COMING OF THE TROOPS

The Heroes of Santiago Will Reach Here Tomorrow Afternoon.

WILL BE GIVEN A ROYAL RECEPTION.

Business Houses and Schools Will Close—Red Cross Ladies Will Spread Tables at Fort Douglas.

According to the latest information obtainable the Twenty-fourth United States infantry will reach this city between the hours of two and five o'clock tomorrow afternoon. Preparations on an extraordinary scale are being made to receive the heroes of Santiago. The people who charged up that terrible hill and who laid dysentery in the trenches before Santiago, and later who bore with fortitude the fever and the death of comrades, and who marched with such vehemence by the bullets of brothers at arms, will be welcomed home. All the leading merchants of the city have signified their intention of closing their places of business during the parade. Great throngs of people will meet the returning heroes at the Oregon Short Line depot and amid the cheers of thousands, the clash of bands and the roar of canons, they will be conducted to their old quarters at Fort Douglas.

The committee on decorations have requested that all citizens on the line of march will decorate their places of business and residence with flags and bunting. The committee has also decided to stretch banners across the streets at intervals along the line and will do all in their power to give the city a holiday appearance.

The Veterans of the Nauvoo Legion will man their three old cannon, and a salute of twenty-four guns will be fired—the number of guns to be fired to correspond with the number of the regiment. The old battery will be stationed a block north of the Brigham Young monument. All members of the association are requested to be present during the firing.

The following gentlemen have been chosen as a reception committee who will meet the troops and give them an official welcome: Acting Governor Hammond, Mayor Clark, Judge C. C. Goodwin, D. E. Burley, George M. Cannon, H. C. Hill, Dr. Allen Fowler, Maj. Gen. M. Kaiser, James McKinney, J. M. Cannon and Dr. R. W. Waters. A meeting of this committee will be held this evening when a program will be made out.

RED CROSS RECEPTION.

The ladies of the Red Cross society decided that they would give the boys a feast such as would make them forget the short rations and barrack that was given them in the trenches before Santiago. As this was out of the line of the usual work of the society, and owing to the fact that the organization is under the control of the war department, the president, Mrs. Cecilia J. Ritter, telegraphed for permission to Adjutant General Corbin late evening that other telegraphed a reply of which the following is the substance:

"You have permission to serve refreshments to the Twenty-fourth United States infantry upon their arrival at Salt Lake, but must report what is done under the direction of the officers at Fort Douglas."

The meeting of the Red Cross society was held at Mrs. Ritter's residence this morning, and it was decided that the tables be spread in the barracks at the fort. Tables will be spread there to accommodate from sixty to seventy-five men, each lot to occupy one department. The following ladies and their aids will look after a barrack:

Mrs. Anna Adams, Mrs. Pearson Wallace, Mrs. Alma Richardson, Mrs. J. W. Farrell, Mrs. Dewey Richards, Mrs. Rhodes, Mrs. J. L. Rawlins and Mrs. C. P. Brooks.

The purchasing committee are Mrs. J. W. Farrell, Mrs. J. E. Sandergot and Miss Eden Cobb.

The following committee was chosen to look after the decorations at the Fort: Mrs. Robert Roberts, Mrs. Angus Richardson and Mrs. Dewey Richards. It is the intention to decorate the various barracks with bunting and flowers. Mrs. Roberts asks the people of the city to contribute flowers and bunting to this end. All who are willing to lend this request are asked to bring their flowers and bunting to the residence of Mrs. Roberts, No. 264 east First South street.

Theodore Brebeck, who is grand marshal of the parade has announced his staff as follows: Assistant grand marshals, Major J. E. Jackson and John S. Dansler. Chief of aids, Col. George W. Dorsey. Aids—George A. Snow, A. B. Jones, H. G. Wilson, Fred Simons and Robert Houston. The exact position of the various military, official and social organizations in the parade has not yet been determined. Grand Marshal Brebeck gave out today that the parade would pass along the following streets in the order named: From the Oregon Short Line depot on South Temple to West Temple street, from thence south on West Temple street to Third South, East on Third South, to State street north on State street to Second South where the regiment will take the street cars for Fort Douglas.

This afternoon six of the boys of the Twenty-fourth came home ahead of the regiment. They were given large ovations some time ago and have been loitering on the road but will take part in the welcome Salt Lake will extend to their comrades.

WILL GIVE THE SCHOOLS A CHANCE.

The board of education and Superintendent Millspaugh propose that the children of the public schools shall be given an opportunity to witness the arrival and participate in the ovation to the returning heroes. When the regiment left here four months ago the schools numbered 15,000 pupils turned out to wish them God-speed on their journey to Cuba where they were to strike for the independence of a downtrodden, famine-stricken race. The demonstration given in their honor by the "little folks" as well as the school of larger growth is still fresh in the minds of all Salt Lakers. The object seems then given to the regiment goes also quite a good deal toward impressing their active and impressive minds were full of strange fancies and thrilling incidents of war. They believed that the men who carried the stars and stripes were invincible and that they would come home with victory perched upon their banners. Now that these are about to be realized before their very eyes in all its completeness and another lesson will be taught more lasting than the first.

When Dr. Millspaugh was spoken to today concerning the closing of the schools in anticipation of the victors' return he said that if the troops came in during the afternoon tomorrow which seemed were in motion that the people would probably be given a half holiday. He thinks the probabilities are that the schools will close at noon.

EISTEDDFOD CHANTS.

Today Dr. Parry goes himself up to the meeting of the Eisteddfod, which passed him going the city and, took him to Fort Douglas in a carriage. The doctor was delighted beyond measure at the picturesque beauty that presented itself to his gaze as he stood on the elevation overlooking the Eisteddfod, the beautiful city, and fertile and orchard-covered valley below. The doctor is impressed, as is every stranger, with the numerous attractions of Utah. He admires the rugged, majestic, everlasting mountains, the fertile valleys and the beautiful lakes. He is delighted and sad at their sallies grandeur challenging the respect and reverence of every beholder. The entertainment committee will escort him to Ogden tomorrow, where he will visit the Eisteddfod electric generating plants in the world. The author of the anthem will be the most beautiful view of the Alps, that the doctor will wonder why Americans go to Switzerland when such things when they have their right at their very door. The home is unparalleled magnificence. On Saturday the doctor will return to Salt Lake. He will spend Sunday quietly in the city and Monday will go on to Big Cottonwood and inspect the electric distributing plant.

Dr. Parry will meet with the Tabernacle choir this evening and conduct the organization through a couple of strong tunes. The choir will at the request of the doctor, sing "Ar Hyd y Nos" in honor of the Eisteddfod.

Secretary John Jones of the Cambrian association is confined to his home with an attack of the grippe. He is however, expected to be out again in the course of a day or two.

Mr. H. J. Thomas is in charge of Eisteddfod headquarters, which are neatly and conveniently fitted up one door south of the Coop Furniture company's place of business.

In the course of three or four days most of the Eisteddfod contestants will have arrived.

Dr. Parry is much concerned with the story of the Utah Pioneers and is endeavoring to ride on that important day. He intends to arrive, somewhere with Brigham Young's first corporate into the valley of the Great Salt Lake.

The work of the great Eisteddfod goes on with unabated vigor. It is a pleasant sight to see the Welshmen of Utah, of all ages, conditions or lack of intellect, committee or association effort, but it will be a matter of wonder all again—the greatest in fact of its kind.

The management has added certain celebrated athletes to its long list of good singers. They are Mrs. Emma Westwood of Denver, who will sing the Curse Echo song, and J. Gordon Jones of Denver.

Rev. Mr. A. Ellis of Denver will be the administrator of Welsh literature, and Judge M. M. Sylvester of Scranton, Pennsylvania, will act as master of ceremonies.

She suffered so much that she became but the shadow of herself. One day I happened to read a testimonial about Hood's sarsaparilla. It

I persuaded her to try this medicine. Before finishing the first bottle there was an improvement in her condition. She continued taking Hood's Sarsaparilla and her stomach was not so severe. A NEW TRIAL WANTED.

Oregon Short Line Asks Reversal of Lower Court Ruling.

PASSION AND PREJUDICE ARE ALLEGED

In Awarding Damages to Margaret Kennedy for Death of Her Husband in Railroad Wreck.

In the Supreme court today the Oregon Short Line Railroad company, defendant and appellants, through its attorney, Frank S. Wilson, appealed for a new trial in the case brought against it by the widow and children of Patrick Kennedy, who was killed in a wreck while a passenger on the company's line. The jury in the lower court returned a verdict in the sum of $5,000, but at the trial, in January last, a verdict was rendered in their favor for $8,000, and judgment entered thereon. A motion was then made by defendant for a new trial, and the court reminding that the judgment was excessive, intimated that a new trial should be granted, unless the plaintiffs chose to remit such portion of the verdict as would reduce the same to $5,000. This was agreed to and the defendant's motion was accordingly overruled.

The appellant now relies for a reversal principally upon the following grounds: Excessive damages, appearing to have been given under the influence of passion and prejudice and the sufficiency of the evidence to justify the verdict, and verdict and judgment being contrary to the law applicable to the facts.

The respondents were represented in court by David Evans, of the law firm of Hoyt, Evans and Hoyt, who argued the case at length and authorities. The argument made by Mr. Williams took on a fiery aspect at times, and Evans was handled without gloves. For a while it looked as if the altercation between the attorneys might raise the roof, or at all a something quite as serious. The argument court evidently enjoyed the controversy.

Before taking up the railroad case, the court ordered in the case of Salt Lake City against the State Board of Equalization, that defendants be allowed eight days in which to file briefs.

Judgment was also made and the cases submitted in the following:

Elizabeth Dougall, respondent, against S. H. Lynch, treasurer, appellant; and

G. H. Woolley, respondent, against Mutual Life company and John Kirkman, assignee, appellants.

Parsons vs. Charles Lamoreaux, the manager and superintendent of the Silver Mining company, came up once again today on by Judge Hiles this morning, and is being bitterly contested. Parsons is a stockholder in the company's mine at Ophir and Lamoreaux is the president and manager. The defendant is also alleged to have been in collusion with other stockholders to secure control of all the stock. Lamoreaux's salary was stated to be $1,000 a year, and witnesses were called to show that $1,000 would be a liberal amount for the position.

Hutchins and Tyler represent the plaintiff, and Marshall, Hoyle and Hampshire the defendant.

After a long recitation of witnesses, the court set October 6th for the hearing of arguments in the case.

Circular letters were sent to the writers of these complaints asking them to make their charges specific, and to state whether they spoke from personal knowledge or from hearsay report. "Fort Bridger, Wyo., Sept. 24, 1898.

"Dear Sir: Please see that the Salt Lake Tribune is stopped at Fort Bridger. I have taken it for years and I like it very well, but I can't get it now.
