Mr. John Clark, of Silverton, Colo., is the inventor of a new process for the treatment of silver ore.

Robert Taylor, the sheep traveler, is now in Abbott, Nebraska, feeding 2,000 head of sheep which he shipped there from Pavilion, without the loss of one head, over the Union Pacific railroad.

Republican papers have been issued by Governor Willey of Idaho, for F. G. Jerome, who is now supposed to be in California. Jerome is wanted in Nez Perce county for larceny. Deputy Sheriff McFadden, of that county, has been dispatched to California in search of the larger.

At Aspen, Colorado, it is reported diphtheria has become prevalent to an alarming extent. So far about fifty cases have been reported. The death rate is also large. On account of the epidemic all the public schools of the city have been closed for two weeks. A number of cases of scarlet fever are also reported.

A deal has been consummated in Tuscarora, Idaho, whereby the Mollie, Dark Horse and Silver Bell mines at Mineral, owned by the Mollie Mining company have been bonded for $100,000 to Mr. W. Darlington, acting for a company of Colorado capitalists. These mines are the most valuable in the Mineral district.

At Douglas, while crossing the tracks at Rock springs, Wyoming, on his way home the other evening, about six o'clock, was knocked down by some million and robbed of five gold watches and $1,300, all the money he had in his pockets. He lay senseless until two hours before he recovered sufficiently to tell what had happened. He was cut on the forehead and bruised about the face.

A few nights ago officers made a successful raid on three lottery games in Chinatown, Los Angeles, Cal., capturing the entire outfits. In each place the principal owners of the concerns, known as the Con Chong Ti, Long Lee and Hong Lee. Two representatives of each of the lottery companies were brought to the station, where they deposited $100 apiece bail for their appearance.

The other night two footpads attacked Mike Conley, employed on the Mountain mines at Aspen, Col., and robbed him of $40. He was pretty roughly handled but managed to notify the sheriff within a short time after the occurrence. The sheriff and deputy headed the surgeon, the Grande train, and captured the pair at Woody station. They were brought to Aspen and placed in the county jail under the charge of U. S. Fisher and Charles Ashton.

There was an exciting scene at the Westside school building yesterday, says the Helena, (Mont.,) Daily Journal. During recess in one of the rooms, a white boy, thirteen years old, slender, a colored youth in the same with a penknife. The latter boy, who is known as "Snow-ball" among his associates, shook his assailant before school and this was the white's youth's excuse for clothing him with the knife. The wound inflicted was not serious, but there was naturally quite a commotion among the scholars. The young youth first licked "Snow-ball," taking the advantage of the fact that the teacher happened to be in an adjoining anteroom at the time. The white boy is a classic truant and has given his teachers a great deal of trouble. He runs away from school and some times causes others to run away with him. It is said that he has been reading dime novels, although his intimates deny this. He has a widowed mother who does her best and is much grieved over his waywardness.

At Mineral, Washington county, Idaho, a day or two ago, Charley Gudlow shot and killed a man named Slocum. The men were both prospected miners, well known in Mineral. Gudlow and Slocum had been on the best of terms for months prior to the shooting. Slocum borrowed a horse from Gudlow. The latter, however, desiring to use the animal, took it away from him. This greatly incensed Slocum, who, being drunk, proceeded to call to Gudlow some hard names. Friends interfered before any blows were struck, and the two men separated, going in opposite directions. A short time after the same day they met again in front of Hill's saloon. The quarrel was renewed and more hard names were called on both sides. Slocum's abusive language, emphasized by the jeers of the crowd, drove Gudlow to desperation. He pulled a gun and fired deliberately at Slocum, the ball striking the latter in the abdomen and passing completely through his body. Slocum breathed his last a few minutes after the shot was fired. The murderer is in custody, and threats of lynching are heard.

Less than a year ago Montana exchanges gave an account of a lucky bonanza find made by a printer on the Pacific coast. They have lately again favored considerable space descriptive of his marvelous good fortune, and he wealth is now counted in five figures, that a million dollars made in nine months on an investment of $100 is a story that sounds like a Munchausen tale, and yet is a simple story that is borne out by facts. Colonel A. N. Money, a well known newspaper man, is the man who has wrought the change of fortune to the extent and manner above stated. About nine months ago Colonel Money took hold of a group of five prospect holes a short distance from Salmon, Idaho. All the money he had to invest, according to his own statement made to a correspondent, was one hundred dollars. All he expected to do was to represent the claim for a year or so in order to ascertain what there was in them. He went to work slowly and cautiously, not having money to hire many men who were willing to wait for their pay. It was not long till he discovered that he had struck into one of the richest finds in that silver belt. Three of the prospects showed extraordinary richness of free milling silver ore. They are known to fame and fortune as the Cœur d'Alene Nellie, the Mineral Point and the Emma. A stock company was organized, the mines were bonded for large amounts and two of them were subsequently sold for $250,000 each over and above the bonds, nevertheless. The others were sold to eastern capitalists for good sums, and Colonel Money, who had not had more than his weekly salary from some newspaper at any one time in ten years, was fairly in it. He cleared over $500,000 in the various deals, and is now the general manager of the Bee mines at a salary of $25 a day. Now he wears fine clothes and dines at the club, instead of taking a free lunch, when he goes to Seattle. The ore from all those mines yields from $70 to $70 per ton net. During the past three weeks there was shipped from the Nellie not less than 400 tons of $70 ore. A railroad has been run to the mines, reducing the cost of transportation from $9 to $6 cents per mile. A tunnel 1,250 feet in length has been run into the Nellie since March 1st, and a gravity tramway constructed to carry the ore to the mine, and similar work is under way at the other mines. The first car load of ore shipped from the Nellie netted $807, and the first from the Mineral Point $1,885. The old newspaper man is not sorry he forsook his profession and became a miner.
