the funeral of students when they occur, Dr. Talmage was present at Miss Mayhew's funeral, and was one of the speakers. The ceremonies were largely attended.

Visit to Stockport Sunday School.

PATRICROFT, near Manchester, England, Oct. 16, 1894.—According to my promise I issue another visit to the Stockport Sunday school on Sunday, October 7, 1894. I showed the officers of the school the report of my visit to that school last August, clipped from the NEWS. They were well pleased with it. In conversation with the inspector (or head superintendent) he said:

"There was considerable prejudice against your people some time ago regarding polygamy, was there not?"

"Yes, but that has been dispelled. The law only allows a man to have one wife now, and we believe in sustaining the law."

He asked if I would come in the afternoon and address one of the large classes. At the time appointed I was there, and was ushered into a large room, where I found about 175 young men. It consisted of a class. After the opening of the school the visitor (or superintendent) asked me where I was from, and upon answering "Utah," he was surprised, and said:

"What, are you a Latter-day Saint?"

My answer was in the affirmative. He took appeared to be in two minds whether I should address the school. Upon second thought, however, he said I could do so, but I must be brief. After occupying the time allotted to me I went into another room, called the small class. There were probably seventy men from 25 to 50 years old. I spoke twenty minutes, and dwelt upon the book of Mormon, how by this means the young and rising generation were kept from by and intoxicating drink and taught to seek the way which leads to eternal life. I made brief allusion to faith and repentance, and gave a short account of the baptism of Jesus. I said we should follow closely the example which He set us, and keep His commandments. We should pattern with the Bible, and earnestly pray to our Heavenly Father to let the influence of His Holy Spirit rest upon us, so we can understand the Scriptures in the true light and meaning thereof.

This school has recently been bereft, by death, of its senior teacher, Mr. George Hinchs, a man who filled very well in the Sunday school cause. He had been connected with the Stockport Sunday school for 51 years, and a remarkable thing is that during that period 81,000 scholars have been added to the school roll. He has held several positions in the school. He departed this life the 27th of September, and he was buried on the 1st inst.

We have had a very long spell of weather for the past few weeks, which is something rare for this time of the year. The summer was a wet one.

Business is still depressed. The factories and workshops are running three and four days a week.

We have recently had three more baptisms. R. A.

A Boy's Hand Crushed.

Yesterday the 3-year-old son of John Conroy, of 1140 Twenty-fifth street, was behind a street-car when it pulled and suddenly, while the car was coming down Twenty-fifth street, had a nasty thickness left, the boy placed his left hand upon the track. The motorman upon seeing the child, reversed the going and put on the brakes but all was of no avail, the wheels ran over the child's hand, crushing the bones so that Dr. Conroy, who was called to attend the child, had to remove all the bones in the hand from the wrist down to the second finger joints. Superintendent Pepper was promptly on hand to render all the assistance in his power.
