Judgment in the foreclosure of a mortgage on the Adelaide Hotel at San Diego, Cal., has been rendered and the sale of the property ordered. The amount involved was $16,370.

The complaint against Barker Charles W. Walters, of Waukegan, Wis., charging him with having in period exactly ninety days from April 6 to April 6, illegally filed, knowing it to be false, has been dismissed.

The North Idaho Agricultural association, says the Grangeville Nez Perce, at a recent meeting in Lewiston, resolved to publish the fact that sheep infected with pests are being shipped into the country, and that purchasers should not receive them until they have been examined by the official inspector, as they are liable to be condemned and destroyed.

Billie Patton, aged twelve years, was nearly killed with pistol powder on Wednesday at Silver City, Idaho. Some boys had gone to Grape creek fishing and used a tube only a few inches long, with terrible results. The boy's left hand was blown off, the thumb of his right hand blown and his eye is supposed to be gone.

United States Attorney Judd, of Utah, says that the story men are not popular, remarks the Hailey (Idaho) Times. Judd is a Democratic Utah man, the 3rd uncle of the son, married Abel, the Bishoprinkers, an impromptu conflict has arisen, whereby the two, cousins, doing only the grow so closely that they practically destroy the range for many years.

Dick Carlston, for several years a student at Tillotson academy at Trinidad, Colo., has not nearly left his parents unknown, and now there is a warrant out for his arrest, charging him with larceny. He is alleged to have issued several checks in the aggregate amount of $70, one of the signatures forged being that of his best friend, Prof. H. G. Gordon, of the academy.

Rev. C. H. Hobart of the First Reformed church at Port Jervis, N. Y., gave a sermon for the Industrial army last Sunday, but as the army had moved on to the Public Square he delivered it to the regular parishioners, upon "That's the Way the Money Goes." The reverend speaker, who is a staunch protectionist, declared that Cleveland's pay came to least a million dollars for offices and less than $100,000 for religion.

Last Friday two men called at Johnson's Hotel, in Bly, Ore., and demanded breakfast. After finishing it they put a silver dollar, and when Johnson was trying with the coin one man drew a revolver under the same and called upon him to open the safe. Johnson did so, and handed over the contents, which amounted to about $100. The robbers mounted their horses and fled, followed by a posse from Bly, and on Sunday were overtaken near Lake View, where a battle took place between the outlaws and the posse, and resulted in the capture of the outlaws after several shots were fired.

The Boise, Idaho Statesman says—The Board of Pardons has pardoned D. Boone Clark, who, on April 18, 1892, was sent to the penitentiary from Owyhee county for four years for cattle stealing. Since Clark's incarceration he has given the officers information which enabled them to break up a gang of cattle and horsethieves that had been operating in southwestern Idaho for years. Largely on this account executive clemency was exercised in the case. The pardon was signed by the Governor after Judge Stockslager, prosecuting attorney, Sheriff Hoagland, who built he was tried, and others.

Dan Heymanson, for well known Boise business man, has invented a patent for an ingenious invention of an called a "fly screen," says the Idaho Daily Statesman. The idea of the invention is to supply a screen door such as will not be filled with dirt or sweepings when the doors are opened. The screen is fixed to the door in a manner similar to the adjustment of the old screen. In Mr. Heymanson's patent there is a string spring, which, when the door is moved, pushes a plate up into the opening even with the floor, thus preventing any dirt from getting into the socket. Mr. Heymanson says he has already received substantial offers for an invention.

Considerable comment has been caused among the local banks at Oakland, Cal., by a resolution likely passed by the city council calling upon the city clerk to furnish the council the details of handling from $400,000 to $500,000 in public funds, upon which they pay no interest, they should give something in return for the privilege, and suggesting that they continue to be the bank for the municipality. The resolution was sent to the several banks and has been the subject of much discussion by our boards of directors. It is understood the banks claim there is little profit in handling the city's funds, as they have to employ the treasurer to a heavy bond and hold the money subject to call. The city charter requires the board of public works to open a vault for the use of the banks in the public funds, but so far it has neglected to do so. The city is therefore without any safe deposit for the public funds. Besides this, it appears that the conditions of both the city and county treasurers are largely bankers, and if the money were taken from them all with them they might withdraw.

F. M. Garrett has been pardoned by the governor of California. In January, 1893, he was sent to San Quentin by a Los Angeles court for ten years for criminal relations with his daughter. The principal witness against him was this daughter, who swore to the complaint upon which he was convicted. The girl, whose name is withheld, in a statement made and sworn to before a notary public, has stated that she perjured herself at the time of the trial, and that she sent her father to prison in order to screen her lover. A short time prior to the arrest of Mr. Garrett, he and his daughter fled, owing to a complaint charging Justice Sidgewick with seduction, and an attempt at criminal assault. Sidgewick was arrested, and pleaded not guilty. Immediately upon learning of his arrest he procured a carriage, and, driving to where Mary Garrett was sleeping, he informed her he must marry him. As there was now the wife of the prisoner she was not unwilling, without another word, and the case was dismissed. On the day of the dismissal, in order to screen her paramour, she swore to a complaint in which she stated that when she had left home was false, and that her father was the guilty party.

A Detroit man who had for the last several years been hunting lunatics, and who has made a fortune out of the business, said: "Do the lunatics ever escape? Well, I guess they do. I have lost quite a number in my time. I had a lunatic in my place one night last week. He was a very quiet fellow, and I had no idea he was anything but sane. He was with me for a few days, and I thought he was all right. He was a good hand at work, and I had no idea he was crazy
