PAUL'S AWAKENING.

"Mr. Williams, one moment, please."

"What is it, sir?"

"Mr. Williams," with another chilly frown, "we have laughed owing to matters of which you are perfectly as well aware as we, that we will not need you any longer. As soon as you can secure employment elsewhere we shall expect you to resign your position with us."

"Really sir—don't—don't—I—I—" was the reply. "Have you discovered any errors in the books?"

"None at all—none at all. We would be perfectly willing to forget and forgive your beauty and proficiency as an accountant. What I refer to is an entirely different thing.

"The fact is, we have found that you are heavily indebted in various parts of the city, much more than we deem safe and in one respect to be devoid of every where you have considerable accounts standing for some time have applied to us to secure them. This we cannot do."

"I think that this thing has—has been exaggerated," stammered the young man. "This is—you can have no other reason for wishing to discharge me I will go at once."

And then Paul Williams, willing as people always do who have not with the penalty of their indiscretion, that he had been dealt with unjustly, walked away.

Almost unconsciously he bent his steps toward a distant hill, whereon lay the city cemetery, and half an hour later he was walking up the hill with long, energetic strides, totally indifferent to the fact that the dust of his boots was destroying the polish of his shapely shoes which that very morning he had put on with so much care.

Paul Williams was a man of five and twenty, and for four years had held the position from which he had now been so suddenly dismissed.

Though he had no habits which could have been called really bad, he unfortunately possessed traits of character which kept him from succeeding as his friends had just reason to expect. He was one of the members of a band of young men who, though not dissipated, had formed the dangerous habit of spending money as fast or faster than they earned it.

Some two years before he had begun to pay his attentions to a young lady, who was now his betrothed, and whom most of all not to appear worth to the eyes of the woman he loved he had often made presents and spent money upon, for which she would have accepted him just as much, perhaps more, if he had kept his purse closed.

The young man might not have come to grief had it not been for another habit more seductive and infinitely more dangerous than all the others—the possible of running into debt heedlessly and without thought. It had already been a failing with him, but within a year it had grown stronger than ever.

All these things presented themselves to Paul Williams in their true light, for the first time as he sat alone in the office cemetery. After a long, bitter hour he had the action of his employers, harsh as it might seem, was not without cause.

First of all he would draw what money he had in the bank, and as far as possible pay what money he owed, and then he would go away from Jamesport and try to find something to do which would enable him to pay the rest.

Two hours later Paul Williams sat in his room with a package of bills, on each of which was the unfavorable letter "c." on one hand and on the other a roll of banknotes. All told, he was in debt fifty.

Then he turned and counted the bills before him. There was less than $100, a little more than half what he owed.

After a long, dreary hour, one more pallid out on the street, and visiting each of his creditors paid what he could, until not a dollar remained in his pocket.

"Paul," said the junior member of the firm as he handed him a check, "I'm sincerely sorry about this thing. It was a vexatious business from beginning to end, and if I could have had my way about it, old boy, it would not have happened. I wished a friend up in Wisconsin, who wrote you some time since, for an assistant bookkeeper, to know if the place was already filled. I could find a capital man for him. I have just received an answer, which says, 'Let him come at once.' So if you want to go you are not out all around. Will you go?"

"I will go at sunrise—tonight," was the prompt reply.

Paul's hardest task still lay before him—to see his intended wife and to tell her all. The young man told his story openly and frankly, omitting nothing and extenuating nothing.

He told of the opportunities that he had lost him and of the sacrifices he was determined to make until he had paid every cent, but there would be a stain upon his name, and if she wished she was free to break the engagement between them at once.

But if he had thought that she would take such a step he was destined to be happily disappointed, for her reply was:

"Paul, although I have found it a hard time that something like this was going to happen, I don't want to be free from you, because—because I love you. Go away, do the best you can and, even what may, know that there is one who thinks you and is waiting for you."

When a year had passed, he had paid everything and was beginning to save. Besides he had dropped all his foolish ways and habits and became in every way more manly and independent.

One day near the close of his second year the young bookkeeper and his employer were talking together when the latter said:

"Paul, I am thinking of taking in a partner. My business is growing so fast that it needs two as added to it, and I must some one that thoroughly understands it. Have you been able to save money since you came to me? You made, for you earlier days exceptionally liberal."

At first the young man blushed and seemed slightly confused, but the thought flashed through his mind that his employer, in a few words how he had come to have obtained and by what way the most of his money had been spent since that time.

"This is a confidence, sir, which I regard as sacred, and I cannot tell it, but I assure that you have the right chief to you."

Paul Williams is now the master of a goodly home and he is the man he would. No far has not forgotten the bitter experience of his youth, and the knowledge that some other young man will be in the debtor of his son—Exchange.

A Bold, Bad Man.

The phrase "A bold, bad man," now seldom, however, and more belongs to obsolete language of "The Faerie Queene" or of "Pi."

A bold, bad man that Cupid is only of poisonous tongue, profane of language and blind sight.—Philadelphia Magazine.

The Knew of Nothing That Can Compare with the

Graefenberg Pills

As a FAMILY PILL.

They are entirely mild, but exceedingly effective.

THE BEST HEADACHE PILL.

GRAEFENBERG

An infallible remedy for all FEMALE COMPLAINTS. Price $1.00 per bottle. CURES WEAKNESS, NERVOUSNESS and GENERAL DEBILITY. This remarkable preparation is the only reliable remedy for the distressing diseases of women. Sold by Druggists. Graefenberg Co. 111 Chambers St., N.Y.

CATHOLICON.

Sold by Z. C. M. I. and all wholesale druggists.

Graefenberg Co.

111 Chambers St., N. Y.

ASSESSMENT NOTICE.

Salt Lake Bonanza Company.

Office Rm. 11-12 Main St., Salt Lake City, Utah.

NOTICE IS HEREBY GIVEN THAT at a meeting of the board of directors of the Salt Lake Bonanza Company, held on the 11th day of January, 1895, an assessment called No. 6, in place of No. 5, previously levied per share, was levied on the capital stock of the company, payable immediately to W. S. Williams, treasurer, Rm. 11-12 Main Street, Salt Lake City, Utah. Any stock upon which this assessment shall remain unpaid on the 25th day of February, 1895, will be delinquent and advertised for sale, and unless previously paid will be sold at public auction, on Saturday, March 16, 1895, to pay the assessment, at the office of the undersigned, Rm. 11-12 Main St., Salt Lake City, Utah.

W. S. WILLIAMS, Treasurer.

ASSESSMENT NOTICE.

North Point Consolidated Irrigation Company.

Location of office and principal place of business, Salt Lake City, Utah.

NOTICE IS HEREBY GIVEN THAT at a meeting of the board of directors of the North Point Consolidated Irrigation Company, held on the 11th day of January, 1895, an assessment called No. 6, in place of No. 5, previously levied per share, was levied on the capital stock of the company, payable immediately to W. S. Williams, treasurer, Rm. 11-12 Main Street, Salt Lake City, Utah. Any stock upon which this assessment shall remain unpaid on the 25th day of February, 1895, will be delinquent and advertised for sale, and unless previously paid will be sold at public auction, on Saturday, March 16, 1895, to pay the assessment, at the office of the undersigned, Rm. 11-12 Main St., Salt Lake City, Utah.

W. S. WILLIAMS, Treasurer.

LEGAL NOTICE.

In the Probate Court, in and for Salt Lake County, Territory of Utah.

In the matter of the estate of George Hudson, deceased.

NOTICE IS HEREBY GIVEN THAT [illegible] Kansas, executor of the last will and testament of said deceased, has filed his final account of his administration of said estate and petition for final distribution of said estate, and that the Tuesday, the [illegible] day of January, A. D. 1895, at the hour of 10 o'clock a. m., at the court room of said court, in the County Court House, in Salt Lake City, and County, Utah Territory, has been duly appointed by the Judge of said court, for the settlement of said account and hearing said petition, for distribution of said estate, at which time and place any person interested in said estate may appear and contest said account and said petition, and the heirs of said deceased are hereby notified to appear and show cause why said account should not be settled and said petition granted and final distribution made to people entitled thereto.

Dated, January 10, A. D. 1895.

[illegible] STANTON,
Clerk of Probate Court.

LEGAL NOTICE.

In the Probate Court, in and for Salt Lake County, Territory of Utah.

In the matter of the estate of William Howard, deceased.

NOTICE IS HEREBY GIVEN THAT [illegible] administrator of the estate of said William Howard, deceased, has rendered his final account of his administration of said estate, and has filed his petition for final distribution of said estate, and that the Tuesday, the [illegible] day of January, A. D. 1895, at the hour of 10 o'clock a. m., at the court room of said court, in the County Court House, in Salt Lake City, and County, Utah Territory, has been duly appointed by the Judge of said court, for the settlement of said account and hearing said petition for distribution of said estate, at which time and place any person interested in said estate may appear and contest said account and said petition, and the heirs of said deceased are hereby notified to appear and show cause why said account should not be settled and said petition granted and final distribution made to people entitled thereto.

Dated, January 10, A. D. 1895.

[illegible] STANTON,
Clerk of Probate Court.

LEGAL NOTICE.

In the Probate Court, in and for Salt Lake County, Territory of Utah.

In the matter of the estate of Jacob Altstatt.

Order to hear petition asking that estate of said deceased be sold by administrator and others.

UPON READING AND FILING THE PETITION of [illegible] administrator of said estate, praying for an order to sell the real estate of said deceased, it is ordered, that the heirs of said deceased, and all persons interested in said estate, appear before the Probate Court of Salt Lake County, at the court room of said court, in Salt Lake City, on the [illegible] day of January, A. D. 1895, at the hour of 10 o'clock a. m., to show cause why an order should not be granted to said administrator to sell the real estate of said deceased for the payment of debts, expenses of last sickness and expenses of administration of said estate.

It is further ordered that a copy of this order be published for four successive weeks prior to said time of hearing, in the Deseret Evening News, a newspaper printed and published in said Salt Lake County.

Dated, January 10, A. D. 1895.

[illegible] STANTON,
Clerk of Probate Court.

TRUSTEE'S SALE NOTICE.

WHEREAS, SAMUEL R. GALLOWAY and [illegible] of Salt Lake, County of Salt Lake, [illegible] Utah, by their mortgage dated the [illegible] day of [illegible], 1890, and recorded in the office of the Recorder of Salt Lake County, Utah, in Book [illegible] of Mortgages, page [illegible], conveyed to the undersigned, [illegible] in trust, the following described real estate and premises situated in Salt Lake County, Utah, to wit: [illegible] to secure the payment of one promissory note in the sum of [illegible] Dollars, payable [illegible] after date, with interest thereon at the rate of [illegible] per cent per annum, payable [illegible] and [illegible] per cent per annum on the principal sum of [illegible] Dollars from date thereof until the principal sum of [illegible] Dollars and the principal sum of [illegible] Dollars and the principal sum of [illegible] Dollars and