A SMART BOY.

A Clever Method of Catching Gases in an Artful Practice of the Country.

The Southern Pacific overland train was rumbling along between Colton and Pomona. A party of half a dozen commercial drummers in the smoking car were telling yarns and interesting the other travelers. "I want to tell you a little story about my boy out party near unto the desert in San Bernardino county," said a sunburned rancher who sat near and had been hearing the drummers tell some pretty tall stories. The old man removed a pipe from his mouth and began:

"My boy is party smart in his way, leastwise tell you, and none of 'em gets the best of him. Tother day he rigged up a kite. It was the biggest kite I'd ever set eyes on. It was about six feet wide an' twice as long, an on the top of it my boy placed a few green branches, which he'd cut from an oakwood tree. 'What's them fur?' I inquired. 'Never you mind, dad,' says he. 'I know what I'm about.' And, by gosh, he did. He flew that kite up in the air an stood watchin it for a long time, when I says to him, 'You'd better pull that thing down now an get to your work.' 'Leeme alone, dad,' he replied. 'I'll git thar yet.'

"And, by gosh, he did. The next time I took a look at him he was a-hauln in on the kite line, with a smile on his face as big as a furrer. When the kite come down near the ground I saw what he was a-smilin at, and it was enough to make a body smile too. Any you fellers want to guess what that was on that kite?"

None of the drummers wanted to guess and the old man went on with his story:

"Well, sir, a-settin on the top o' that kite was eleven of the purtiest wild geese yo ever saw. Yes, sir, eleven on 'em. You see, the goose was flyin north perty thick, and my boy got up this scheme to catch 'em. There ain't many trees out our way, an after a fat goose has been flyin perty steady all day he gits kind o' tiredlike an looks for a place to set down an rest. That's just what my boy was countin on when he built that kite.

"By offerin the goose a place to stop an rest, an by smearin the top o' the kite with tar, so their feet would stick so fast they couldn't git away, he did the business. But it was fun pullin them geese in. Jes as fast as we could send the kite up and pull her down again we got from ten to a dozen geese, an in four days we captured six carloads, an I'm taking them to Los Angeles to sell. None o' you smart story tellin fellers don't happen to know what wild goose is worth now in the Los Angeles market, do you?"—Pomona Progress.

HOW A FIRE IS FOUGHT.

Interesting Details About the Location of Engines, Lines of Hose, Etc.

Chief Swenie is a fine fighting strategist. When his forming for an villas battle he employs all the arts of war to gain the victory. Sometimes he begins the battle by massing his forces at one point and charging directly upon the enemy. Again he throws out a skirmish line or shifts his position some to take his opponent upon the flank. If necessary he calls up his reserves and at times is in constant communication with his chiefs of battalions and captains of companies.

There is this difference, however, between fighting fire and fighting armies. Commanders of opposing armies are fully informed of each other's movements days before the meeting and draw up their plans of battle accordingly. Not so with Chief Swenie. Fires advance under cover, every move hid from view, until they are ready for the fight, then comes the burst of smoke, the volley of flame and the chief is suddenly called upon to give battle.

Plan and execution with him must be simultaneous, he must think and act while thinking. Yet he has his plan of battle complete in every detail, though it is made up and placed on paper after the battle has been fought.

The captain of every engine company makes a report of the fire—as far as his company is concerned—to his chief of battalion, to be forwarded to Chief Swenie. That report gives the time the alarm was received, the fireplug to which the engine was connected, the direction and the lead of the line of hose and any changes in the position of the engine, together with other information, such as amount of water pressure secured, accidents, incidents etc. All these data are handed an expert draftsman, who proceeds to draw an accurate plan of the fire.

He first obtains from the map department an authentic plan of the locality, giving the streets, alleys, courts, building or buildings affected by the flames, whether destroyed or merely roasted, and adjacent buildings. The water department furnishes maps showing location of fireplugs and cisterns and size of water pipe, mains or branches in the streets. If necessary the scene of the fire is visited and personal investigation gives him still further information.

With all this material the plan of battle is depicted. Every piece of apparatus which had anything to do with the fire is located, and the lines of hose leading to the fire are shown by lines reaching from the engine to the place occupied by the pipemen. Where the line runs through a building the door to which the lead was carried and from which the stream was thrown is properly designated.—Chicago News.

Many Watches Lost.

While strolling the beach at Asbury Park a New York newspaper man found a small gold watch half buried in the sand. A chain and charms were attached to the watch. The finder, upon returning to the city on the following day, caused an advertisement to be inserted in the "Found" column of his favorite newspaper. He described in his advertisement the locality where the watch was found. Within twenty-four hours from the time that the advertisement appeared in print the finder of the watch had five responses.

Strange to say, the writer of each letter claimed, in apparent sincerity, to have lost a gold watch in about the same locality, and on the day named, but not one of the five descriptions of the lost watch applied to the timepiece found by the newspaper writer. "It is curious that so many gold watches should have been lost in the same neighborhood and on the same day," mused that honest young man. "I wonder who found the others."—New York Times.

The Old Fashioned Corncob Pipe.

The old fashioned corncob pipe was not the slick and spun pipe of the factory, glistening with varnish and carefully smoothed with a file. The old time pipemaker chose a large and sound cob, as nearly as possible cylindrical in form, and with a small penknife shaved the outer surface down to a hard, smooth face. He then cut the bottom and top smooth, then considerably shortening the piece, carefully pulled out the hard, and a real, usable pipe. In a small hole near the bottom completed the pipe. So a pipe could be fashioned in a half hour, and it served its purpose admirably.—New York Sun.

Amusement and Profit.

We learn that when reports of the late Cyrus W. Field's financial embarrassment began to be circulated Mr. F. D. Arnold, of this city, communicated to Dr. Henry M. Field the willingness of certain western friends to provide his brother with the means to repair his shattered fortunes. The proffer gave the dying man great solace and gratification, but it was unnecessary.—Chicago News-Record.

The Loadstone of the Chinese.

The Chinese are reported to place their compasses on ice in front of them, in the form of sounds, the arrow always pointing toward the south, which is opposite to what modern scientists suppose the loadstone is position to point toward the north.—New York Sun.

Excitement at Gravesend Caused by the Arrival of a Hamburg Steamer.

AMERICAN STUDENTS IN BERLIN ORGANIZE.

Company Incorporated for Irrigation Purposes in Mexico and the United States.

By Telegraph to the News.

THE SCARE IN ENGLAND.

A Multiplicity of Assertions and Denials.

London, Aug. 29.—Dr. Whitmarsh sanitary officer at Gravesend, who inspected the steamer "Germania," which arrived from Hamburg on Thursday, three of whose passengers subsequently died from what was supposed to be Asiatic cholera, denies that the disease was the true Asiatic scourge as declared, and that it was merely cholerine. It is difficult in the multiplicity of assertions and denials to accurately determine the real truth of the matter. It is now decided that the sickness on the steamer "Louis," which arrived at Lyon on Friday with two suspicious cases, is not cholera, but acute diarrhoea.

There is excitement at Gravesend this morning caused by the arrival of a steamer from Hamburg on which a baby died yesterday. Investigation showed that the baby died of infantile diarrhoea and those on board were all well and allowed to land.

A cable from Berlin has received an order from a Hamburg firm for 28,000 gallons of disinfecting fluid, and 35,000 tins of disinfecting powder.

The steamer which has been in quarantine off Lihe owing to two deaths of Cholera is expected to arrive at Gravesend tonight with a large number of poor immigrants. There is much apprehension concerning the matter. Gravesend is only twenty miles from London and an outbreak of cholera there is much feared. The announcement is made this afternoon that the company which conveys most of the aliens to Gravesend had decided to cease the passenger traffic from Hamburg.

Admitted to the Hospitals.

Paris, 29.—Twenty persons suffering from cholaric disorders were admitted to the hospitals here yesterday.

American Students in Berlin.

Berlin, Aug. 29.—Harris Graham, an American physician who has had wide experience with cholera in Syria is organizing American medical students into a body to act as assistant nurses in the event of cholera becoming epidemic here. The authorities announce this morning that a number of persons arrived from Hamburg died here of Asiatic cholera.

Complaining Against the Authorities.

Southampton, Aug. 29.—Complaints are being made that the authorities are not taking adequate precautions against the introduction of cholera. Fishing smacks from Havre and other infected ports are allowed to enter the harbor without inspection.

Cholera in Brussels.

Brussels, Aug. 29.—Thirteen cholera patients were admitted to the hospital here. Five are certified to be Asiatic cholera. One died.

A Collision.

Brussels, Aug. 29.—A collision occurred this morning between Ostend and Antwerp trains. Two persons were killed and eighteen seriously hurt.

For Irrigating Purposes.

El Paso, Tex., Aug. 29.—A company has been incorporated under the laws of New Mexico for the purpose of putting in a big international dam across the Rio Grande for irrigating which in Mexico and the United States. Wm. Hamilton, of New York, is at the head of the project and the company is incorporated for a capital of $10,000,000. The dam will be built about five miles above El Paso in the mountain gate way. It will be 500 feet long of solid masonry from sill to cill, resting on a solid limestone foundation and will be seventy feet high. Col. Alexander Mills of the United States corps of engineers estimates the cost of the dam at $300,000. There will be two sluice gates on the Texas side, in the canyon and two of precisely the same size on the Mexican side.

Killed at a Dance.

Hancock, Ia., Aug. 29.—Three men were killed at Allen Brothers Mill last night in a fight at a dance, viz.: Maurice Miller and Bob and John Carter. Miller was on the floor with Ella Patterson when Bob Carter came up and said, "This is our set." She said "No" and Bob said, "You are a liar." Thereupon Miller knocked him down. Bob and John Carter fired shots at Miller, taking effect. Miller seized John; then Bob cut Miller in the back. Miller drew his knife and went to work on both. The fight lasted about five minutes, at the end of which Bob and John Carter were both dead. Miller died a few hours later. He was stabbed in the neck and twenty-four knife wounds and three bullet wounds were found.

It was Only Cholera Morbus.

New York, Aug. 29.—Anton Pulset, the Austrian from Hamburg, who yesterday was taken to the hospital suffering from indications of cholera, is all right today. It was only cholera morbus.

Cholera in Portugal.

New York, Aug. 29.—There was a hot time in the private office of Madison Square Garden here this morning when James J. Corbett and his manager, Wm. Brady, were bearing away with Dominick McCaffrey, the boxing instructor of the Manhattan Athletic club. A match in the contest of the nearly all of the Manhattan. Corbett became enraged at the remarks of the Manhattan man that he dislike in the most emphatic language and meaning more that it his wonderful antagonist did not stop talking, he would throw him out the window. Captain Vanderbeck of the Manhattan club was McCaffrey's adviser. The upshot of it all was that no match was arranged and the two athletic celebrities left much the hard between them. So far, the most agree on the result of the much-talked-of meeting, but for the details there is something at divergence. Mr. McCaffrey in a conversation never declared that Corbett had failed to make good his proposition to stop in four rounds for a purse of $1000. That was the original proposition, and the "Big Un" had simply backed down when he appeared ready to accept the proposition for a four round "go" on terms mentioned at the Manhattan Athletic Club House. He said that when Corbett offered to throw him out of the window, he told him that he had better try. That he was ready to defend himself. The story was a very creditable one and it looked for a time as if the four rounds might be fought out on the spot, postponing with the formality of a more and tedious preliminary negotiations. Corbett plays a somewhat different framework about the pointmeeting. He said he proposed to name the match in place where there was good money, either before any liberal athletic club or in the Manhattan Athletic Club house. He said he would agree to be ready to fight at any place in that state for a purse of $5000, but he wished to have the decision, in case he lived the best of the four rounds, decided by referee. Mr. McCaffrey in reply said that he would donate $5000 to McCaffrey in case he did not knock him out in four rounds, but asked that a purse of $1000 be made up for the man who got the better of the fight, whether knocked out or not. This McCaffrey would not listen to. He finished by flouting at the Manhattan athletic club and it should be a knock out in four rounds or nothing.

A Newspaper Man Assassinated.

Fresno, Cal., Aug. 29.—The body of Louis R. McWhorter, a well known citizen, was found dead this morning lying near the depot. Investigation showed that the baby died of infantile diarrhoea and those on board were all well and allowed to land.

Quarantine Detention Required.

Berlin, Aug. 29.—Cases of cholera are reported in Farrer near Magdeburg and Stringet, in Mecklenburg, in both places the disease was imported from Hamburg.

Things to Be Avoided.

Don't make a mirror door necessary by a heavy portiere. A small screen is usually better. Don't have a mirror door.

Don't put chandeliers in a room with a low ceiling. Side brackets are to be had in solid silver.

Don't have any more of any one kind of decoration in the house. Grille work and stained glass repeated in more than two places becomes commonplace.

Don't use a fine but inferior carpet to put into some room the furniture is not to be correspondingly based.

Don't have any more wood and furniture in a room covered with material which has a decided pattern.

Don't put into a room antiquity furniture which is not in keeping with the rest.—Ladies Home Journal.

A Mother Who Attended Fires.

Sometimes fame is gained after a family has been long in the public eye. Such was the case with Mrs. Elizabeth Fry, the prison reformer. She was the mother of twelve children, and it was not until she was enlarged in years that she was able to prove her domestic duties for her public efforts. Her diaries in her earlier years show that she was called during the time she was doing the Lord's work" by being so completely deserted in her family, but she waited with all the patience of the Quaker for the return of her children from the fire. Until then she wisely required her own duties to cease on affairs for the public good. Her motto was "one at a time" and called."—Ladies Home Journal.
