World's Fair Notes.

The Utah World's Fair Advocate for June is out. It is a magazine of 44 pages and contains a great deal of information relating to the work of the Fair in Utah. C. E. Kester is the publisher.

The Hon. Thomas Judd of St. George has been appointed general superintendent of the World's Fair for Southern Utah. He will exercise general supervision over Fair work in that district.

The plans for the Chicago building, it is expected, will be all approved and ready for work by the 15th of July.

Brigham City Creamery.

Yesterday the creamery company settled the dispute which had arisen over the delaying of the machinery, by paying cash down for the whole arrangement, and securing 15 per cent discount. A trial was made on making butter and cheese which proved highly satisfactory, and the company will now buy all the milk they can secure, and would be pleased to have the people from all parts of the county bear this in mind. In a few days, when things are in good shape, they expect to send teams to gather the milk from all parts of the county.—Brigham City Report.

Latest Court News.

The divorce suit of Charles J. Garber vs. Ella P. Garber was filed in the Third District Court today. Petitioner is at present residing in Tooele County. The parties were married on February 22, 1887, at Princeton, Illinois, and in October of the following year the wife left her husband, without, as he says, reasonable or just cause. This is about all the complaint states.

Anthony Keenan has begun suit in the same court against J. H. Vatts to recover $839.72, with interest from December, 1891, on a promissory note.

Transcripts on appeal have been filed in the case of R. C. Bird vs. Peter C. Brixen, also in that of Alva Cotton vs. O. L. Brown.

A BIG FIRE.

Logan Visited By a $30,000 Blaze—Names of Losers.

Yesterday a fire broke out at about 2:30 in the morning in the rear of the Palace drug store at the rear of the Saddle Rock restaurant at Logan. Both establishments occupied the same building. Before the fire was controlled fully $30,000 worth of property was destroyed. The losses are estimated as follows: A. M. Bell, druggist, loss on stock, $1,000, insured for $5,000. Jos. Charles, restaurant, loss on fixtures and stock, $1,000; no insurance. Cole & Co., bookers, loss on stock, $250, no insurance. Thomas & Odell, photographers, loss on instruments and fixtures, $1,500; insurance $1,000. Coop Wagon & Machine Co., loss $2,000, fully insured. The Eccles building, loss on drug store and restaurant building, $3,000; insured for $1,000. Kimball Bros.' loss on building $2,000; no insurance. James Quayle, damaged by fire, water and moving stock, $2,500, fully insured. J. R. Edwards, loss on building and stock by fire and water, $2,000; insurance not known. Rosenbaum, loss sustained by moving goods, $1,000, fully insured. The north side of Thatcher Bros.' bank was rather badly scorched.

SELECTING THE BOOKS.

What the Territorial Convention Has Done This Morning.

At this morning's territorial convention Appleton's Geographies and the World Reader, No. 1, found the greatest favor, the latter being adopted as a supplementary book. It is regarded as an excellent and interesting publication.

Different firms presented the claims for the various histories of the United States, but no action was taken thereon this morning.

There seemed to be a disposition to retain the histories at present in use, inasmuch as it is not thought desirable to make too much of a change in the text books, where it is found that those now being employed are at all suitable.

A few of the members seem, however, to regard Montgomery's history of the United States with favor. Such a selection would be unfortunate, inasmuch as the book contains some incorrect information with regard to Utah; and although it was proposed to remove this from the history, should it be chosen, nevertheless the fact remains that this one circumstance would damage the reliability of the whole book, and it would, doubtless, be a mistake to adopt it.

The convention hopes to get through its work by tomorrow at noon; at any rate, that is the aim in view.

The Face on the Dollar.

[Ladies' Home Journal.]

Anna Willess Williams, the original of the face on our silver dollar, was born in Philadelphia during the Civil War. Her mother was of Southern birth, the daughter of Dr. Arthur H. Willess, a wealthy slave owner of Maryland, who, while his daughter was still unmarried, suffered financial reverses. When 19 she married Henry Williams of Philadelphia, and removed with him to his native city. Mr. Williams soon became ill, and through some mismanagement he lost all his property, and his daughter Anna, the youngest of nine children, was born under most adverse circumstances. While she was still but a child her father died, leaving his widow, although in delicate health, with the strongest determination to care for and educate her children, and it was entirely through the endeavors of her mother that Miss Williams received her education.

It was through Thomas Eakins' influence that Miss Williams, a friend of his family, was induced to pose for George Morgan for the designs of the Goddess of Liberty. The sittings took place at the residence of Mr. Eakins, on Mount Vernon street, below Eighteenth, in November, 1876.

MUSICAL MATTERS AT PROVO.

Fourth of July Celebration.—Items of General Interest.

Our local musician, Mr. H. E. Giles, returned last evening from a rather extended trip throughout the East. His object was in the interest of music and he brought home with him a good many fine choir and orchestral selections for the benefit of the Utah County people. While gone Mr. Giles visited Washington, New York, Boston, Niagara Falls, Buffalo and Chicago. In the latter place he met at the Grand Pacific Hotel with the World's Fair Musical Committee, and was very well received by them. He was invited to speak to them on the musical affairs and prospects of Utah, and was listened to with considerable interest, and they complimented him highly on his report of our condition. They gave him every encouragement to attend the fair with his Utah county choir and promised him every support possible.

Mr. Giles, John Hood of Provo, and William James of Spanish Fork were appointed by the committee at Chicago as an executive committee for Utah County to encourage the people to assist in getting up a choir of 300 voices to attend the World's Fair and engage in the great musical contest which will take place in Sept. 1893. The gentleman is now quite enthusiastic in this matter and will commence at once to prepare for the event. At New York he visited the Roosevelt Organ Factory and saw there in the course of construction an immense [illegible] with all the modern improvements; when completed it will have cost $25,000. This instrument is to be exhibited at Chicago, and if it takes the prize, the company made Mr. Giles an offer to ship it to Provo and put it in our Tabernacle for the sum of $15,000. The noted musicians, Mr. Clarence Eddy and Mr. Theodore Thomas, will be the judges of the organs competing at the Fair.

The committee on arrangements for the Fourth of July held a meeting last evening, when much incidental work was accomplished, and it now begins to look as though Provo will indeed celebrate. The procession will be one of the main features of the day. Considerable money was appropriated to the various sub-committees to be expended in making all the necessary arrangements. Ocean's band has been engaged for the day, and the Democratic and Republican drum corps will be in full force.

Miss Ella Davis, a very handsome young lady, has been selected as the Goddess of Liberty.

Mr. Polls, editor of the Monday Dispatch, left last evening for Cedar City. The gentleman is accompanied by his wife. They will spend a few days in that place visiting the parents and relatives of Mr. Rolls.

One poor, lame, dejected hobo was run in last night for begging.

In Commissioner Dudley's court yesterday the case of Peter Stuffs, trustee for Dunn & Co., vs. James Pollard, was heard. It is a suit on account in which the plaintiff seeks to recover $118. The commissioner took the matter under advisement and will give his decision in the morning.

Late on Wednesday Deputy Marshals Monahan and Sutherland arrested at Springville J. A. McHorton and his alleged wife, Rhoda Palmer, alias Gee, alias Gee, on the charge of adultery. They were brought to Provo lodged in jail and had their hearing yesterday before Commissioner Hills. McHorton married her last spring under the name of Rhoda Palmer, and at the time of the marriage she was the wife of a man named Gee, who is in the penitentiary for stealing a team of horses from his wife's father. They were bound over in the sum of $1,500 in default of which they were taken back to jail.

Mrs. Anna Marks, of Eureka, Tintic, a lady who has been engaged a great deal of late years in sewing with the citizens of that place, filed in the District court today a complaint—of a rather different nature, however. It is against a resident of Eureka—her husband—Wolf Marks. This time she asks for a divorce, and prays the court to come to her relief and give her the freedom she craves. They were married in London in 1872. Ill-treatment is the ground for the complaint.

The ladies semi-monthly meeting will be held in the Fourteenth ward assembly rooms tomorrow at 2 p.m.

A CHINESE IRISHMAN.

THE AUGUSTA HERALD DESCRIBES AN ETHNOLOGICAL NOVELTY.

Augusta now has several novelties in the way of Chinamen. Living on the corner of McIntosh and Calhoun streets is an Irish-Chinaman. He is decidedly the most intelligent Chinaman in the city. He speaks and writes very good English.

A reporter called upon him yesterday and after much persuasion succeeded in getting his history. He has been in Augusta only a short while, and is doing a grocery business at the place mentioned. He came here from Beaufort, S. C. He says he left China when a boy and went to Ireland, where he lived a good many years.

The Irish brogue still sticks to him. While in Dublin, Ireland, he married an Irish woman named Mary Foley. From Ireland he came to America, and since has traveled all over the world, having been a steward in the navy for several years, and steward on a merchantman for fifteen years. After passing through many vicissitudes he has taken his abode in Africa.

He has been married nineteen years and has two children. This Irish-Chinaman has a thorough English name. He, however, possesses all the complexion of a Chinaman, and was very obstinate in answering questions. His children are bright and do not look like the offspring of a Chinaman.

A Woman Hotel Clerk.

The most gorgeous [illegible] ever evolved in the way of an American hotel clerk is far less pleasing to look upon than the pretty girl in black who takes your pounds, shillings and pence in the office of a hotel in London.—New York Sun.

About Dusting and Sweeping.

"You won't scarcely believe," said a lady to a caller who dropped in one morning, "but I haven't swept my parlors thoroughly in three months, at least what we would ordinarily call sweeping them, and I am sure you will agree that they don't look it. Of course I have points in my favor, as there are no children about the house except those of invited visitors, but even then I should not be such a slave to a sweeping day as some of my friends are. To begin with, I never allow my rooms to get all littered up. To be sure, eternal vigilance is ...... hard work, but all the same I think it pays. I never see a scrap of any sort on the carpet without picking it up at the first opportunity. I take pains to keep things as far as possible in their places, and, between you and me, what I think is the strongest of all points, I have just as little in my rooms as I can get along with. For years my life was a burden with bric-a-brac and trumpery ornaments and draperies and fancy articles of every description, which had to be put in order and dusted and looked after daily.

"Now I keep within easy reach a very large, soft square of flannel. This I wring every day out of clean water, and once or so in the ...... and wipe the dust from the carpet ...... with this cloth. I never bother myself to go over the whole room at one time, but just keep track of the places where dust is most likely to accumulate. My dusting is done with soft cheesecloth. I wipe up the dust with the utmost care, working very slowly and ...... every article I take the cloth to the open door or window and give it a thorough ...... In this way I not only clean ...... from the articles themselves, but keep it from the carpet and get it out of the room altogether. There is reason in everything, even in dusting a room, and I maintain, and with a fair array of facts to prove my statement, that if the parlor is properly cared for, one sweeping in a month will answer every purpose. Of course, sitting rooms and dining rooms need more care, but then once a week is plenty, if the dusting cloth and brush are used with discretion and thoroughness."—New York Ledger.

Gorgeous Gowns of Humble Origin.

Many are the stories we have read about how some of the world renowned arrow-makers study color effects and arrangements from tropical birds and gorgeous sunsets, and how they travel here and there and search the history of all time and people for new models. All this we have read, and our admiration for the versatility of these dress artists has been great, and in our ignorance we have given them more merit than is really their due.

"Do you know," said a buyer for one of the largest shops in town the other day, "that a great many of the costumes sold by Worth and other well known dressmakers for fabulous sums, and which have helped to establish their names as authority on dress all over the world, are very often designed by some obscure little woman living in a back street?

"These poor, hard working women have sometimes great talents as designers, and whenever a particularly brilliant idea strikes them they will spend their last franc to buy the materials necessary to make the dress, which, when finished, they will carry to the head of some one of the large establishments in the hopes of selling it. If the dress happens to please, suggestions are made about changes or improvements, and the designer is given an order which enables her to provide herself from the workroom's showroom with everything necessary to make the dress. When complete she again takes it to the head of the house, who pays her well for her work and she goes away happy.

"Thus are dresses which cost perhaps 300 francs sold for as many thousands, and the name of the seller gains an added renown, which is his only by right of purchase. In Paris today are a few of the rising dressmakers, by selling three or four gowns in this way, have made enough money to establish themselves in a business which their talents have enabled them to enlarge and make successful."—Philadelphia Press.

A Cure for Worn Out Faces.

No one knows the care of a house in all its departments as one who has tried it for years. No one can know the vexations of selecting, planning and knowing just what will be served (and better than any one else, too, just how it will be served) for the 1,095 meals which are needed to give one's family a year's growth, except one who has planned that number for several years.

Over and over again one hears "she is worn out," she has kept house for fifty years, and she is the best housekeeper I know.

All through the history of humanity a need calls forth a supply. [illegible]

[illegible]

What, then, is the response here to the hundreds of drawn, tired faces, the hundreds of wearied, tired voices, the hundreds of broken down women who, instead of ripening into a vigorous old age, wither and droop into different stages of incapacity and suffering?

The answer is here:

Learn bodily economy.

Spare your forces as you spare your money.

Watch your bank account of muscular and nervous strength.—Boston Herald.

Knew Her Own Mind.

A lady who was shopping visited the mantle department of a Woodward avenue store and the young woman attendant began to show her the different designs, exhibiting them on a lay figure.

"I think this would suit you," said the attendant, looking her over carefully.

"No," said the customer, regarding the long ends of the garment critically, "that is not my style."

"It will make you look slim," urged the girl.

"I have no desire to look slim," was the answer.

"But you will appear taller in it."

"And I do not wish to appear taller," said the lady quietly.

The girl looked at her a moment in surprise, then she said, with a little sigh:

"Happy woman! I wish more of our customers were as well satisfied with themselves. I always have to help them make up their minds as to what they want."

"I have a mind of my own," said the shopper tranquilly, as she selected the garment that suited her and brought her shopping and the sweet dispositions to an end together.—Detroit Free Press.

The suggestion is offered by a clever [illegible] that a better stocking darner than the wooden or porcelain egg or polished solid cup is a discarded slipper sole, or rather the sole of a discarded slipper, for the two should remain united.

Thumb Rings.

In the seventeenth century rings were frequently worn upon the thumb.

"When I was about thy years, Hal," says the Fat Knight, "I was not an eagle's talon in the waist—I could have crept into an alderman's thumb ring." Thomas A. Becket's thumb ring, given to him by the king of France, was granted with a ruby the size of a hen's egg.—[illegible] Times.

Where Foxes Still Flourish.

(From the Reading Times.)

More foxes flourish in Eastern Pennsylvania than can probably be found in any other early settled State. There is no question but that as many are now roaming the hills and ridges hereabouts as there were a century ago. Nine have been shot this season already by young sportsmen near the village of Rock, and thirteen more have been killed in the vicinity of Fleetville. The foxes have grown so bold that they give the farmers a great deal of annoyance by their depredations.

Frank H. Werner, a farmer residing near Zieler's Church, discovered a large red fox in his barn. Before he could get his gun the animal had disappeared, carrying two fat hens. Members of the Morgantown Fox-Hunting club captured three foxes, a large male and two females alive the other day at the base of the Welsh mountains, near Carnarvon, and are now keeping them confined until the next hunt. Three or four big foxes are seen almost every day in the neighborhood of Yellow House, but they all appear to bear charmed lives.

A big white-tailed fox, which circulated in the vicinity of Bunker Hill, near Strasburg, over the Lancaster County border, and which had the reputation of being the "king of running foxes," met his fate last Friday, after having been chased at frequent intervals for the last four years. Hitherto he had always managed to give both hunters and hounds the slip in every chase, but on Friday afternoon he reached the end of his rope. The Hunt boys of Quarryville, with hounds, beat up the coverts usually resorted to by this particular Reynard, and at last had the satisfaction of seeing him break away and make a dash to escape the dogs. Cunning Reynard doubled and twisted repeatedly in vain attempts to shake off his pursuers, but the quarry was captured alive not far from Bunker Hill. The successful hunters are keeping their prize for a big chase next week.

William Bishop and Howard Taylor of West Chester, after a lively chase, caught a red male fox near Mortonville with one of his forelegs fast in a steel trap. They untrapped and liberated him and then had the pleasure of capturing him again. Last week Hummelville Muhlhouser and Herman Strasser shot a large gray fox with white legs on the mountain west of Hamburg. James Moffitt of Haine's Tavern killed a red fox on Saturday weighing 8½ pounds.
