The Grand Jury at Provo Make Their Final Report.

ANOTHER SHOCKING BEAR STORY

Annual Report of The Governor of New Mexico—Fatal Family Feud in Wyoming.

The trial of the Ohio Hill murder case is still going on at Provo and will probably not finish before Monday or Tuesday in next week.

Henry Lauchell, a prominent rancheman of Sublette county, Wyoming, attempted by hanging himself a few days ago. There is doubt as to the cause of the act.

Sam High, a well known Chinese laundryman, left Salt Lake on Friday in China. He took with him $14,000 in money, the result of many years' labor in China.

United States Attorney Wood, of Salt Lake City, Utah, started yesterday for San Francisco. During the week following he will represent the government in the matter of the application of the Court of Alien Orders, for entrance to the jail in Sonoma county, for writs of habeas corpus. The motions will be argued in the superior court.

Articles of incorporation of the Starr Irrigation company are filed with the county clerk at Provo. The object of the company is to draw the waters of Current creek at the head of Goshen canyon, making a reservoir of the natural basin of the jail west of Rock lake, which covers an area of 1000 acres, and the stored water will irrigate 10,000 of Goshen valley.

A mountain of zinc ore has been discovered about two miles from Hillsboro, New Mexico. The principal outcrop appears in a hill seventy-five feet high by 150 feet long and 200 feet wide. The hill is composed entirely of the ore and it is not much to say there are thousands of tons in sight. Nearly all this hill is one mass of iron, in extensive patches in the surrounding hills and flats. The formation is a volcanic lime surrounded by quartzite and traversed by porphyry dykes, the ore being more abundant near to the porphyry.

The body of Philip Neller was found in his cabin on Gray Bull river, Wyoming, last week. There were two notes pinned to his bunk. Both were to his friend Jacob. One read: "You will find me down the river after bear." In the other he said: "I am badly hurt. I ought to go to Frannie, but I cannot stand it. O, how I bleed! I am injured internally. I am suffering. If I had not gone down after supper to kill that bear I would have been all right. I must lay down. Oh, mercy." An arm and shoulder were broken and he had wasted to a skeleton before dying. His gun and hat were found lying where he had fought the bear, and bear tracks were found.

A family feud which has existed for a long time in the Frost family of Stockings, on Beaver creek, in the eastern part of Western county, Wyoming, has culminated in the shooting of Hank Frost by his nephew, Jesse Frost. A short time ago Jesse's horses disappeared from his ranch, and he came and were found a day or two afterwards shot through the head. Hank Frost was arrested on the charge of killing the horses and was taken to Newcastle by Sheriff Stack. He demanded an immediate examination, and as he came out of the building occupied by the county officers, Jesse stepped quietly up behind him and, before any one was aware of what he was doing, shot his uncle in the back of the head with a 45-calibre revolver, the ball passing through the head and lodging near the frontal bone. Another shot was then fired by someone, supposed to be Hank's brother Jack, at Jesse, which just grazed his fingers, causing him to drop his gun. Before more shooting could be done the officers had secured Jesse and Jack and placed them in jail. There is no hope of the recovery of the man who was shot.

Bradford Prince, the governor of the territory of New Mexico, in his annual report to the secretary of the interior, highly commends the action of Congress in creating a court of private land claims, but says that the law as to small holdings is faulty and should be speedily amended. Of the thousands of these small holdings in the territory not one in a hundred, the governor says, can be confirmed under the present law. The material indebtedness on March 4, 1891, aggregated $64,000, which is a slight decrease from the year previous. During the year 68,[illegible] acres of the public lands have been disposed of. Of this number 155,[illegible] acres were railroad sections, 200,150 homestead entries, and 26,331 desert land entries. There are now open to public settlement in the Santa Fe district nearly 17,000,000 acres. Rapid progress is being made in irrigation and several large companies have been incorporated during the year. There has also been a very valuable and important improvement in agriculture and horticulture. The advance during the year, the governor says, has been marvelous. The progress of the public during the last year has been extremely gratifying, and has exceeded the most sanguine hopes. The governor, in closing his report, again urges the early admission of New Mexico into the Union of States.

The Idaho State Board of Pardons has received Hatten applications for pardons for convicts now undergoing various terms of imprisonment. Among them is that of Frank Armstrong, sent up from Alturas county in 1888 for life, having been convicted of the murder of Paul Kinkert, a well known sheepman.

Will Johnson and Nate Young (two more petitioners) are the men who, in 1889, attempted to defraud the Pacific Express company of $10,000, in a bunkoing manner. They had a worthless package in charge of the company's Casula county office, intime a the agent that it contained $10,000, which they wished shipped to a distant point, and obtained a receipt for it. Then they "held up" the stage which was carrying the boxes parcel to the railway, intending to compel the company, by legal means, to make good the fictitious value of their consignment. But the express agent was just as smart as they were. He suspected crooked work, examined the parcel before he sent it out and discovered its true character. The arrest and conviction of the two rascals speedily followed. It is stated upon excellent authority that Johnson has filled nine men and Young three. It is also claimed that they have threatened to murder the officers and others who were instrumental in sending them were they now are and were they belong.

At Provo yesterday the grand jury presented their final report as follows: We have been in session seventeen days, fourteen of which have been upon United States cases and three upon Territorial, and have examined into eighty-four cases, forty-two are under the laws of the United States, and forty-two under the laws of the Territory of Utah. We have found thirty indictments and ignored twelve cases under the laws of the United States and we have found forty-five indictments and ignored nine under the laws of the Territory of Utah, and have also examined cases which we could not satisfactorily dispose into for the lack of material witnesses, which we recommend to the consideration of your next grand jury. They are against the following defendants: Fred Cook, Harry Brooks, J. T. Johnson, Ed. Burns. We have further examined into the Provo city and county jails and find them both in good and sanitary condition, but would recommend for the security of prisoners and protection of the jailer that the windows of the county jail be provided with suitable wire and iron shutters. We have also visited the Territorial Insane Asylum and found the building, so far as completed, in an excellent condition, and also the provisions for the health and comfort of the inmates satisfactory. We have visited upon recommendation some of the public school buildings of the city and found them in our judgment in good condition. We desire to call the attention of the sanitary officers of this city to the filthy and unhealthful condition of the rear portions of the business blocks on Center street. We also wish to call the attention of the Utah county officers to the dangerous condition of the Spring bridge.
