MINERS BADLY HURT. One Has Skull Fractured and Another Has Eye Blown Out.

Two miners were injured in the Highland Boy mine at Bingham yesterday and both are now lying at the Keogh-Wright hospital in a very serious condition. Andrew Newcomb, one of the men, was working in the shaft when an ore bucket and six feet of timber fell upon him from a distance of 15 feet. His skull was badly fractured, but it is thought he will recover. He is a young married man, 26 years of age. The other victim is Lewis Smith, who nearly had his head blown off by a premature blast. He had just put in a charge of powder and lit the fuse when the whole thing exploded, the cause, it is thought, being a defective fuse. The explosion rendered Smith unconscious and he lay for several hours before the accident was discovered and he was carried out of the mine and medical aid summoned. One of his eyes is almost blown out and his face is marked almost beyond recognition. His chances for recovery are said to be rather poor.
