A SERIOUS ACCUSATION.

Nick Trewek, of this City, Charged With Illegally Appropriating Money.

The following sensational special to the Herald, from New York, under date of the 15th inst., has created considerable excitement among the mining men of this city:

"A Herald cable from London says American promoters here are discussing the sensational statements made Friday at the annual meeting of the Dickens-Custer mine in Idaho. A proposition was made there to purchase another mine called the Lucky Boy, which is located in the vicinity of the Dickens-Custer. This led a shareholder named Dossedorf, who came from Salt Lake City, to charge Nicholas Trewek, the former general manager of the Dickens-Custer, who is now owner of the Lucky Boy, with appropriating money belonging to the Dickens-Custer. Also with falsifying accounts and with having arranged with J. R. Hagin to put on an additional sum of $10,000 to the purchase price of the Dickens-Custer mine. Wilson, Dossedorf says, went into the pocket of Trewek. Also with having made the company pay him $7,000 for supplies already included in the purchase money of the property. Dossedorf put in affidavits from employes of the mine to substantiate his statement, and asked the other shareholders for their authority to return to Salt Lake City to make Trewek's charges. Trewek's friends urge that he was a man of integrity and at the present time vice-president of the Salt Lake City Stock Exchange. The shareholders have decided to give him a chance to explain Dossedorf's charges before taking action."

Mr. Trewek is now in the east but is expected home shortly.

E. S. RICHARDSON,
MRS. L. E. HOLMES,

A Rabbit Killer.

Editor Deseret News.

Permit me, for the benefit of each of your readers, in Utah or elsewhere, who may be overrun with rabbits, to call their attention to the following article, which I take from that excellent periodical the American Agriculturist, vol. 1., number 10, Oct. '91, page 368, second column:

"A fortunate turn (alone in Kent, England, has attained to considerable skill in the very difficult business of catching wild rabbits. These animals are similar to the dirty and wasteful and are particularly fond of killing orchids."

Perhaps these little animals would also be useful in keeping the gophers and squirrels, which are such a nuisance to Wyoming farmers. But, question: Does the strat do mischief to a poultry yard?

Respectfully, PUEBLO (Iron County, Utah Co., Wyoming. Oct. 14, 1891.
