FANCY CATTLE.

Some Animals Handsome Enough for Boss Bookbot to Paint.

After some years of painstaking labor the breed of Dutch belted cattle shown in the picture has been established. There are several breeders of these striking animals in the country, but mostly, if not wholly, confined so far to the eastern states, mainly New York, Pennsylvania and Massachusetts.

DUTCH BELTED CATTLE.

Those cattle look very attractive on a lawn, with their black quarters and broad, white belts. They belong to the Dutch families, and are similar in most respects to the Holstein-Friesians. The belted Dutch cattle are only registered as a separate family and have their pedigrees carefully preserved.

Bee Keeping.

In a bulletin on bee keeping issued from the station of the Rhode Island Agricultural school at Kingston, Mr. Cushman says: "Bees are your property to erode and imperceptible bees, but in those will adopted to their purpose give a good return for the time and money invested. The beeper who have taken the time and trouble to study the business have succeeded with practical hives, easily opened, in which the combs are straight and even, allowing of quick examination with little disturbance of the bees.

"They unite weak colonies in the fall, feed them if in want of winter stores, and in winter give protection from wind and provide loss of heat by an outer case, with packing, or by comfortable quarters in the cellar. Extra stores are supplied in spring, and, if needed, above profit queen, and by various means extensive breeding is induced, to get a large army of gatherers and comb builders before the honey harvest.

"If no such reserves are wanted breeding is discouraged during the honey flow, and swarming is prevented by one of several methods, and the large array of workers lay up their short lives in gathering honey instead of raising bees. The crop is removed, a young queen given in place of one whose best powers are used, the remaining bees are allowed honey enough for winter, and raise enough young to keep up their strength and spring. This is followed year after year, whether the season be good or poor, so when the harvest comes a good crop is insured.

"Improvement in yield in some sections is due to the planting of basswood trees in private grounds and along roadsides for shade. Nothing in this country equals basswood bloom for honey production. Alsike clover, now more generally planted on heavy soil in connection with or in place of red clover, is also gradually increasing our bee pastures, as well as the farmer's crop of cattle fodder. Bees may obtain the nectar from alsike blooms, while they are unable to reach that in the blossoms of the first crop of red clover. Buckwheat, usually a profitable crop aside from honey, may be planted to still increase the supply of bee food, though it does not always yield honey."

Mr. Cushman emphasizes the importance of starting with a good hive and sticking to it, so as to have one kind only in an apiary, thus making possible dividing, dividing, changing combs of brood or honey, tiering up, etc.

Cutting.

While the culling process is going on and arrangements are being made to fatten birds for the table, the shelter of the retained young stock should not be neglected. In August the early broods will be looking for perching places; the coops are no longer suitable for them; an outside shed or temporary structure for the next three months would be service able and save much trouble and annoyance. We all know how the young stock crowd each other in coops or obscure corners when reduced; some have the habit of getting under other birds, while the most robust will trample on the weaker ones, all endeavoring to huddle together.

There are many fanciers who have abundant roosting places for their surplus stock who do not need these suggestions, but there are others, we are sure, who neglect such things annually, and are obliged to face much trouble in the fall when the young stock is trying to sandwich itself between the old birds on the perches and receiving the penalty of its intrusion. Old and young birds will occupy the same perches in peace, the old birds will dominate and force the young birds to hover as after many attempts they finally crowd into some obscure corner where they get soiled from the droppings.—Ohio Poultry Journal.

Competitive Tests at Fairs.

We breed draft horses for work, heavy work, and the horse that can pull the greatest load and walk the fastest with it is the horse we want. If in awarding premiums at fairs competitive tests were required, and if in the great majority of those tests the Percherons came off victorious, it would argue that the Percheron formation was best for the draft horse. If the Shires were victorious it would indicate that that type was preferable to with the Clydes or Belgians. But the method of judging heavy horses at present is no well indication of the superiority of the breeds, nor does it in fact prove one horse superior to another for all practical purposes.—Cor. Breeder's Gazette.

Points of Interest.

Western range cattle are shipped to the Chicago market from about mid-summer up to Nov. 1, when the trade slows. A few of Chicago cattle commission merchants advise farmers and stock raisers in Illinois and that vicinity to keep their grass and corn fed cattle until after Nov. 1, when they will get better prices for them, after the range cattle have ceased to come in.

Feed and your farm products on the farm, to be sure, but be sure also that you feed them to animals that will return a profit to you.

Of the two hackney horse societies of America the one to the west is called the American Hackney Stud Book association, and that in the east the American Hackney Horse society.

ANTH. HOBRICHER, a well known manufacturer of boots and shoes at 320 Nolan Street, San Antonio, Texas, will not soon forget his experience with an attack of the croups, which he relates as follows: "I was taken with a violent cramp in the stomach, which I believe would have caused my death, had it not been for the prompt use of Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhoea Remedy. The first dose did me so much good that I followed it up in 20 minutes with the second dose, and before the Doctor could get to where I was, I did not need him. This remedy shall always be one of the medicines of my family." For sale by Z. C. M. I. Drug Dept. 6 8

The Great Benefit

Which people in run down state of health derive from Hood's Sarsaparilla conclusively proves that this medicine "makes the weak strong." It does not act like a stimulant, imparting fictitious strength, but Hood's Sarsaparilla builds up in a perfectly natural way all the weakest parts, purifies the blood, and assists to healthy action those important organs, the kidneys and liver. 3

THE CRY OF MILLIONS

OH, MY BACK!

STOP IT NOW, SOON IT WILL BE TOO LATE.

I have been troubled many years with disease of the kidneys and have tried many different remedies and have sought aid from different physicians without relief. About the 17th of April I was suffering from a very severe attack. Did nothing presented me to stick a needle (as I was sore bed). When I had down it was almost impossible for me to get up alone, or to get up for crutches. When I had purchased one of Hooper's with the OREGON KIDNEY TEA, in my hotel, I immediately commenced using the tea. It had an almost miraculous effect, and in the adjustment of all the pains at the hotel, in a few days, I am happy to state, that was a new man. I would recommend the tea to all afflicted as I have been.
