FINDINGS OF FACT

And Conclusions of Law in the Case of Solomon Karpen et al. vs. Earls Furniture Company.

John A. Marshall, as referee, has filed his findings of fact and conclusions of Law in the case of Solomon Karpen et al. vs. the Earls Furniture & Carpet company et al. The suit was brought asking that the confession of judgment made by the defendant company to defendants J. A. Earls and John T. Ballard be adjudged null and void on the grounds that it was for the purpose of defrauding other creditors. The confession of judgment was for $48,200.60, which was many thousands of dollars above the worth of the stock in the defendant company's store. After a lengthy review of the case Mr. Marshall finds as follows:

That the plaintiffs' complaint be dismissed, and that the receiver pay over the moneys in his hands, after deducting therefrom the costs of the receivership, to the defendants Ballard and Earls respectively, to apply upon the judgments obtained by them against the company. Also that the said defendants, Ballard and Earls, shall recover the costs of this action from the plaintiffs, including the compensation of the receiver and costs of his receivership, after deducting therefrom such a sum as he would be entitled to recover for percentage as assignee for creditors of the moneys received by him in the sale of the property and other expenses.

ANTI-BONDING MOVEMENT.

The Central Democratic Club Opposes Bonding the County for $300,000.

The Central Democratic club held an enthusiastic meeting at their quarters in the Wasatch block last night and passed the following anti-bonding resolution:

Resolved, That it is the sense of this meeting that as Democrats and taxpayers we do not endorse the bonding of this county for $300,000, as recommended by the county court, but that we would favor a proposition to bond the county for a sum sufficient to complete the jail, city and county building, according to the original plans and for no other purpose.

Resolved, That we invite all voters of the county to join with us in casting a ballot "Bonds, no."

Bound Over.

The hearing of C. G. Brown, who is charged by Alice J. Taylor with having obtained $200 from her by false pretenses, waived preliminary hearing yesterday afternoon, and the case will go direct to the grand jury. His bond was fixed at $600. The false pretenses complained of came out of the alleged fact that Brown sold the complaining witness a land relinquishment and agreed to furnish her with water when she had proved up on the land when he had no water right.

FAST TRAINS NOT DANGEROUS.

THEY MAY BE SAFER THAN ANY OTHER, WITH PROPER CONSTRUCTION AND EQUIPMENT.

In the current number of the Engineering Magazine appears an article on "Increasing the Speed of Railways," by William Barnet Le Van, an eminent mechanical engineer. Some considerations connected with the subject are thus stated by him:

It may be said that in constantly demanding more rapid facilities of travel people invite a corresponding increase of the rate of danger to be encountered; but it is very doubtful if this proposition can be maintained. The facts go to prove, rather, that faster trains develop greater care on the part of the railroad people, and that there is really little, if any, more liability to accidents on such account. As a rule, the "Wild Irishman" and "Flying Dutchman" and "Cannon Ball" trains are run on schedules so arranged as to insure the utmost degree of safety, so far as all ordinary contingencies are concerned. Their success depends largely upon this point, and the railroad companies well understand that they cannot afford to take any available risk. The demand for increased speed carries with it the demand for increased prudence. Fast trains must have men of superior skill and caution to operate them; they must have good permanent way to move upon; and they must be provided with all known appliances for security and comfort. The general effect, in short, is to improve the railroad system in all respects, and to eliminate from it the carelessness and incompetency that would be a source of fixed peril under the slowest of time schedules. There must always be more or less danger on a railroad train, but it is by no means sure that anything is gained in the way of safety by taking a train which runs twenty miles an hour instead of one which goes five times as rapidly.

On all English railways a high rate of speed is maintained, and this, when kept at a regular rate, unchanged by numerous stops, is found to be safer than the lower rate, stopping often and subjecting machinery to economies and jerks in starting and stopping, which disorder parts of the train more than is done by the uniform velocity of high speed. The writer has covered the space of five miles at the rate of seventy miles an hour, and, notwithstanding this extraordinary speed, there was an entire absence of oscillation. So far as his position of the cars was concerned, it was impossible for the passengers to tell whether they were going at the rate of seventy miles an hour or twenty. The oscillation of fast trains, therefore, is a thing to be carefully noted and encouraged, and the railroad authorities are wise to make them so far as they can within reasonable limits of forethought and precaution.
