The Chicago Conflagration.

CHICAGO, 9, evening.—A great many persons jumped into the river to escape the flames, but only to drown. Hundreds of animals perished in the stables and streets. It is estimated a hundred thousand people are homeless, a large proportion of whom are destitute of everything. Cooked food is in great demand. All surrounding towns will be requested to forward provisions and clothing, for the hungry and nearly naked women and children, as early as possible. Nearly every city and town east of here has responded to this demand; and it is hoped the west will not be backward.

Later.—It is now believed the spread of the fire southward is stayed at Harrison street, but on the north side it still rages, and that entire division of the city seems to have been utterly destroyed. It is feared that the west side of the north branch of the river will also be burned. The inhabitants in the section nearest the river are already moving further away.

Later.—It is now ascertained that the water works are not destroyed, and there is great joy.

PACIFIC COAST DISPATCHES.

Excited Over the Chicago Fire.

SAN FRANCISCO, 9.—John Malading fell from a trapeze last night at the Bella Union and was seriously injured.

The remains of a short, stout, plain dressed man, with the skull broken and one eye knocked out, were found in the bay at Hunter's Point last night. Supposed to be a case of murder. The remains are not identified.

The excitement over the Chicago news is intense in San Francisco today, swamping everything else. Reports that the disaster has been accompanied by the loss of 9,000 lives, said to have come in a private dispatch, are circulated freely, but believed to be greatly exaggerated. Such a loss of life is considered by those acquainted with Chicago to be impossible under the circumstances.

State Senator Romualdo Pacheco having been elected lieutenant governor, has sent in his resignation as senator to lieutenant governor Holden.

The weather is very dry and warm, and all indications of rain have disappeared.

There is any amount of speculation here with regard to the effect of the Chicago fire upon San Francisco. Three of four of our local insurance companies are in very heavily. Rumor says that one or more have risks there beyond their total capital. Nothing, however, is positively known outside of the companies' offices.

An alarm of fire from box 39, corner of Spear and Harrison Streets, has just sounded. The locality is very combustible, lumber yards and planing mills abounding there, and the excitement about the great fire in Chicago causes an unusual rush towards that part of the city. There is no light to indicate an extensive fire.

VALLEJO, 9.—The corner stone of the Odd Fellows hall, at this place, was laid to-day with appropriate ceremonies.

SALEM, Oregon, 9.—The Odd Fair which opened here to-day, is largely attended. The weather is delightful. Stock for exhibition has been arriving all day, and is the largest and finest display ever made in this State. The pavilion is well filled. Several blooded horses are here training, and a lively time is anticipated.

CARSON, Nev., 9.—The report from Aurora, two or three days since, stating that Jones had been found dead, and that Cockerell and Burk had been killed by the officer, is untrue. Cockerell and Burke were taken by surprise and captured in Round Valley four days ago. They are now at Wellington station, well guarded by four or five officers, and are expected here to-morrow. Jones is still at large and is closely pursued by the sheriff of Esmeralda County. Roberts is in Round Valley, and his captors refuse to give him up.

BOYS.

Do the young men of Salt Lake City realize the true state of affairs that has been thrust upon them within the past twelve months? When they visit drinking saloons and places of evil resort, do they realize what they are doing? I judge not. Great credit is due for the manly stand that a majority of them have taken in refusing to degrade and debase themselves by associating with the filth to be found in certain localities on Temple street. Educated to look at such things in the right light, they do not forget the early training they have received, but there are few who have forgotten the wholesome advice and counsels they have received in the past, and, dazzled by the glitter and foam of the outside surface, they are gradually and in some instances rapidly sinking in that slough that has swallowed up so many before them. Do they realize what they are doing? Let me, Mr. Editor, say a word as to what their friends think they are doing. They are ruining themselves, physically and spiritually, degrading the man and cultivating the brute. They are bringing disgrace to heretofore happy hearthstones. They are ruining their prospects for the future. They are entailing disgrace upon the name they bear. They are forfeiting all right to the blessings pronounced upon their heads. They are placing themselves under direct condemnation, for a "drunkard has no part in the Kingdom of Heaven." They are bringing to naught the fond anticipations of friends and relatives. They are walking in the broad highway that leadeth down to destruction. They are placing themselves in the power of the demon of intemperance. They are stepping into the trap laid by the enemies of the kingdom of God. They are associating with men who would not hesitate to destroy the lives of the leaders of the people. They are hobnobbing with men who to-day would glory in placing the brand of bastardy upon the brow of more than one half the youth of Utah. They are mingling in social converse with men who would use all the power they possess, to pass laws that would enable the world to point the finger of scorn at our mothers and deprive them of the rights that justly belong to them. They are unwittingly strengthening the hands of the men in our midst, who would, if they dare, repeat the tragedy of Haun's mill, who would drive us homeless, houseless and friendless forth, to breast the bitter blasts of the biting storm; who would render desolate our gardens and our vineyards, who would destroy the last vestige of civil and religious liberty off the face of the earth. They are doing much to encourage the oily tongued Judas Iscariots, in the shape of apostates, in our midst. They are helping to carry out the plan of the smooth faced, hypocritical representatives of the law and the pulpit, who have introduced saloons, gambling hells and brothels, "modern civilization," so called, into our midst. And should this thing continue, how long will it be before the pitiful picture will be presented on our streets, that can be seen elsewhere—the painted, bedizzened woman of the town, plying her vocation? How long will it be before some one's daughter, some one's sister, the victim of the lust of these fiends in human shape, will be wandering to and fro, thrown aside, as no longer of any use, kicked and cuffed as would be the meanest cur in a by place, scowled at and frowned at by these sanctimonious regenerators, left to die in the street and be buried in the potter's field, while the good, so very good, people would hold aside their mantles for fear of contamination from even the rough cart that carried the poor wasted form of a once loved sister or daughter to an untimely grave?

Young man, you who have contracted the habit of visiting saloons and billiard halls, you are helping to bring this about. Each visit you make is one more pound in the scale of unrighteousness, and one more person added to the number of those now being used by the infamously corrupt judiciary, in their efforts to destroy the men who made our mountain home what it is.

A true and faithful elder in Israel is God's noblest work. Thing you, young man, that the course you are pursuing will not bring its own reward? As ye sow, so shall ye reap, and if you sow to the wind, the whirlwind will be your portion when harvest time comes. Time rolls by rapidly, and the young man of to-day is the old man of to-morrow; the buoyant, hopeful heart of to-day may be represented by the broken, emaciated form of a driveling inebriate to-morrow, comparatively speaking.

You who have been born and raised in the bonds of the covenant, have no time to devote to such purposes. Your lives should be devoted to another cause, infinitely higher, grander, and holier, than endeavoring to ape the manners of the would-be genteel society thrown into our midst. No man was ever made a drunkard in one day, but rather by slow degrees. You are on the self same road that thousands have gone before. In time it "stingeth like an adder and biteth like a serpent."
