IN A DILEMMA.

The County Court Finds Itself in a Mist of Doubt

OVER THE BOWMAN-OLSON AFFAIR.

The Investigation of the Charges Results in Nothing.—The Matter Left to the Attorneys.

What is known as the Bowman-Olson forgery case came on again at 2:30 yesterday afternoon at the County Court House, Judge Hatch presiding.

The first witness was C. E. Stinton, who stated that he thought Bowman's bond was accepted at a meeting of the county court on Saturday night, September 26, 1891.

W. C. Hall, city attorney, testified that the bond in the court had been made out by himself and had been written in his own office on the evening of September 26. Early on Monday morning he had delivered the bond to Bowman and not before.

"My recollection is," said Mr. Hall, "that Mr. Murphy and I looked over the original bond and did not approve of it, so I drew up this bond which is now in evidence. There were a number of signatures to the first bond, but I did not pay much attention to them, as my examination was as to the proper form of the body of the bond. These signatures, I think, purported to be genuine." On cross-examination by Mr. Cool he said that he had read the bond over in regard to its form and that it was not satisfactory.

"What you read was in the form of a bond?"

"Yes, so far as it went."

"You have examined the sureties on this present bond?"

"Not until after the examination began."

"Was Bowman's name on the bond when you witnessed it?"

"Yes."

Hine—"What did you do with the original bond?"

"I did with the parties that presented it. I have never seen it since. I only had it in my possession about three or twenty minutes."

Mr. Hall then said that he had read no conclusion concerning the bond's sufficiency before consulting with Mr. Murphy on the subject, and then they both agreed. As to the original bond he had no idea what its fate was, but wished that he did, as it might throw some light on this mysterious case.

"Can you recall any of the names of the sureties that were on the first bond?"

"I think that the names of Mr. Dyer and Mr. Potts were among them, but I am not positive."

"Did you recognize these as genuine signatures?"

"I could not say."

"Was the profit of this bond made to you as one that had been made by the sureties?"

"It was, I think, submitted as the bonds proposed to give."

"Any bond given by Bowman was submitted to you for approval, was it not?"

"That was not the bargain understood."

The Court—"Do you recollect if there was a witness to that bond, and if so, who it was?"

"I do not recollect."

J. F. Jack, city recorder, was called to testify to the proceedings of the council on September 25 and 28, at which time the Bowman bond was accepted and approved.

C. E. Stanton was again recalled for the purpose of identification and testified that he was clerk of the joint city and county committee when the bond was presented and accepted on September 28th.

County Attorney Murphy took the stand. He said that in order to get the circumstances of the mystery straight he would say that some days before the meeting of the county court on September 26 he saw in Hall's office what purported to be the bond of J. H. Bowman.

"My impression is," said Murphy, "that this was at the meeting of the joint committee at Hall's office. The bond was type-written and several signatures of sureties were on it. The grounds I now recollect upon which I objected to the bond, at least one, was that some of the sureties had signed as corporations or firms, the signatures having been made by the person as the firm. There may also have been some defect in the conditions. I recollect very clearly that September 26 was a Saturday and that Bowman, Hall and myself walked from here to Hall's office for the purpose of drawing up Bowman's bond in pursuance with the contract. The bond was approved by the county court on the night of September 28. Hall, Bowman and I talked at Hall's office of the form of the bond and agreed upon it, and I left Bowman and Hall together."

"What firms signed the bond, Mr. Murphy?" asked Attorney Hiles.

"One, I think, was the Sierra Nevada Lumber Company and another the Utah Stove and Hardware Company."

"Do you know by whom these firms' names were signed?"

"No."

"Independent of those names what others do you recollect?"

"None."

"Do you remember seeing either Dyer's or Park's names?"

"No, sir."

"Was there any writing on the bond?"

"My recollection is that it was all type-written."

"How were the signatures you saw made?"

"With pen and ink."

"How many signatures did you observe on the bond?"

"I would only give a rough guess and say about as many as on this bond."

"More than five?"

"Yes."

"More than ten?"

"Yes."

"Did Bowman express any regret at his bond failing to meet your approval?"

"Not that I know of. I don't think he was present."

"Was presented the bond to you?"

"Don't recollect."

"Was Bowman present?"

"I think not."

"What did you do with that bond?"

"I never had it in my possession."

"Did you make any memoranda of points of objection?"

"No, sir."

L. H. Farnsworth cashier of the Union National bank, at which W. S. Simkins keeps his account, was sworn to give testimony as regards the signature. He had been familiar with W. S. Simkins' signature for a number of years and swore to the best of his knowledge and belief that the signature was a forgery.

Mr. Cool—"You understand that this was a forged signature to the you came here did you not?"

"Yes."

"What is the great difference you notice between this and the ordinary signature?"

"Well, I suppose a man certainly ought to know how to spell his own name and write it, too. There is not the slightest resemblance between this and Mr. Simkins' ordinary signature save in the h and probably the S."

"Did you never see a man make a mistake in spelling his own name?"

"Not unless he was very ignorant."

"Do you recall such a case?"

"I do not."

W. S. Simkins then testified to the genuineness of his signature to a number of canceled checks. They were examined and the difference was found to be very great.

"IN A VERY PERPLEXING POSITION."

Mr. Murphy then suggested, as the court was making merely a formal examination, that Bowman be put upon the stand and questioned by his own attorneys, without cross-examination, so that something might be done to solve the great mystery confronting the court.

Attorney Cool refused on the ground that the court had no jurisdiction.

"Don't you admit, Mr. Cool," said Mr. Murphy, "that the court is in a very perplexing position, and that it would be but an act of justice to all concerned to have Mr. Bowman go upon the stand and elucidate the matter, so far as he can?"

"I take it," replied Mr. Cool, "that when we are brought where we can bind and be bound that we shall make a perfect defense. This court not having jurisdiction cannot expect us to make a defense here. It will take a week to do so."

Mr. Murphy—This court is willing to grant you any time that you may require in the matter.

Mr. Cool—"We are taking our own course."

Attorney Hiles said that he was perplexed over the mystery himself, but did not think it proper to put Bowman on the stand in view of his conclusions in criminal and civil way that were likely to arise.

Mayor Scott thought that what was going to be done ought to be done at once, in justice to all. If the case were going to another court it should be sent at once.

Judge Hatch agreed with Mayor Scott.

County Attorney Murphy said there were two courses open, to rescind the contract by discharging Bowman, and the other to apply to a court of equity for re-collation. So far as the grand jury was concerned it was merely to form an opinion to determine what position the city should adopt in future litigation.

"I am very sorry," said Mr. Murphy, "that counsel has seen fit to treat Mr. Bowman as a delinquent here. It has not appeared that any member of the court has formed an opinion as to the genuineness of these signatures. If Mr. Bowman has any means of assuring the court of their genuineness, he certainly ought to come forward and do so."

Judge Hatch said he thought the bond ought to be considered as valid pending the issue that were doubtful, as the other sureties were held.

Mayor Scott said that the city should be allowed to decide this matter for itself.

After a long talk it was decided to leave the matter in the attorneys to advise the court and council what was best to be done. And so the matter remains in status quo.

Oliver Goldsmith's famous Comedy at the Theatre.—Coming Attractions.

"She Stoops to Conquer," which has been pronounced the most delightful comedy of the eighteenth century—excepting perhaps "The School for Scandal"—was interpreted last night at the Theatre by the Stuart Robson company, in a way that would have delighted even the celebrated author, had he been permitted to witness the performance. Everything, from the opening scene to the old inn to the epilogue, gave evidence of that accuracy of conception and execution which can be obtained only through intelligent research guided by natural genius. In this piece, almost every member of the company acted with marked ability. Mr. Robson evidently put into "Tony Lumpkin" character all that Goldsmith intended to put there, and gave it, besides, a few modern touches, but this was so skillfully done that the author was hardly noticed as such. Mr. Woodward showed great ability in his role as "Hardcastle," and Mr. Elwood created much merriment by his funny rendition of muted "Young Marlowe," although at times he seemed to overdo it, thereby producing the impression that his entertainment was not altogether natural. Mrs. Robson played exceedingly well as "Mistress Hardcastle," and Miss Busby was a charming "Miss Neiville." Mrs. McKean rendered her role, "Mrs. Hardcastle," admirably.

The scenery was very striking and the costumes were imitations of the fashions prevailing a century ago.

Not the least enjoyable part of the performance was the epilogue, spoken by Mrs. Robson, Miss Busby and Mr. H. Jones. It was a fit conclusion to an altogether enjoyable performance.

Total Collapse of the Proceedings.—Lottie Miner Has to Pay $7.50 for Disturbing the Peace.

The final result in the investigation which has taken up several days in Commissioner Greenman's court has come rather sooner than had been anticipated. The prosecution failed to bring the charges home to the accused persons, and yesterday afternoon, about 4 o'clock, when both sides "rested," the commissioner held that there was nothing to warrant him in holding the three defendants, Hill, Miner and Edwards. They were consequently discharged from custody.

In yesterday's NEWS a lengthy report was given of the morning's proceedings, and when the court resumed the hearing at 2:30 p. m., the following additional testimony was forthcoming:

Joseph L. Bancroft said—In June last I kept a saloon on Franklin avenue. When I went to my saloon on the morning of June 4th, Dick Edwards, one of the defendants, was at work there.

Mr. Eichner—Did he give you a roll of money to take charge of for him?

Witness—No, sir.

Q.—Have you made a statement to the effect that at that time Dick Edwards did leave money with you?

A.—No.

Q.—Did you have an engagement to meet Lottie Miner at Nelson's road house?

A.—No.

Q.—Have you made any offer in money to clear these people?

A.—No.

Q.—Didn't you say that for $500 you could clear them?

A.—No.

Q.—And didn't you receive $200 from Lottie Miner and a note for the balance account?

A.—No.

Q.—Have you been drunk?

A.—Well, now you are getting personal. (Laughter.)

Attorney Glenn—Such a question is improper so near to election time.

W. L. Van Wyckle testified: I am connected with the marshal's office, and have had charge of Lottie Miner for some days past. So early I went with her to Nelson's road house at her own request, as she wanted to see Mr. Nelson.

"WE REST—AND SO DO WE."

The witness having admitted that Lottie Miner did not have a buggy on the night of June 4.

Mr. Eichner said—We rest.

Attorney Glenn—So do we.

Mr. Eichner—We submit it without argument.

Mr. Glenn—So do we.

SET AT LIBERTY.

The Commissioner in giving his decision said: While the community knows that this man lost his life by foul means, and while the evidence, of some parts of it, shows that the defendants might have been connected with the crime, I do not think there is anything in the case to justify me in holding either of the defendants to the grand jury. No one would be more pleased to see this mystery solved than myself, but what testimony there is is purely circumstantial. There was but one eye witness, and she was not put on the stand. What she might have testified to, I do not know, but as the case stands, I feel it my duty to discharge the defendants.

The defendants seemed to be highly gratified at the termination of this case, and soon went their way rejoicing. The men of their counsel fairly beamed with smiles. The defendants were warmly congratulated by their friends on their release.

LOTTIE MINER AGAIN.

Subsequent to the acquittal of the accused, Lottie Miner was being driven along Third South st., when she suddenly came upon Deputy City Marshal Frank Glenn—one of the principal witnesses for the prosecution. He's wish was soon to, and she started in to abuse the officer right and left, stopping the carriage in which she was riding for that special purpose. It was more than the city marshal could stand, and he went before Commissioner Greenman, stated his grievance and swore to a complaint charging "Miss Lottie" with a breach of the public peace. A speedy arrest followed, and once more she faced the commissioner. A plea of guilty was entered, and then came the sad blow—the payment of the costs $7.50, the commissioner, in his clemency, declining not to impose a fine. Lottie complied with the court's order and departed.
