DRAGONRIDERS writing for publication are requested to write on one side of the paper only. No notice can be taken of anonymous communications. Correspondents' names must in all instances accompany their communications, not necessarily for publication, but as a guarantee of reliability.

THEATRICAL.—A most attractive bill, including variety to suit almost all tastes, is announced for Saturday evening. The beautiful little comedy "A Morning Call" opens the performance with Miss Ince and Mr. Graham as Mrs. Huntington and Sir Edward. Then follows the beautiful three act drama, "Madeline," or the "Faint Heart," with Miss Ince in the title role, with Messrs. McKenzie, Lindsay, Graham, Hardie, Miss Adams, Mrs. Clawson, Mrs. Browning, and others in the cast. A new comedy, "Shall's & Browns," concludes, so that everybody will have enough for their money and some to spare.

ARREST OF STAGE ROBBERS.—From the Boise Democrat of the 5th inst., we learn of the arrest of several persons charged with robberies of Wells, Fargo & Co's stages, on the northern line. On the 25th ult., two men, named Melville Bailey and John Billings, were arrested in Walla Walla. From Walla Walla the officers proceeded to Grande Ronde Valley, Oregon, and on the 25th arrested Dr. Le Barre, Jim Wheeler, a man named McFar, and two brothers named Johnson. Procuring a requisition from the Governor of Oregon they proceeded to Boise City, Idaho, and aided by Marshal Atwood and Deputy Marshal Robbins, arrested J. T. Quaker, a former deputy U. S. Marshal of the Territory. They went thence to Silver City and arrested R. Savage, (no relation of our Charles R. Savage, of Cleveland and Goodman, the last named having also been a deputy U. S. Marshal in Idaho last Winter and Spring. The arrangements had been made for some time for these arrests, which have been made from all classes. The Democrat says: "A regular organized band has been in operation for some time in Idaho, and extending their operations into Utah, Montana and Oregon, stage robbing, murdering and horse-stealing. The officers have been on the lookout, and have at last worked up the case to a successful termination, as these arrests attest."

ARRIVED.—Hon. C. C. Wilson, Chief Justice of Utah, arrived by stage from the East last night.

"PLUCK."—We heard a circumstance today that shows considerable "pluck" in the young man who is the hero of the story. Some little time ago William Addams, brother to a gentleman who resides in this city, had a pair of mules stolen from him about fifty miles this side of Benton, Wyoming. He started in pursuit alone and on foot, and having been gone for several days, those who knew of the undertaking concluded he was killed by the savages, and so reported it. But after some time longer he turned up, having the mules with him. He had followed the Indians on foot a hundred miles, although nearly starved, and had captured his mules. He is about twenty-one years old.

CALLED.—We were very pleased to have call this afternoon from Mr. Hanson, representing the firm of Taylor & Wright, wholesale grocers, Chicago, and Mr. Rogers, representing the firm of Griswold & Co., dealers in teas, coffees and fancy groceries, also of Chicago. They arrived by stage last night, having ridden on the U. P. R. R. for 100 miles this side of Benton, the present terminus, and made the stage part of the trip in two days and a half. Mr. Rogers visits the city for the first time. Mr. Hanson renews acquaintanceships. Both gentlemen are on business, in which we wish them success, and a pleasant sojourn in our city.

OPPOSITE SIDES.—We have submitted to perusal "The Lost Cause" by E. A. Pollard, and "The American Conflict," by Horace Greeley, each of which, though, in a very different manner, treat upon the same subject—the great rebellion which caused such a terrible expenditure of blood and means throughout the nation. Each work introduces the same facts, to a great extent, but views them from opposite and partisan stand-points, and it seems as if the reader who wishes to arrive at facts, should study both works to be correctly informed. In a candid, though brief review, this much requires to be said.

The author of "The Lost Cause" is a Southerner, well acquainted with Southern history, feelings and desires. He was editor of the Southern Examiner during the war, was personally acquainted with the leaders of the rebellion, and in his lot with the Confederacy, and of course believed secession was the right of the South, though in his work he admits it to be a "lost cause." After advancing the arguments most popular with the South in favor of their right to secede and form a separate government, he reviews the causes which precipitated the struggle, the election of Abraham Lincoln, the formation of a Southern government, and the reasons which induced Beauregard to bombard and capture Fort Sumter. Then having traced the course of arms until the cause for which the Confederacy had organized was lost, with the surrender of the Southern armies. Many points of great interest connected with the causes which led to the rebellion and the prosecution of the rebellion are treated upon from a Southern stand-point—the John Brown raid, the killing of Colonel Ellsworth, the Battle of Gettysburg, the Andersonville prison, Fort Pillow, &c.; and the battles, movements of troops, influence of the weather, the capture of Vicksburg, the capture of Fort Fisher, the capture of the ironclad USS Monitor, and the capture of the USS Merrimack, are elaborated and set upon in a masterly manner. The work is well written, and presents in a clear and perspicuous manner, the Southern view of the great struggle which convulsed the Republic for over four years. The work is beautifully printed, on good paper, and is embellished with a number of the most eminent men of the Confederacy, is complete in one volume, containing over 800 pages of reading matter.

"The American Conflict" presents the opposite historical view. Starting with the position that slavery has been the cause of the rebellion, but of previous troubles and signs of secession, in the Republic, Mr. Greeley goes back as far as the early settlement of the colonies and traces slavery through its various workings from that time until South Carolina passed the ordinance of secession. He has taken great pains to amass together a large amount of documentary matter in support of the position he assumes, and a large portion of his first volume contains much valuable information on the growth of the abolition party with its workings, and biographical sketches of the most noted of its leaders, from which, however, he modestly excludes himself. In approaching the time when the great "American Conflict" became actual and national war he treats of the Kansas-Nebraska difficulty, the John Brown raid, and other deeds and circumstances which marked the spirit of the two opposing parties, sparks which preceded the vast conflagration that blazed with such destructive fury. Copious extracts from speeches, documents and letters are introduced to show the opinions of leading men, with the influence which was thus exercised over the great parties of the nation. The battles and events of the war, and the policy pursued are dealt upon with the known ability of the author and both volumes are profusely illustrated with steel portraits of the leading men on both sides, and with a number of scenes of the war, while in typography and finish they present a beautiful appearance.

These interesting works are for sale only by subscription, and can be got from Mr. O. H. Egan, bookseller, of this city. They will make a valuable addition to any library.

THE IMMIGRATION.—By letter from Captain Gillespie to President Young, with which we have been courteously favored, we learn that his train passed Fort Bridger on the 8th. All the company were well, except a few who had diarrhoea slightly, although there were no serious cases. The trip has been a very prosperous one, and the cattle have gained in flesh by the way. He had left for Captain Mumford's train thirty-one sacks of flour, twelve hundred pounds of beef, and a few sacks of peaches. There was one death in the train, on Little Sandy, that of an old lady, named Mary Clayfield, 71 years of age.

Captain Gillespie has a stove and a box or two in his train, for which there is no owner in his company. He will bring them carefully into the city.
